SUMMARY.

The death of the Japanese Emperor is announced.

Many pathetic demonstrations throughout Japan followed the announcement of the Emperor's death.

Interviewed after the sculling race, Barry said that after holding Arnst for the first mile he had no doubt of winning.

Among those who congratulated Barry on his magnificent victory was Sir George Reid, the High Commissioner.

The defeat of Arnst came as a great surprise in Sydney. His supporters are ready to back him for another race.

In the test cricket match between England and Australia, W. Rhodes was 92 not out at the end of the first day's play.

The rest of the English players failed to master the bowling of the Australians.

Sir George Reid has been interviewed in London on the question of Imperial defence.

"Each self-governing Dominion," said the High Commissioner, "must be left free to make its own response."

A large Belfast firm has dismissed all Roman Catholic employees, owing to the dismissal of Orangemen by Harland and Wolff.

A Royal Commission has been appointed by the Home Government to inquire into the question of liquid fuel for warships.

A commission has been appointed to investigate the Putumayo outrages in Peru, with a view to punishing the offenders.

The British Medical Association has agreed to grant Australia a constitution which will secure all the reforms required here.

Work is now active at the London Docks, though many of the strikers on returning found their places filled.

"We dare not adhere to Saturday's decision," says the union secretary. "The men will have our blood if we advise them to surrender."

Two boys have confessed to murdering a man in Tennessee by pouring whisky and petrol over him and lighting it.

Miss Fanny Durack, of Sydney, won the 100 yards invitation ladies' scratch race at the Manchester swimming carnival.

In a race for the 130 yards running championship at Manchester, Donaldson (Victoria) defeated Holway (America).

Owing to the death of the Japanese Emperor flags were flown at halfmast from the Town Hall and other public buildings yesterday.

The Governor-General has despatched a message to Japan, expressing Australia's sympathy.

A motion of no-confidence in the State Government was moved by Mr. Wade, leader of the State Opposition yesterday.

Mr. Wade charged the Government with reckless finance, and with being incompetent to manage the affairs of the country.

We had had, he said, "a nine months' spell of financial recklessness, which was never equalled before in this State."

Replying to Mr. Wade, the Premier said the charges made had already been exploded. The Government was not extravagant.

Mr. Nielsen's report on his mission to America was tabled in the State Assembly yesterday.

In the opinion of Mr. Nielsen, there is an absolute unlimited market in America for many of Australia's products.

A general scheme of immigration to secure a drift of population from the United States and Canada is recommended in the report.

The Attorney-General gave notice yesterday of a new Standing Order governing the election of Speaker.

Representatives of the Tasmanian, Queensland, and Victorian Governments conferred yesterday regarding the surrender of powers to the Commonwealth.

In the House of Representatives yesterday the Committee's report on the Royal Commission Bill was adopted.

The Minister for Defence has called for a report respecting the resignations from the Australian Garrison Artillery.

The Massey Government in New Zealand will meet to-day for the first time since the Mackenzie Government was defeated.

An elective Upper House and an independent board to control the Civil service are proposed by the Massey Government.

The first interstate congress of the National Council of Women was opened yesterday by Lady Chelmsford.

Among matters women should interest themselves in, said Lady Chelmsford, were education and the conditions of factory life.

Lady Denman presided over the afternoon session, and referred at some length to the question of wife desertion.

Addressing the New Zealand Farmers' Union, the president, Mr. Wilson, referred to the necessity for combination.

Referring to Australian farmers, he said, "Their danger is that freehold is threatened, and their fight will be strenuous."

Decision has been reserved in New Zealand in the case against the Colonial Sugar Company under the Commercial Trusts Act.

A novel suggestion has been made by Melbourne enthusiasts in connection with the Quinlan Opera Company.

It having been found impossible for the company to go to Melbourne, it is proposed to run a special excursion to Sydney.

The High Commissioner has been informed that there is a good market in Russia for Australian butter and fruit.

English mails by the R.M.S. Osterley were delivered in Sydney yesterday, a day later than usual.

Figures relating to his State enterprises were laid on the table of the Assembly by the Minister for Works yesterday.

The capital expenditure on the brickworks, limeworks, metal quarries, timber depot, and joinery works was stated at £140,828.

Honorary degrees are to be conferred on Mr. James Bryce and Sir Samuel Griffith by Queensland University on August 13.

The Postmaster-General, Mr. Frazer, became suddenly ill on Monday night, and is now in a private hospital.

The new Bishop of Melanesia, Rev. Cecil J. Wood, who arrived here yesterday, aims at developing a native ministry.

A witness before the Queensland Meat Commission said he did not think the public were sufficiently safeguarded from tuberculosis.

The area under wheat in Victoria is officially estimated at 2,565,000 acres.

Extensive robberies of sheep are reported by graziers in Victoria.

Rev. D. Hennessy, of Richmond (Vic.), has won the second prize of £400 in Hodder and Stoughton's story competition.

Damage to the extent of £20,000 was done by a fire at a sash factory at Fitzroy, Melbourne, yesterday.

Seventy cadets appeared at the Glebe Court yesterday, charged with failing to attend the required number of drills. Over 60 were fined £5 and costs.

At the Water Police Court yesterday, 24 men were fined £5 each, or two months' imprisonment, for playing "two-up."

Speaking at the Congress, Miss Rose Scott advocated the representation of women on the University Senate and on juries.

Miss Scott also said that the legal right of a woman to a part of her husband's salary should be established.

Splendid assays have been made in connection with the "mountain of copper" recently reported to have been found in the Cloncurry district.

A Nelson (N.Z.) lady has given £6000 towards the endowment of a bishopric there.

Weather Forecast.—Further showers on the coast north of Sydney; otherwise fine, and becoming milder; winds tending northerly inland; squally south-easterly on the north coast, with rough seas.

SUNSHINE FOLLOWS RAIN.

"The world goes up, and the world goes down, and sunshine follows rain."—Chas. Kingsley.

But at present sunshine follows rain in rather a half-hearted, desultory fashion, as though the Sun had retired for a while from any active concern in the world's affairs. Therefore,

ANTHONY HORDERNS' SALE
BRINGS SUNSHINE AND HAPPINESS
BARGAINS FOR EVERYONE.

MANY of the LONDON newspapers publish ANNOUNCEMENTS that FAVOURITE and fashionable WATERING PLACES experienced so many MINUTES of SUNSHINE on the PRECEDING day. IN THIS SUNNY land GLOOMY weather is the EXCEPTION, not the RULE, yet, there has been a SUCCESSION of DISMAL days, days almost WITHOUT sunshine, and RAIN for the month that comes NEARLY up to the WETTEST July on record.

The RAIN ushered in the OPENING day of ANTHONY HORDERNS' SALE, but it made no APPRECIABLE difference in the CROWDS that THRONGED every DEPARTMENT; keen buyers recognise it is because it is the BIGGEST and most ATTRACTIVE SHOPPING event in the LAND. SUNSHINE and HAPPINESS has been CARRIED into THOUSANDS of HOMES by those PHENOMENAL PRICE PRUNERS.

CRACKERJACK GOOD COMEDY—

GEORGE RANDOLPH CHESTER'S Stories of Wallingford sold more magazines in America than anything from the pen of any American author in years.

GEO. M. COHAN'S Comedy of Wallingford's adventures in Battlesburg provoked more mirth than all the productions of a dozen New York seasons rolled into one.

And Interpreted by
GEORGE MARLOW LTD.'S
Galaxy of Brilliant Dramatic Artists.

SOME PRESS OPINIONS:—

The S.M. HERALD says:—Another contribution to Australian dramatic literature was submitted at the Adelphi on Saturday evening, when Mr. Wilton Welch's play, "THE GIRL WHO LOVED A SOLDIER," was produced with a wealth of stage effects which went far to make it a success. It must be conceded that Mr. Welch has improved upon many of the imported dramas of a similar kind which have been staged here with the London Hall-mark of success.

The Daily Telegraph says:—If the verdict of the audience means anything, the new play is assured of a good run. At the close the author was called before the curtain, and made a happy little speech.

The Evening News says:—There was a wealth of local colour about the setting of the new play, "THE GIRL WHO LOVED A SOLDIER." It is replete with interesting situations, and a thrilling part was reached in the blowing-up and sinking of a submarine in Sydney Harbour. This scene was particularly realistic.

The Sun says:—The scene is laid in Sydney, and the view of familiar buildings and landscapes was warmly welcomed by the big audience. The author received an enthusiastic call at the conclusion of the play.

TO-DAY, TO-DAY,

COLONIAL THEATRE NO. 1,
"THE OUTLAW."

A strong story of prospectors' life, in which some very realistic scenes are shown. A pretty little love story, interwoven with the more stirring events of the play, forms an excellent foil for the strong action that marks the encounters between the hero of the story and the man who, befriended by him, betrays his every confidence.

TO-DAY, TO-DAY,

COLONIAL THEATRE NO. 2,
"HIS FATHER'S SON."

An old theme from a new angle.
The story of a wild son, who, after being cast out by his father, goes into the world of business, and, after making a signal success, returns in time to save the old home.
One of those life stories that make kinder hearts and generous feelings larger.

THE NATIONAL COUNCIL OF WOMEN.

It was a pity that every woman who is interested in her fellow creatures was not at the inaugural meeting of the Interstate Congress of the National Council of Women yesterday morning to hear Lady Chelmsford's eloquent address on the aims and work of the National Council of Women. There would be no more questions of "what is the council and what does it do," for the speaker, who is deeply interested in the work, and has all the facts concerning it at her command, put the case in a clearer and more convincing way than it has ever been put publicly before. She explained how the council benefits, not so much the societies which are affiliated to it, but the whole community, for it is, as it were, a clearing house for women's knowledge, collecting and disseminating all available facts and statistics affecting women. To the council come women engaged in every kind of work affecting their sex, and indirectly the community; each brings her store of knowledge and her personal point of view; and each learns of other work and other methods, and thus acquires a deeper knowledge and broader outlook for herself. One had only to look round at the women present to realise that the National Council is a living force. There were represented women of different ages, different classes, and different interests; but they were all bound together by one common tie, and their rallying point was the National Council. One had but to glance at the business paper to see how wide a field their interests covered, and to appreciate the reason for Lady Chelmsford's suggestion that a programme of special work to be done should be drawn up each year, for with so many women and so many interests, it is inevitable that at times there should seem to be urgent need to deal with several at once, and the only way to accomplish really good work is to do one thing at a time, and to do it thoroughly.

Lady Chelmsford laid great stress on the need of more associates and more standing committees to deal in detail with special subjects, for the object of the whole council is rather to debate and discuss and inspire, than to carry out detailed work. And she made an eloquent appeal to all thinking women to join the council, both for their own sakes and the sake of the benefit they can confer by their personal knowledge and experience. The National Council should be able to voice the feelings of the women of N.S.W., as it does in many other countries, but it is only by all thinking women becoming part of the council that that voice can be raised. And it is only by learning what other women, and other lands are doing that a true perspective of the value of any special work can be obtained.

There are in Sydney alone thousands of women, each with her own pet scheme for righting the wrongs of the world, but losing much of her force by the fact that she is working in ignorance of other people's efforts. In the National Council she will learn of those other efforts, and gain many suggestions for her own schemes. In the country there are also many women anxious to accomplish something for humanity, but uncertain how to set about it. From the National Council they will find inspiration and help and understanding. Indeed, it is extraordinary that there are any women interested in public affairs who do not avail themselves of the wonderful help and support of the National Council.

The congress, which is being held in the King's Hall, Phillip-street, is open to the public, and all women who have any interest at all in their fellows should take this opportunity of hearing some of the papers and discussions. This morning the Charity Organisation of Queensland and Victoria will be fully treated, a subject of burning importance; and this afternoon the interesting topic of picture shows will be dealt with. To-morrow the work of the National Councils in the different States will be discussed. At each session there is sure to be much interesting discussion, for the speakers are all women who know their subject thoroughly, and there will be much to learn from them.

MELBOURNE NOTES.

The desirability of making changes in the Neglected Children's Department, the Midwifery Bill, and the Apprentice Board (also the Charities' Board), was placed before the Premier by a deputation of ladies from the National Council of Women. Dr. Edith Barrett said that the work of getting a woman on to the board would be undertaken in the near future. Mrs. Charles Strong, vice-president, urged the council to take action to further the movement in favour of providing proper houses for the poor. Miss Michaelis, secretary, moved that the council send in a resolution supporting the third Hague Peace Conference. The International Council has worked since 1897 in the cause of national arbitration. In regard to the Neglected Children's Department, Mr. Watt expressed himself sympathetically. He considered that a thorough classification of children was necessary, for at present children with criminal tendencies and those who were merely unfortunate and deserted were housed indiscriminately. Something should be done towards segregating the feeble-minded. With the other objects of the deputation practical sympathy was promised.

At fortnightly intervals the Australian Institute of Domestic Economy gives demonstrations on subjects of educational value to members and friends. Scholarships for cooking, dressmaking, and millinery are offered. Amongst the results of the Institute's work are:—The establishment of the college, which is always full; the introduction of the teachers' diplomas in the Education Department, and for private teachers; the introduction of the certificate of housewifery; the delivery of 48 demonstrations (12 at four centres) each year for the general public; wider interest in the home arts and sciences generally; the establishment of a domestic economy scholarship fund, to help women to a new avocation; also benefits for teachers who demonstrate—one member who has a teachers' diploma is now earning £4 a week under the Government of South Australia, with the right to take private pupils. She was the winner of a scholarship for cooking.

The school committees, which have taken the place of the old-time boards of advice, have now passed the experimental stage, and well justified their existence. The committees in some cases have established a visiting day, once a quarter, to give parents and friends an opportunity to come along and see for themselves what work is being done. Co-operation between home and school life is sure to be productive of good results. Science apparatus, sewing machines, pianos, and pictures have been provided in many schools, as a result of concerts promoted by the school committees.

VERONICA.

FASHION AS SHE IS.

One is always conscious of a kind of optimistic feeling in the air when a fresh consignment of spring models for the new season comes round. This makes our spirits rise, and soar far above the more immediate considerations of the rain and damp weather. Whatever the vagaries of the weather may be, however, one cannot any longer delay the business of choosing spring goods.

If we can judge the spring fashions by the goods seen, then there are to be white coat suits this spring. Coats and skirts of all the soft white fabrics and with trimmings of black are favoured; in some cases a shade of apple-green is used for the trimming.

* * * * *

The new coats—not only in white, but in all colours and fabrics—have grown perceptibly longer at the back. They slope away from just below the waist-line in front to the middle of the back, and this line is usually followed out by an overskirt, or velvet ribbon, or folds on the skirt.

In coats and skirts the lines are veering away from the masculine model. The new models are losing severity, and have something very feminine about them. The two styles in coats which prevail the most are the lapped-over effect and the cutaway. One is quite as fashionable as the other. The revers are sometimes of the self-material, and at other times they are of corded silk or of the new Turkish towelling. The most favoured materials used for coats and skirts are the old-fashioned poplin and mohair, not forgetting the much-liked taffeta.

* * * * *

Crash towelling was brought into fashion by the use of ratine. There seems to be little doubt that this Turkish towelling will be one of the most popular materials for this spring. It has been used in a tentative way for blouses, collars, and cuffs, but we shall see whole costumes made of it. It is quite an ideal material, as it can be dyed in the most delightfully soft shades, being of a soft and absorbent texture. Turkish towelling takes the austere lines very well indeed, and it is likely to be seen as much as the taffetas. It appears under the name of Terry cloth, or Agaric cloth; but they both mean one and the same thing—"Turkish towelling."

Taffetas, of course, appear in all their glorified beauty, especially in shot effects. Other spot materials are in printed effects. The patterns are taken from Indian prints and Early Victorian styles. Everything new of the character is in the band block printed effects, and with the irregular outline.

Two materials are combined in a large percentage of the new frocks, silk and wool, silk and chiffon, two kinds of silk linen and muslin, eponge and fine cotton crepe or viole—in fact, there is no limit to the combinations.

* * * * *

The panier effects are clearly visible on the new gowns. Flaring suddenly out at the height of the knees, they have a somewhat odd appearance, with the underskirt clinging to the limbs. But the softer the materials used, the less conspicuous this will appear. In fact, the tendency is to reduce as much as possible the bulk of clothing, owing to the "bouffant" fashions which are coming in. To suppress one garment or combine it with another is the great aim. The new draperies must appear to be draped on the very thin. Skirts gain the increased width by the cluster of plaits set in at the side and back. They give great possibilities for widening the narrow skirt of last season. Some of the new skirts will have the hip yoke effect.

The high waist on many of the models continues, although there is an obvious tendency towards a rounded waist-line in the newest models. The skirt with the panel down the back should be avoided. The one that is fastened to the skirt from the waist to hem and held down by three buttons on each side is not so bad, but the half loose panel dates back to a definite day that is done.

On simple dresses made of the new silks for afternoon wear, yoke effects are seen on the corsage, and the long sleeves are slightly full, and bulge somewhat at the elbows; below they are drawn into light puffs.

Separate blouses of white crepe-de-chine are seen. A lovely blouse of this material had a double collar of heavy lace bordered by a two-inch band of tulle.

Another charming example in a novel blouse was of alternating bands of wide black and white lace insertion. A small flat collar of scarlet satin finished the neck. This dainty and uncommon blouse was fastened at the side with jet buttons.

Other new novelty blouses for wearing with the two-piece suit have a cutaway effect, beginning at the side front. Dresden ribbon in suitable colouring finishes off the revers, belt, and cuffs of the blouse.

* * * * *

The short sleeves are being replaced for spring time by long ones, that drop over the hand. Ruffles worn at the wrist add a daintiness to the sleeve. In fact, ruffles and ruches are to be the fads of the moment. Mousseline ruches which lie in flat knife plaitings around the neck have sometimes upstanding frills—others do not.

For neckwear the pleatings are often of net or fine lace. Jabots of all sizes are also to be much in vogue, the daintiest being fashioned in white tulle, which fabric seems to have leaped once more into favour. One can have a neat butterfly bow of white net or tulle, finished with a little knot of black velvet in the centre.

All the evening gowns have more or less of a train. The pretty trailing bits of material that constitute the so-called trains are a contrast to the majestic trains of other times. Sometimes a single breadth of material is lightly draped from the shoulder; or it may be plaited into a beading and attached to the belt at a rather high waist-line. In either case it swings free with the movement of the wearer, showing its dainty lining.

The lace flounce is considerably used. Usually a flat scant flounce is seen, but still a flounce. Some of the skirts show three section or three-flounce arrangements in front, while straight breadths of a veiling tunic fall on sides and back.

* * * * *

There is always a certain delightful expectation of what may be presented in the millinery line for the spring. These spring models are prettier and more attractive than they have been for many a year. Some of them are most charming, being without a hint of exaggeration in their construction.

Large Leghorns and Manilla straws are on the list of the favoured. The pretty and simple manner in which they are trimmed remind one of the styles of some years ago, when there was less exaggeration in the matter of fashion than there is now. There is a new soft picot straw, which is a relief to the tagal of last year. It folds and drapes and doubles into the most charming shapes, and has quite a soft and attractive effect against the face. Short taffetas and flowers play a role where the spring millinery is concerned. Ribbon also is greatly used as a means of decorating the spring hats. Many are fascinating bits of straw and ribbon. The colour combinations are wonderful. The brim is of straw, while the crown is a bewildering swirl of ribbon. Hats of straw so fine and supple that it is difficult to distinguish them from taffeta will be much favoured. Many of the small shapes will be worn for the spring. Then there are large hats, some with the brims turned back in front.

The bowler hats will also continue in popularity. Their low round crowns, unyielding brims, and their lack of trimming often rather harden the expression of the face; but they will be worn, because they are considered smart. The taffeta-gathered hat is suitable both to the young and to the mature. The upturned brim and the high trimming have a very smart effect. Flat hats with round, flat crowns, and rather broad brims, will be greatly seen this spring.

Fuchsia shades are among the popular alliances of colour. Red allied to purple will be visible in many combinations. Sulphur shades will also be called upon to take a part in the new millinery.

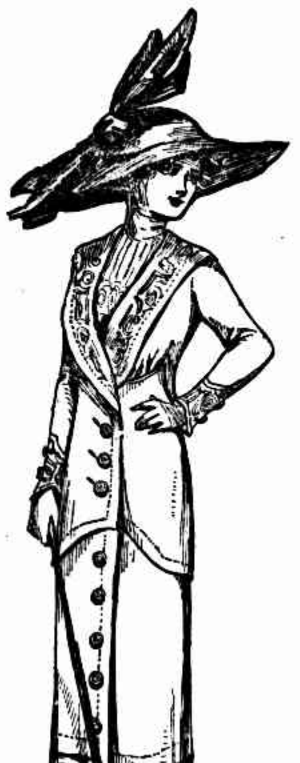
MAISIE.

WANTED, A HOSTEL.

"My daughter is anxious to enter the Teachers' Training College, but we do not like the idea of her living amongst strangers, and we have no friends in Sydney. Can you tell me if there is any recognised students' boarding-house or residential college where she could stay?" writes a woman from the country.

It is not the first letter of this kind we have received, and to this, as to all others, we have sadly to reply, "No; there is no such place"—an admission which fills us with shame; for it is a most humiliating thing to have to admit that in this big city, where thousands of pounds are spent every year upon education, there is absolutely no provision made by the State for the girls which it brings from all parts of the country to train at its Teachers' College; and when a mother inquires with anxious care where her daughter can stay during the years she is in training, she is met by the answer, "Anywhere she likes."

Most of the girls who come to the Training College are between 17 and 20. Many of them are from distant country parts, with no friends in Sydney beyond their fellow-students; and these girls go in ones and twos into boarding-houses, where there is no control over them, where there is absolutely no provision for study, where there are often other boarders, of both sexes, more or less desirable, where the simplest laws of hygiene are sometimes unknown—where, in short, there is everything to hamper them in their development as teachers.



A coat and skirt of whipcord. The plain revers, cuffs, and the hem of the skirt are heavily braided, and the buttons of the material are embroidered in silk, to harmonise with the braiding.

For it is not only in their classes and lecture-rooms that teachers are made. Mental ability and the power to impart knowledge is not all we ask of those who are to mould the younger generations. The girl who is to develop into an ideal teacher, capable of exercising a wholesome influence by force of her personality, must herself grow up in wholesome, refining surroundings. And the State does not provide these surroundings for its teachers in training.

The college at Blackfriars where classes are held is nothing short of a disgrace to the community. It is inadequate in every way, and set in a squalid neighbourhood, and the students, who are mostly at the impressionable age, when environment means so much, have very little that is lovely in their surroundings, although the members of the teaching staff, fully conscious of all this, do their best to supply the needs. However, there is every reason to hope that before many more years pass the long-discussed new training college will be an accomplished fact, and the most sanguine of us look forward to seeing it within the University grounds.

But, with all the talk of a new college, no plans have been made for a hostel for students, and apparently the girls, and boys, too, who attend the college in the future will live where and how they like, as they do at present. Everyone who knows anything at all of student life knows what a drawback this must be; the community spirit, which is so precious a thing, does not flourish under such conditions; the influence of the teaching staff is necessarily much reduced, and there cannot be the same incentive to study. It requires more concentration than the average girl or boy possesses to go steadily on with one's work while all around there are people audibly enjoying themselves.

We are spending a great deal upon education, but all that we spend will avail us little if we do not have the right teachers; and to produce the best teachers we must have the best surroundings. The students should have the companionship of cultured, sympathetic men and women in their leisure hours, not the promiscuous acquaintances of a fifth-rate boarding-house. Girls who are studying hard for examinations should have some responsible, thoughtful woman to see that they do not neglect their health; girls who are far away from their own homes often need the kindly counsel of an older woman.

In a hostel, with the right house-mother, girls would find all these things. We should have a more fully-qualified class of teachers; the mothers in far-off country parts would be relieved from anxiety about the welfare of their daughters, and the State would be freed from the charge that it takes no care of the young people entrusted to its keeping.

DEATH TRAPS.

"B. P." writes—Is there any reason why overhead bridges should not be put over the "death-trap" near the Central Railway Station, and over that other "death trap" at Circular Quay, near the wharfs for the Manly and Mosman boats? The steps could be low and broad, so that women and children could go up and down safely, and perhaps even lifts could be put at each end of the bridges to take passengers up or down for 1d or what ever fare would cover the cost. Surely it would pay to do as I have suggested, and thus save thousands of women from the terrors attendant on crossing those places with children.

PUCK'S GIRDLE.

I'll put a girdle round about the earth in forty minutes.—"Midsummer Night's Dream."

Her Excellency Lady Denman and Lady Chelmsford are presiding each day at the Congress of the National Council of Women this week, Lady Denman taking the chair at the afternoon sessions and Lady Chelmsford at the morning ones. Lady King-Hall and Lady Cullen are amongst the many leading women who listen with interested attention to the papers and discussions, and the Lady Mayoress (Miss Clarke) showed her sympathy with the work of the council by holding a reception at the Town Hall on Monday, when the visiting delegates met informally many of the Sydney women.

The wild flower show to be held in Sydney in September is arousing attention in every State, and entries are coming in from all parts of Australia. In order to meet the convenience of those in distant parts, the date for receiving entries has been extended to August 10. One of the most interesting exhibits should be the collection of native fruits to be shown by the Queensland Government. The edible properties of most of our fruits have hardly been discovered yet, but Queensland has done more in this line than any other State. A collection of galls to be shown by our own Agricultural Department should prove very interesting to entomologists and farmers, and a large collection of grasses is also to be exhibited.

All women love good lace, and indeed there are few things more exquisite than a piece of fine hand-made lace. Last week Sydney women had a rare opportunity of seeing some beautiful examples of lace-making when the Misses Pratt displayed a quantity of fine lace and embroidery which had come from the different missionary schools in China and India. The women of these countries, as everyone knows, are wonderfully expert with their needles, and under the tuition of the missionaries they have learned to make many things on European patterns, which find a ready sale in other countries, and thus support the missions. The rolls of finest torchon, the beautiful pieces of rose point, or the lovely strips of embroidery gave a real artistic pleasure to all who saw them.

America prides itself, and justly, on its position in the world of education. Yet we are told by the National Child Labour Committee that—"Twenty-nine States do not care whether children can read and write when they permit them to go from school." We learn from the report of the committee that two million children are at work in the United States to-day, and that one child in every seven children between the ages of 10 and 14 is not at school. In the "Child Labour Bulletin" the United States Commissioner of Education wrote recently: "I have seen children under 10 years of age working their lives away in the mills. Their pale faces haunt me still. I saw little boys 8 years old drinking black coffee at midnight to keep awake until the end of their shift at 4 or 5 in the morning."

Women teachers here will be interested to read of the salaries paid to women teachers in England. Head mistresses in council secondary schools receive salaries varying from £300 to £600 a year. The latter sum is only received by a mistress after several years' service. Those who control a large school of over four hundred scholars begin with £400 and rise annually by £20 to the full sum. Assistant mistresses are paid £120, with yearly increases of £10 till £220 is reached. To qualify for these positions a University degree is necessary. Those who do not hold a degree receive a lower rate of pay. In the training colleges of the London County Council women lecturers receive from £180 to £250 yearly, and the assistants from £130 to £170. Women teachers of singing make £160 a year, of needlework £120, of drawing £160, and of drill £130.

The world will never be convinced that anyone is superior who assumes an aggressive manner, or who is pushing, self-assertive, and egotistical, says a woman writer. That style of conduct indicates crudeness, ignorance, a lack of intelligence. A serious mistake is for a girl to think that a noisy boisterous manner, a loud laugh, gushing, exuberant ways indicate fun and amusement. Repose of manner has a wonderful charm. A girl of refinement is gentle, modest, reserved. She does not scream or talk in a loud voice. She does not move about in a rushing, bustling way, but quietly, gracefully, and with dignity. Respect for parents and older people is one of the marks of the well-bred girl.

Since the women of California got the ballot they have been working hard for the cleanliness of their cities. In Alameda a unique but telling plan has been adopted by the authorities. Placards bearing the inscriptions "Clean," "Dirty," or "Filthy" have been made, and are put up on the different buildings, according to their sanitary conditions.

DILATORY CORRESPONDENTS.

It does not need the "pen of a ready writer" to answer an invitation, and yet how many women are there who reply at a late date, or fail to reply at all? For the woman who commits this latter breach of manners there can be no excuse whatsoever; while in the other case a late reply would be taken to mean that the recipient was in no hurry to accept for fear that something "more advantageous" might turn up in the meantime. An ordinary request will often remain unanswered for so long as a fortnight, the tardy reply probably causing much inconvenience. Possibly it contains an excuse such as "being much too busy to write before," or something to the same effect. This makes it even worse, for you know that this cannot possibly be the fact. For how long does it take to write a few words? An invitation should be either "accepted with pleasure" or "declined with regret" by return post, so that the missive reaches its destination by the next day. Once on a time men were considered the worst offenders in this respect, but women are fast following in their footsteps, and on all sides one hears the same complaints.

As a rule, the trouble arises through lack of method, and through the absence of conveniences in the household. I actually heard a woman state one day that she was unable to write something at that particular moment because her small son was doing his home lessons, and he had the pen. Imagine one pen in a household! Every woman should make up her mind to keep for her own special use something which will contain all necessaries for her correspondence, even if it be only a box or letter case, if she cannot afford a desk, then she should determine to sit down for a few moments each day and devote these entirely to her necessary correspondence. Her friends would not then have to complain of her dilatoriness. Her prompt replies would give a good deal of satisfaction to would-be hostesses and others, for in the former case there is nothing so annoying to an entertainer as to be in doubt as to the number of people for whom she has to make preparation. On the other hand, the average reception-rooms are not particularly large, and the invitees have naturally to be limited. Prompt replies may be included amongst the minor courtesies of life, and it is the observance of these small courtesies which help to make life pleasant.

NOEL.

THE ECONOMICAL FRENCHWOMAN.

Economy is, without doubt, the most faithfully served of all the Frenchwoman's gods, says one has lived many years in France. Her clear-seeing mind has grasped the fact that he who holds the pursestrings rules the household, and very surely she has so worked things that it is now a she who holds the purse strings in most poor French families, and in richer ones husband and wife have purses of their own, quite separate.

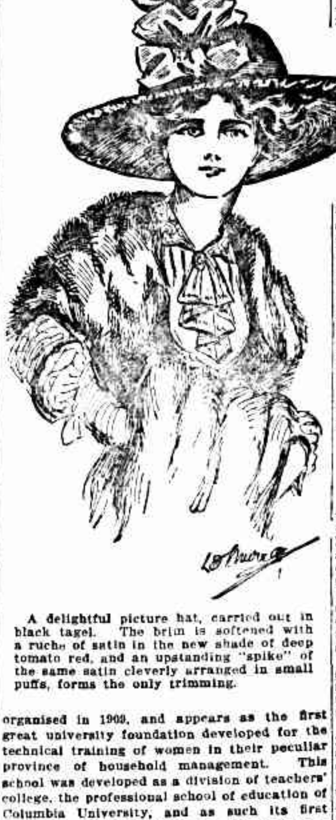
A Frenchman respects his wife for her economy—is even a little in awe of her because of it; and his wife is fully aware of the fact. She is, moreover, extremely proud of her saving propensities, and has no shame in showing them off in all their detail to the world. Notice how she turns up her skirt to save it from contact with the dusty seat. See how proudly she draws off her soiled pair of gloves when she nears the end of an omnibus ride to pay a call, and replaces them with a clean pair which will be worn during the visit and no longer. Listen to her discussing prices with her cook, her dressmaker, or any other of the people who serve her.

In nothing does the Frenchwoman show her economical spirit more than in the way of entertaining. She firmly refuses to have any promiscuous parties, or even a promiscuous dinner guest. She does not provide for more than the exact numbers of her family, and her larder seldom holds more than her day's provisions. She gives dinner parties at stated times, just as she gives tea parties or evening receptions, but an impromptu party in Paris is unheard of in a well-regulated French family. The house is not prepared for such a thing. The drawing-room is swathed in striped cotton covers, and the shutters are closed excepting on reception days. The servants have something better to do than to serve afternoon tea and dust sitting-rooms. Every "frill" of household life is done away with when there is no company, thereby great economy is practised both in wear and tear and service.

TEACHING THE HOUSEHOLD ARTS.

The question of scientific domestic training is one of perennial interest, and those women who are anxious to see the homely arts raised to a higher standard will read with interest the following account from the "Scientific American":—

"The school of household arts at teachers' college, Columbia University, New York, was organised in 1909, and appears as the first great university foundation developed for the technical training of women in their peculiar province of household management. This school was developed as a division of teachers' college, the professional school of education of Columbia University, and as such its first purpose was the training of teachers in household arts. Historically, indeed, the training of household arts teachers was one of the first undertakings of teachers' college, as the college itself dates back to philanthropic classes in the household arts which were carried on in New York city in the early eighties. Teachers' college was organised in 1888. Teachers were first trained in cookery and related work, and then in the sewing arts, and about 10 years ago a department of household administration was organised to fit young women for positions of responsibility in the administration of private households and the larger institutional households as college and school dormitories and other institutions. Finally, in 1908 and 1909, when a gift of 500,000dol. for a household arts building had come, the divisions of work were reorganised into the school of household arts. This school, while continuing the technical training of teachers of household arts has found it possible, through the possession of its unique equipment, to branch out into the technical training of women in many new fields. Young women who wish to teach household arts find the school a gateway to positions as college instructors of household economy, as directors and instructors of household arts in normal schools, secondary schools, technical and trade schools; and finally as supervisors and teachers of household arts in the public elementary schools.



A delightful picture hat, carried out in black tagel. The brim is softened with a ruche of satin in the new shade of deep tomato red, and an upstanding "spike" of the same satin cleverly arranged in small puffs, forms the only trimming.

"The school of household arts also equips for a wide range of technical vocations, aside from teaching, in its various divisions of household management, home cookery, household administration, house decoration, dietetics, institutional cookery, lunch-room management, and similar technical and industrial fields.

"Persons who are not familiar with these fields have little idea of the wide range of opportunity which is opening to young women to-day. The commissary department of such institutions is often a professional field by itself in which the trained dietitian finds her calling. Young women whose gifts are artistic rather than executive can find openings in house decoration and furnishings, either as independent workers or in affiliation with architects and mercantile houses, while costume design and illustration is another applied art field which has business as well as educational opportunities.

"Something of the attention which the school of household arts is attracting is evidenced by its registration, which for the current year numbers 352 resident students, who are candidates for certificates, diplomas, and degrees in education or in technical work, and 396 part-time students, young women of New York and its suburbs, who come to school for practical instruction in foods and cookery, design, dressmaking, millinery, and management."

PRECEPTS FOR PARENTS.

I should like to form a class for the general improvement of parents. Oh, I know that there is a school for mothers busily teaching poor women how to take care of their children; but my class would be for teaching the parents who ought to know better how to take care of themselves.

There is no one so aggravating as the parent who persistently refuses to think about herself. I say herself, because mothers are the worst offenders. They think and plan for everyone else's comfort and welfare; but even suggest to them that they should have a little consideration for themselves and they are offended and indignant at the insinuation that they need care. When a child refuses to eat his soup or go to rest you can use physical persuasion; but when your mother insists on rising in the early winter mornings to get your breakfast, or in stewing over the kitchen fire a whole hot summer day making cakes for the family, or in doing any of the other hundred and one things which are so bad for her, and which give you no pleasure because you know she should not do them—well, you just have to stand by in silence.

For protests do no good. Indeed, any suggestion that she should desist only seems to drive her to fresh efforts, as if to prove to you that she is still quite young and strong. Sometimes when over-exhaustion drives her to a day in bed, or an attack of rheumatism follows on some feat at the washtub, she will admit that perhaps she did overdo it a little; but as soon as she is rested she is as bad as ever again and laughs at your croakings. Nor is there much satisfaction to you in the opportunity—which always comes—of saying "I told you so."

Is it self-sacrifice run riot, or is it the natural feminine dislike to being relegated to the shelf that makes mothers so troublesome? Perhaps a little of each. In the ordinary household of healthy boys and girls and limited means, self-sacrifice becomes second nature to the mother. It is always she who goes without and manages not to want things. She is always the first to rise in the morning and the last to sleep at night, and her day is filled with a thousand thoughts of what she can do for her family; never a thought for herself. By and by, when the family is big enough to think and act for itself, and when young, strong shoulders are able and willing to carry the burden, the habit is too strong, and the mother persists in going on and on, though her sons and daughters would all be happier if she would rest and leave more to them. It isn't that they wish her to drop the reins, for they value her guidance too much for that; but they do not want her to keep her shoulder to the wheel any longer. But the mother will not believe that the family coach can move without her, and so she goes on pushing and shoving, and using up her precious strength, which should be preserved for the finer task of guiding.

In my class for mothers I should teach them a little necessary selfishness. They should be taught to stay in bed till "the morning is aired." They should learn to accept as a matter of course all that is easiest and most comfortable in the house. There would be no question of wearing last year's bonnets so that the girls could have new foulards. The mother should always have nice, good clothes: the girls look well enough in fourpenny prints. There should be a reserved seat at the opera for the mother, even though it meant a visit less to the gallery for the girls. The books from the library should be the biographies and books of travel that delight the older mind, not the newest American novel for the girls. And so on. All the years of effort and self-sacrifice should be paid for in compound interest, and in my class for parents mothers should learn to receive instead of giving, always giving; and grown-up daughters would find their task of looking after mothers much lightened by the way in which the mothers would look after themselves.

And yet, and yet—I wonder would they still be the same dear, naughty, troublesome lovable mothers that they are now.

ON THE EDGE OF THE HILL.

Have things gone wrong with you all day, and are your nerves and your temper all worn and frayed at the edges? Then leave the house, with its sordid cares and petty worries, and go across the paddock, till you are just on the edge of the hill, and nothing remains to remind you of your troubles but the red roof of the house, with the white pigeons sunning themselves on its western side, seen over the heavy heads of sorghum in the cultivation patch, nodding beneath the weight of a voracious army of sparrows and chick-ups.

The spot you choose to rest in is neither in sunshine nor shadow, but a mixture of both, for the shade is all freckled with patches of the sunlight, that comes dancing down between the leaves of the old white mahogany.

There is such peace and stillness here that you might easily persuade yourself that you are miles from everywhere did not the rattle of carts and the frequent whirring of motors remind you that you are within a stone's throw of a busy thoroughfare; but these sounds are too far away to disturb the serenity which gradually enfolds you, and nearer there are none more formidable than the soft cropping of a cow, browsing on the short grass near by, and the faint-sounding voices and laughter of some women and girls, in print frocks and sun bonnets, who, in the hollow far below you, are picking peas for next day's market.

Three crows, melancholy blots against the blue, sail slowly overhead, and a hasty pattering of feet brings your eyes to earth again, as a rabbit scuttles past with your terrier in hot pursuit. This morning you swore a crusade against all rabbits, for they burrowed under the wire last night, and destroyed a great patch of barley, but, in your present softened mood your sympathy is all with the hunted wild creature, when it finds sanctuary under the blackberry bush, where the dog dares not follow, and after some disappointed whines and ineffectual scratchings he goes off in search of fresh excitement.

All the worries and vexations which loomed so large on your horizon in the four walls of the house have dwindled by now into insignificance, and you remember, with shame, how only yesterday the iron entered your soul when you encountered your best friend in all the bravery of a smart winter toque and a new set of furs, and felt, rather than saw, her compassionate glance at your own headgear which, in spite of the most careful brushing, seems to proclaim aloud the fact that it was not even new last season. Then this morning how great was your affliction when your second hopeful announced that his school trousers were through on the other knee now, and the fellows in his form were asking if his parents were in the old clothes trade; and how you longed for the Midas touch, for just one day, that you might transform your silver into gold.

Out here, under the sky, you realise, perhaps but dimly, how rich you are in everything that really matters. The wealth of the Indies could not buy for you more abundant health and vitality, nor bluer skies, nor more golden sunshine, nor the eye to see its glories, nor the heart to respond to the many voices with which Nature seeks to lure you from your evil mood, as David of old charmed Saul with his cunning hand upon the harp.

But the shadows are reaching half-way across the paddock, there is less and less of warmth in the sunshine, and the pigeons have ceased strutting and preening their feathers on the sunny side of the roof, and have flown downwards, a sure sign of feeding time.

The daily round and common task again mark you for their own, but with a difference; you are now mistress of yourself and of the situation, and the worries that are the common lot of the home-keeping mother have no longer power to afflict you.

You have made for yourself "a nest of pleasant thoughts." You have erected one of those "fairy palaces, not built with hands, for your soul to live in," where the demons of envy, hatred, and all uncharitableness find no admittance, exorcised by the magic of sunshine and solitude.

ACTINOTUS.

WHEN THE SHOE PINCHES.

If I were limited to one single piece of advice in regard to shoes it would certainly be in fiery letters six inches high, "Have 'em big enough," says a doctor in "Good Housekeeping." On this one commandment hangs all the law and the prophets of shoe buying. In debating the choice of footwear we should take for our motto, "A little too big a shoe is just the right size." Short of actually slipping about on the foot when you walk, you can hardly get a shoe too big. All the women that ever wore shoes too big died before I was born—at least I have never met any of them. Practically the rule of shoe-fitting is very simple; have your shoe just about what you think a comfortable fit, and then three-quarters of an inch longer and half an inch wider, and all the corn doctors in your neighbourhood will starve to death. You are the one to blame for your corns and bunions and flat feet, not your shoe-maker or shoe-dealer. He's only selling you the kind of footwear you insist on having. He knows full well that pride feels no pain, and that you will suffer the tortures of the damned in stoic silence if your foot only looks pretty; while you will return to upbraid him if he sells you a shoe that looks clumsy or big, no matter how comfortable it may be. The one unpardonable sin in the shoe business is to sell a customer a shoe one quarter of a size bigger than he could possibly have jammed his foot into. Whatever we may be in politics we are never imperialists or expansionists when we go a shoe-buying.

"IN THE DARK."

Scene—Crowded concert-room.

A confused impression of chiffon and spangles, head dresses. The usual jangling of high C and other tones, interspersed with the rustling of programmes, fills the room, while at intervals like a "tom-tom" accompaniment is heard the steady drip! drip! splash! splash! of the daily rain. Over all and above all and dominating all hangs meditatively a sombre curtain whose sinuous folds suggest fearful possibilities in the rear.

The light is lowered. A subdued "Ah!" follows, and the consequent settling back into chairs with preliminary shakes and twitches.

Sweet Sixteener: "Isn't it lovely! I adore music in a twilighty room."

Second Ditto: "I hope the fiddles will drown the noise of that rain. Why didn't I wear my goloshes!"

Motherly Body in tight black silk (to her companion): "Know 'im! I should thing so! Why, I noo 'im when 'e was a boy in knickers—black velvets, an'——"

General "Sh!" as the music commences.

The first item is performed, and at its conclusion there is much applause. The lights are raised, and the consequent blinking ensues.

Musical person (with much hair and little collar), emphasising remarks with well-bred ladylike claps: "Exquisite! Satisfying! Wonderful interpretation! Most artistic!"

Matter-of-fact Friend (approvingly): "Not too bad!"

Grey-haired Lady (to nephew): "Very fine indeed! But, my dear, I would prefer to see the young men. I very much dislike applauding to an unresponsive curtain."

Nephew (facetiously): "Aunt Jane! I'm surprised at you! Wanting to see young men at your time of life."

First Sixteener: "Yes, it's lovely! But I do wish I could have seen if he waggled his head!"

Second ditto (viciously): "I hate that curtain!"

Light again disappears.

Vocalist sings. A strained hush—an abrupt coming to attention—a relaxation—an uneasy movement—a wriggling in seats—a general feeling of "what next?"

Grey-haired Lady (sotto voce): "Is this a joke? It does not read like a comic excerpt. (Turns sideways and endeavours to read programme).

Nephew: "Sh! You'll know by and by."

Motherly Body (glancing severely at two girls with a tendency to giggle): "It's no disgrace if the gentleman 'as lost the toon, he'll soon pick it up again. It might 'appen to anybody."

Companion: "Sh! It's classic! No tune!"

Vocal item continues. Violins seek the upper regions of sound—vocalist plunges into the depths.

Grey-haired Lady: "Isn't it frightful?"

Nephew: "Sh! Aunt Jane! They'll hear you."

Vocal item concludes and recommences; is followed with attention and strained, in some cases pained, interest. Again concludes. Vigorous applause and subdued murmurs——

"Glorious! Rotten! Wonderful! What charm! Frightful discord! Call that singin'! It's talkin'! Right in the middle of the note every time! Fine! The English words don't give him a chance!"

French voice: "Eet is ze same wiz all ze arts—ze literature, ze painting, ze sculpture, and specially wiz ze music. One writes a poem. I read it. Ze words are bizarre, extraordinaire—of a bevilderment—I feenish, an' I say, "What 'ave we?" Rien du tout—Nozings at all. Eet is ze same wiz zat espece de music now—but in ze future!"

German voice: "Ach! I haf not der pachence mit der ultra-moderns—der futurists. Dey write not for der gommon ears on der hets, but for der hearing outside of der hets—der hearing dot is dree part der imachination, und so der sounds gif us no shoy—not like der music of Wagner. Ach Himmel! Dot was music!"

Grey-haired Lady: "Never have my ears been so tortured!"

Musical Person: "Prodigious! What effects! What nuances of harmonious discord! Heart searching!"

Matter-of-fact Friend: "It was certainly searching, but if tune was the object, I rather think he didn't get there."

Grey-haired Lady: "I must confess I dread this next vocal item."

(Item received with enthusiastic approval.)

Matter-of-fact One: "I couldn't quite get the drift of that."

Musical One: "No? Listen to this annotation——

"A moment of brief Elysian silence. Nature palpitates with the awful sense of her own vacuity. Then—then with the vehemence of a stream released from its straitened confines in a glacial cavity the torrent of sound surrounds us—crushes us—o'erwhelms us. Is it music? Is it concord? Is it discord? Who can say! The frail finitude of the human ear repels these marvellous combinations of harmonious cacophony."

Matter-of-fact Friend: "Thanks! Keep the change! I think the music's easier."

Gushing Voice: "Isn't it glorious to have things so clearly explained!"

Quiet Voice: "No, my dear lady. When a man gives me the title of his theme I infinitely prefer to read my own English into it. Annotations seem to me as futile as explaining the smile of Mona Lisa or the madness of Hamlet."

Lights are lowered on last item. Motherly Body falls asleep, and punctuates the "quintette" with sundry backward bobs, which occasion much hilarity to those in the rear.

Item concludes amid enthusiastic stamping, pounding, and clapping.

Confused babble——

"My vord, dot vas fine!"

"Ze grand artist!"

"I'd rather hear his "Polynesia Polly" any day for a straightforward tune."

"Doesn't he look a dear?"

"Beastly old curtain!"

"Yes, I think Sydney ought to be jolly well proud of them!"

"Just listen to that rain!"

Exeunt—and silence.

AS YOU LIKE IT.

It means a great deal to a woman to be able to say, "My dress is lined with 'Silvasheen.'"

She knows then that she has the most beautiful and most durable lining that can be produced. But you can't be sure of having "Silvasheen" unless you find the word "Silvasheen" stamped on the selvedge. If it is not on the selvedge the lining isn't "Silvasheen."

IN THE LIBRARY.
"Dalley, the Indomitable," by A. H. Chisholm; Literary Jottings; Reprints of Fiction and Humour; Poem, "The Lady of the Treasure House," by M. Forrest, illustrated by Sydney Smith.

A GREAT CRUISER ON THE STOCKS.
Drawing by Charlie Bryant of the Melbourne, prior to launching. Her sister ship, the Sydney, will be launched by Lady Henderson on August 29, and the sketch is as applicable to the one vessel as the other.

SIXTY YEARS AGO. A NAVAL VETERAN'S RECOLLECTIONS.
An interesting story by Mr. William Campbell (now 77 years old), who joined the British Navy when a boy of 12, and took part in the Crimean War.

THE OPERA SEASON.
The Progress of the very successful Quinlan Grand Opera Season is reviewed; a portrait of Mr. W. J. Samuell is given, and there is an interesting interview with Miss Agnes Nicholls, the distinguished Wagnerian soprano.

DRAMA AND MUSIC.
Interview with Harry Carson Clarke, the American comedian; Poem, "After the Play," by Ella M'Fadyen; Stage Gossip; Portraits of Harry Carson Clarke and Claude Mackay.

THE MAN ON THE LAND.
"The Tick Problem" forms the subject of an interesting article describing the practical experiences of a Queensland cattle-breeder.
Special articles also appear on pastoral and agricultural subjects, and fruit, horticulture, poultry, and apiculture are dealt with by expert writers. Information is also given in connection with the wool trade, Homebush market, and produce markets.

IN THE WORLD OF SPORT.
Saturday's football matches are specially described, and other sports receive prominence. Illustrations: The Olympic Swimming Baths, Stockholm; H. H. Hardwick, L. Longworth, and L. Boardman; Queensland Rugby Union Team; East Fremantle Football Team.
Frank Iredale discusses the achievements of the Australian Cricket Team; and there is a capital snapshot of the Jam of Nawanagar.

THE TURF.
"Milroy" is as entertaining as usual; but his contribution this week is of more than ordinary interest because it includes a complete list of winning stallions for the season from August 1, 1911, to July 31, 1912. The list includes 21 stallions whose progeny won £2000 and over; and then follows an alphabetical table giving the winnings to the credit of Australian stallions throughout Australasia and in other parts where it has been possible to obtain the returns. The compilation of this table has entailed a great deal of trouble, and the information it contains is not to be obtained anywhere else.

AUSTRALIAN STORIES.
Serial: "A Tale of the Gold Diggings," by W. G. Davis; "The Will to Hate," by Val. Jameson; "The Castle in the Midst," by Ella M'Fadyen.

SOCIAL GOSSIP AND FASHION CHAT.
Social events of the week are described, and there are portraits of Lady Chelmsford, Lady Fuller, and Lady M'Gregor. There are illustrations of the new fashion in panniers, a pretty candle shade, and the Swastika. Many useful recipes are given for the use of the household.

OTHER FEATURES.
The Commonwealth Training Ship Tingira (illustrated), Southern Heavens in August (illustrated), Sailors returning to the Flagship (full-page photograph), Query Club, Chess and Draughts, Science, Humour, Sunday Reading.

LAVENDER'S INHERITANCE.

BY ALICE AND CLAUDE ASKEW.

[ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.]

CHAPTER XX.—Continued.

When his twenty minutes were exhausted he took his departure from the gambling-room, and he seemed to breathe more easily as soon as he had crossed its threshold. For, apart from the company, the black and crimson and gold of that room, the mirrors with their curious tone of reflection, the rich shaded lights, and, above all, the heavy atmosphere, subtly redolent of a subtle depravity, seemed to have an intoxicating influence upon the brain, and Eric was quite human enough to feel the fascination of it, even while he realised the danger.

It was cool and pleasant in the lounge, and there was no one there except a couple of young people, who took their departure as soon as Eric settled into a chair with the obvious intention of making himself comfortable. He found some sporting papers lying about, and he picked up one of these, an illustrated magazine, and turned over the leaves carelessly, wondering how long he would have to wait.

The door of the supper-room was constantly being thrown open to allow of the passage of people who came and went, usually in pairs, and the clatter of knives and forks indicated that David Bryant's guests were not backward in availing themselves of his liberality, since everything was provided free. Eric found himself wondering, however, if the same system of "tipping" prevailed here as at the bar, in which case Bryant could afford to be generous.

He had been waiting about a quarter of an hour when Steele suddenly appeared. There were several people round the door of the dining-room at the moment, and he seemed to detach himself from these. Eric noticed that he had a heightened colour, and that his red moustache seemed to bristle with more than its usual prominence.

"Come along," he said hurriedly, in a voice that was gruffer than usual with him. "We must get our coats and be off. Payne has gone out by another door, a private door opening into the stables. I couldn't go with him that way—they'd have suspected. But we shall catch him as he comes out into Wilmot-place—there's no other exit from the stables. Hurry up."

He had turned, almost before the last words were fully uttered, and was leading the way down the corridor to the stairs. Eric followed him in a condition of mental perturbation. This was an unforeseen circumstance, and very upsetting. What if William Payne should escape after all?

The detective walked with long strides, and Eric could not help noting how badly his coat, the coat with the velvet collar, seemed to fit him. The collar was a little turned up at one edge, and looked as if it had been carelessly arranged when the coat was put on. Eric hadn't noticed it before, and it was absurd that a little thing like that should attract his attention now; but in moments of agitation small things have a way of arresting notice, which no doubt was the explanation.

Steele had taken the ticket for both coats, and he had this in his hand ready for delivery as soon as they reached the cloak-room at the bottom of the stairs. There was a small delay in finding the thing, as the place, together with the whole entrance passage, was ill-lit, but Steele no longer seemed in such a hurry.

"It'll be all right," he said in a half whisper, as they followed one of the flunkeys down the long dark corridor to the front entrance. "Payne was still gassing with Hawthorne when I left; we're bound to be out before him."

"I hope so," returned Eric. He was doing up his coat as he walked. Steele had left his open, and the big red buttons of his waistcoat seemed to stand out in remarkable prominence.

Steele pressed a coin into the hand of the footman, who opened the door for them.

"Shall I whistle up a taxi, sir?" asked the man. "There are plenty to be had, though they mostly wait round the corner."

"No, thank you, I think we'll walk a bit first," returned the detective. He led the way out, and Eric followed him. As soon as they had both crossed the threshold the door was locked and bolted behind them.

The street was deserted save for a private motor brougham drawn up by the curb close at hand. At the far end the lights in the public-house were still ablaze, and the rumble and roar of London fell pleasantly upon Eric's ears, for it seemed as if he had come back to his own world again after an incursion into a realm of nightmare fancy. And the air of the street, though it was the air of murky London, was fresh and fragrant to him, too, and he sucked it eagerly into his lungs to dispel the poison which he had been inhaling for the last hour or so.

"I suppose we must go this way," Eric pointed to the arched entrance to the mews a little lower down, and without waiting for a reply took a few steps in the direction which he had indicated.

Steele did not follow immediately. To Eric's surprise, he gave a low whistle, in answer to which two men—palpably policemen in plain clothes—sprang out of the motor brougham, and approached them quickly.

Eric turned, more than a little puzzled, for surely this action was premature. Yet no doubt Steel knew best, and probably Payne would emerge in a moment or two from the mews only to be pounced upon by the waiting police.

"Is he coming?" he asked in a whisper.

Steele made no reply. He merely stood aside, allowing the policeman to pass him, and then, to Eric's infinite amazement, he was seized in firm grip by the two men, each taking hold of an arm.

For a moment Eric's astonishment made him dumb. Then he began to laugh. Of course, these two men had misunderstood their instructions, and imagined that he was the individual whom they had to arrest. But why on earth hadn't Steele already pointed out the error?

"You've got the wrong man," he said to his captors; then he called out to Steele, "Here, Mr. Steele, please come and explain."

But Steele did nothing of the sort. He took no notice of Eric whatever. Instead, he addressed himself to the men.

"Hurry up, and get him into the car. Put your hand over his mouth if he attempts to make a row. Go along as quick as you can to the station; I'll follow, and be with you in ten minutes."

Eric heard these words with unspeakable amazement. Had the detective suddenly gone mad? Was this some ruse which he could not for the moment understand? Was his own brain turned?

"But it's a mistake," he shouted, "a mistake. I'm not the man you want. I'm Eric Wrenford, not William Payne. What's come over you, Steele?"

Mr. Steele, however, remained absolutely imperturbable, except that he directed his men not to allow their prisoner to make a row. He stood aside while they began to drag Eric towards the car.

The street was deserted, save for one or two taxi-cab drivers and workmen, who had emerged from the mews, and who stood watching the proceedings with idle interest—which became keener when Eric showed signs of wishing to make a struggle for his liberty.

Big man as he was, muscular, and in the best of condition, he could probably under ordinary circumstances have easily mastered his captors; but they had seized him unawares, and they held him by the arms with a scientific grip that only seemed to tighten the more he struggled to free himself from it.

And then, as he began to shout, violent anger against this treatment and against the absurdity of the whole proceeding making him lose his head, Steele himself—Steele, the detective who was supposed to be acting in his interests—stepped up, and placing a heavy hand over his mouth completely silenced him.

And so, with the help of a fourth man—the chauffeur—Eric Wrenford was bundled into the motor brougham, which started off at once, leaving Steele placidly watching its departure from the pavement.

Eric lay against the cushions, gasping after his ineffectual struggle. Presently, however, he found his voice and began to protest.

"I suppose you are policemen, and are taking me to the station. May I ask if you've got a warrant, and what I'm supposed to have done?"

He spoke calmly, though it was with an effort.

"Mr. Steele, he's got the warrant right enough. You'll see him again in a few minutes, Mr. Payne, and he'll tell you all about it."

So there was no doubt about it, these policemen were mistaking him for the individual whom they had actually come to arrest. But how on earth had the absurd error arisen? How explain the conduct of Steele?

Eric gave a short laugh. "But I tell you—" he began.

"Allow me to point out," interrupted one of the policemen, "that anything you say now may be used in evidence against you."

Eric laughed again. The whole business was really too ridiculous. But he bit his lip, and maintained silence for the rest of the short journey.

ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS.

E.J. (Melbourne).—Much obliged.

F.M. (Kogarah).—The ears should come alright in a month or two. The decayed teeth are probably caused by too much sloppy food. Clean them with alum water, and treat the dog for worms.

J.A.D. (Canley Vale).—Next week.

Bulldog (Wentworth).—An injury to the stifle joint is serious, and usually permanent. Lubricate and massage.

NOTES.

Mr. L. Hordern has presented a cup for competition at the Kennel Club's show. Mr. H. A. Hume, of Gunning, has joined the club.

Steps will be taken to-night to form a collie club, which shall be affiliated with the Kennel Club.

A correspondent writes that Mr. Samuel Hordern's deerhound, Retford Montrose, has recovered from an accident, which caused his absence from the last Royal Show. Montrose, who is a brother of Mr. Dickson's Moncrieffe Marvel, is nearly as big as his sire, Ch. Ayrshire (imp.), and his wiry coat is of the weather-resisting type.

There are 390 entries for the Queensland National Show. Mr. Carling, of Sydney, is exhibiting his collies, Roslyn Royal, Constance of Tytton (imp.), and Haldon Jean. He has also sent Haldon Harold to compete at the Auckland, Christchurch, and Wellington shows.

Mr. J. D. Linehan, of Underdale, S.A., is now visiting Sydney. He is interested in Irish terriers and bulldogs.

Mr. W. Ridpath Turner writes:—"I would like to point out that in the notes under Mr. Grant's name a mistake has been made in stating that the Scottish terrier Allister McAllister, 'a winner whenever exhibited, was always good enough to come out in front.' Allister McAllister was beaten by Ivanhoe at the 1909 Royal Show."

Two sales of Scottish terriers are reported. Mr. H. Todd, of North Sydney, has transferred to Mr. Arnott, of Randwick, a puppy by Harry Lauder ex Lass o' Glencairn. An Indian buyer has secured from Mr. S. S. Meyer, of Strathfield, the well-known winner Craigenvar Carina.

Mr. J. A. Dickson, of Canley Vale, has transferred the following deerhounds:—Moncrieffe Goddess to Mr. Sylvester Browne, of Singleton; M. Highlander and M. Blue Moth to Mr. Murrell, of Taree; M. Lively to Mr. E. J. Cox, of Parramatta; and three puppies to Mr. Partridge, of Werris Creek, Mr. Barnett, of Bungendore, and Mr. Ferguson, of Armatree.

The Scottish Terrier Club met last Thursday at the Kennel Club office. Mr. Crane presided, and ten other members attended. Mr. F. W. Simmonds wrote resigning his office of hon. treasurer, owing to want of time to attend to the work. The resignation was accepted with regret, and a vote of thanks was passed to Mr. Simmonds for his services. Mr. J. W. Crichton was elected hon. treasurer. It was decided that two special prizes of a guinea each should be given to the puppy classes at the Kennel Club's show, provided that club added the usual class prizes.

There arrived by the last visit of the steamer Riverina from South Australia a handsome black pug dog, Coon, bred by Mr. E. Doctor, the well-known Brisbane fancier, from his imported stock, and sold to Mrs. F. Thompson, of Adelaide. That lady having decided to disband her kennels, Mrs. T. Brooke, of Croydon, secured Coon for the Corrard kennels. He brings with him a good list of wins to his credit, including champion and bronze medal, the latter being presented by the Queensland Government to each winning dog of his class at the Jubilee show. Coon will make his first appearance in this State at the Kennel Club's show in September.

Miss A. Mackay writes:—"Would you kindly correct a misprint in last week's report. Instead of 'a member offered twenty guineas in prizes' the line should have read, 'A member sold thirty guineas worth of dogs at the club's recent show, and won another ten guineas in prizes, encouragement which it is hoped will continue.' May I also correct reports to the effect that anyone exhibiting at our club's shows, parades, etc., will be disqualified from exhibiting at the Royal Agricultural Society's annual show. The membership of the Cattledog and Sheepdog Club of New South Wales already numbers over one hundred, from all parts of the State."

Mr. S. Jackson, hon. secretary of the Scottish Terrier Club, writes:—I quite agree with Mr. Grant's remarks as to the utility of the Scottish terrier as a gun dog. This quaint, game little fellow, hard as nails, is a splendid worker with the ferret, and is ever alert for rabbit or rat to bolt. He will face any cover, and his want of pace in the open prevents him from entering into rivalry with the gun should he break cover at the scent of a rabbit. One dog I have in my mind would worry a hedgehog without flinching, and would chase a wounded hare until he had not a breath in his body, and was always happy when he saw the gun. The "Scottie" is an admirable house dog, keen and kindly, a lover of children, capital company, and as wise as an old man. They are essentially a "one-dog" man's dog—knowing their master and no other. Anyone who has had a smart "Scottie" will have no other dog.

The Cattle and Sheep Dog Club of New South Wales will hold a parade of stock dogs (cattle-dogs, barbs, and kelpies only) next Saturday at the Royal Agricultural Society's Ground. An advertisement in another column gives particulars of entry fees, etc. Trams to convey dogs and their owners will leave Bridge-street at 1.15 p.m., travel along Elizabeth-street, and leave Foveaux-street at 1.25 p.m.

VICTORIAN KENNEL CLUB SHOW.

A Melbourne correspondent writes:—The 36th annual show of the Victorian Poultry and Kennel Club, held last week, was a great success. There were 876 entries. The weather was dull and showery for the first two days, but brightened up after. The entries were good, and included exhibits from New South Wales, South Australia, Tasmania, and New Zealand. The classes as a rule were well filled, though one misses the beagles, foxhounds, and silky terriers, that make such large classes at a Sydney show. The big dogs, St. Bernards and mastiffs, have dropped right out. Borzois, Great Danes and deerhounds made good classes, and are improving.

Bulldogs had a record entry. Mr. Alban Gee, of Sydney, sent two high-grade representatives—The Pilot and Bankside Gem (imp.). Pilot, who was beaten in open dogs by Iredell and Serman's Hilltown Doctor (imp.), to the ringsiders stood right out, his magnificent head and front dwarfing those points in his opponent. Hilltown Doctor was better in body and in hindquarters; Pilot did not move too freely in the ring. Bankside Gem is a beauty, and is, without doubt, the best of the breed ever seen in Victoria. She stood clean away from her opponents, and gained the championship of her sex. Mr. Gee thus had some compensation for the defeat of Pilot.

Bull terriers made large classes, and the exhibits were good. Airedales had a small entry only. Pointers were of nice quality, and English setters were excellent. Don Wells, of Nelson, New Zealand, won the challenge with his dog ch Burkeland Rock, also a trophy for the best setter in the show. This dog is a good winner, and the best setter in New Zealand. Irish and Gordon setters are at a standstill for want of new blood. In retrievers only two moderates were benched.

Field spaniels were of good quality; Mrs. Elliott "swept the board" with typical dogs, winning all firsts, specials, brace and team, and also securing the Haddon Memorial trophy for the best spaniel in the show with our old friend ch. Union Jack, who wears well.

Cockers were plentiful, but lacking in type, no two dogs being alike, all in some degree following the field type. Collies were again large classes, and the quality was excellent. Mr. H. Burgess won the dog challenge with Burgess Jack, an 11-months-old puppy which promises to develop into a "flyer." The S.A. puppy, Leabrook Ken, won in five classes, being beaten only by Burgess Jack. Kelpies have improved since last year.

Fox terriers had the largest entries in the show, but the quality was nothing special, though some of the young ones should make up into good dogs. It is a certainty that if the winners here were benched at a Sydney show they would be lucky to get cards. Wire-haired fox-terriers were wire hairs without coats. Irish terriers showed an improvement on previous years, Crow Gill Muddler (imp.) winning the challenge. There were a lot of good-shaped ones, but very few with the typical Irish terrier coats that used to be the vogue.

After the cross-judging was finished the judges met to decide various specials open to all. Their awards were remarkable for the run of success of Mrs. James Elliott with her field spaniels. The Haddon trophy for the best dog exhibited by a member of the Ladies' Kennel Club was won by her Champion Union Jack (imp.). She was also successful in the Holbeck trophy for the best brace of any breed bred by exhibitor, two pups sired by Union Jack, and showing great bone and quality, being the winners. She also scored the Iredell Cup for the best team of dogs (any breed) in the show. In the Amesfield Shield, for the best dog accompanied by its sire or dam, Miss Pinschof's Gordon setter Ch. Studley Nell was successful, and Mrs. Elliott's puppy was reserve—a fine record, of which that lady was justly proud.

POULTRY.

Questions relating to fancy or commercial poultry keeping, diseases, etc., should be addressed to "Ancona," Herald Office.

ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS.

Hobart.—The breeder you inquire about left this State three or four years ago.

Anxious.—The black fowls you speak of with yellow legs are not Minorcas, but Black Leghorns. This variety is now very popular in England. There are a few breeders here.

C.H.M.—It is undesirable to keep fowls and ducks in the same run, and by doing so you will not do well with either. Ducks eat up the food much more rapidly than fowls, with the result that the latter do not get their share; they also splash the water about, dirtying it and making the run wet and sloppy.

The secretary of Parkes P. and A. Association forwards the schedule of the annual show to be held next month. The poultry section has been revised, and brought up to date. There are 58 classes, embracing all the breeds, with 10s prize-money in each, which should attract a number of the suburban exhibitors.

Poulterers all over the city are declaiming against the high prices of poultry. Quantities are arriving largely, but the demand is such that extraordinary prices are being paid; 6s to 6s 3d was quite a regular price for Muscovy ducks on Thursday last, drakes going to 8s 9d. Small chickens were also at famine prices, while for turkeys 10d per lb live weight was not uncommon. Eggs also continue at prices much beyond usual July experience, new-laids averaging for the month 1s 6d per dozen, against 1s 4d for July of last year. Now that feed is almost normal, poultry-men should be doing well.

Perhaps few present-day poultry fanciers are aware that the obituary notice of the late Mr. W. Foulis, in Tuesday's "Herald" of last week, referred to one of the most enthusiastic Black Spanish fanciers, when that breed was enjoying popularity. When from 30 to 40 or more of this breed appeared annually in the show pen a large portion of them were usually contributed by Mr. Foulis, who always secured a good number of the prize cards.

Adelaide and suburbs is a great Malay stronghold, this breed of fowls having many admirers, keen competition obtaining at each of the annual shows. Believing in the excellence of their fowls, and ambitious to try conclusions with other States, the Malay Breeders' Club arranged that they would send a strong team of their best birds over to the Victorian Poultry and Kennel Club show, which was held last week. Forty-six of the best birds were picked out to do battle for the central State. Twenty pounds was subscribed to pay freight and attendants' expenses. The expedition, however, had, through no fault of its own, an inglorious ending. When the 46 birds were distributed amongst the eight classes provided for sex and colour, there was not a single Victorian or other opponent.

Everyone who has had any practical experience with incubators, realises the importance of an equable temperature throughout the hatch, and failing this many a valuable lot of eggs has been lost through the egg drawer becoming over-heated. An American manufacturer has provided his machine with a device, which makes such an accident practically impossible. It consists of an electric alarm bell, which sounds a clear, sharp note of warning the instant the temperature approaches the danger point.

A member of the House of Representatives, Illinois, lately introduced a bill in Congress requiring all railroads, steamship companies, and other carriers to provide food and water for poultry in transit, and the owners to provide crates of sufficient size to prevent overcrowding.

H.M. Consul of Odessa gives particulars regarding the poultry industry in Russia in a report which he recently submitted to the Board of Agriculture. Poultry farming has made progress in the more thickly populated parts, and the export of eggs has increased from 1686 millions, valued at £5,023,000 in 1899, to 2485 millions, worth £6,566,000. The increase in value is greater than in quantity, and is ascribed to the general rise in food prices. Besides eggs, there is a considerable export of dead fowls, the value of which rose from £834,000 to £1,509,000. In addition, feathers and down of the value of £190,000 are exported, so that the value of all poultry products amounts to £8,265,831, as against £3,857,098 in the year 1899. In spite of the increasing export and of the rising prices of poultry products, the consumption within the country increases, not only among well-to-do customers, but also among the producing peasant farmers themselves. In many places it is thought possible that, as the land becomes subdivided into small holdings poultry farming may supersede the cattle industry.

RHODE ISLAND REDS.

Here in Australia we usually follow or adopt the ever-changing English fashion in exhibition fowls, the breed or variety popular in the show pen in the old country being invariably so in Australia. We adopted the Cochins, Brahmas, Polish, Dorking, Spanish, Game, and other English show pen favourites, and as these respective sorts declined in favour oversea, they became unpopular here. The latter-day Plymouth Rocks, Langshans, Wyandottes, and Orpingtons which still monopolise the shows of the United Kingdom are with the addition of Leghorns, now the Australian exhibition favourites, and a newer breed with any chance of usurping their position must have some extraordinary utility claims. While so faithfully following in the English fashion in the fancy, there is one breed which of late years has made great strides in that country, and remarkable to state, although introduced here a number of years ago, has so far received but small patronage.

The Rhode Island fowl enjoys the distinction of being the only American variety of fowl named after a locality, and developed in the place which gave its name. It has the further unique distinction of being a breed with the making of which fanciers had nothing to do. It was made and bred for years in the locality in which it originated, until it became practically the common fowl of the district of Rhode Island before it was taken up by fanciers at all.

The history of its development is interesting, but too lengthy for reproduction. The breed originated as far back as 1854, and evolved from crosses of other breeds in the possession of two teamsters, and up to about 25 years ago were known as the Tripp and Macomber fowls, the names of the carriers who originated them. Some 18 or 20 years ago, when the farmers had got the breed to a definite shape and colour, by the introduction of other blood, the fanciers took it in hand, further improved them, and in 1897 were instrumental in securing a class for them at Providence, R.I. Two years after a class was made at Boston, and from that time to the present, with a slight reaction, the breed has been literally booming, the entries this present year at Boston numbering 275 single exhibits, and 93 breeding pens. English fanciers, always on the look out for something new, a few years ago imported several trios. These were favourably received, and more followed, with the result that the bulk of the English shows now make classes for them, the numbers exhibited often exceeding either Wyandottes or Orpingtons. Although Australians have not taken to the breed, the reds are no strangers here. At the Hawkesbury College third egg-laying competition, a Dr. Martin, of America, sent over a pen. They, however, only got into eighteenth place, and averaged 176 eggs per hen. These birds were retained in this State, but it is thought they died out, as did the progeny of some imported for the Wagga Experimental Farm. The birds, however, were of poor shape, while in colour they were very much removed from present day requirements—a rich mahogany red.

Exhibition male birds should be a rich mahogany red, with back and shoulders darker, and black tail; the under colour should be free from grey, which is a general fault.

The hens are a lighter shade, with black tail, and the lower end of the hackle tipped with black. The skin and legs should be a bright yellow. The standard weights are 8½lb for cocks and 6½lb for hens. The shape is approaching that of the Wyandotte, but longer in back and legs. They are to be had in single and rose-combs. There is a good deal of difficulty experienced in breeding birds to an exhibition colour, the tendency of the breed being to go lighter each year. They are, however, more celebrated for utility qualities, and should they become popular and plentiful here, it will be for the eggs they lay, and their plump carcase, rather than looks.

SOBER TEACHERS.

DEFENDED BY PARENTS.

CASINO, Tuesday.

At a meeting of the Parents and Citizens' Association the following motion was carried, —"That this meeting desires to express its strong indignation at, and to record its emphatic protest against, the unfounded statement made at the recent Farmers and Settlers' Conference reflecting on the sobriety of school teachers, and further declares that as a body largely represented in Casino and district, the teachers without exception cannot be truthfully charged with inebriety, and that they are credit to the Educational Department."

PATIENT'S LONG JOURNEY.

MELBOURNE, Tuesday.

The three-year-old daughter of Mr. Camm, of Dargo, on Thursday upset a can of boiling fat, and was severely burnt all over the lower portion of her body and legs. The little sufferer had to be driven 70 miles over terribly rough roads to Sale, where she was attended to by a doctor. She is in a critical condition.

RIVERINA RAILWAY PROPOSAL.

CLEAR HILLS TO MULWALA.

Before the Public Works' Committee yesterday the Under-Secretary (Mr. W. J. Hanna) gave evidence regarding the proposal to construct a railway line from Clear Hills to Mulwala and thus furnish an outlet into Victoria for the Riverina.

The proposed line would, by linking up others in the course of construction, assure a direct route from The Rock to Mulwala, via Lockhart, Urana, Clear Hills, and Savernake, and the country between the Narrandera-Jerilderie-Berrigan-Finley-Tocumwal line, and the Culcairn-Corowa line would be evenly divided.

Mr. Hanna said the proposed line between Clear Hills and Mulwala would be 32 miles 29 chains in length, and cost about £128,730 to construct, using 60lb rails, or £3991 a mile, exclusive of land and compensation. One in 100 would be the ruling grade, and the sharpest curve on the line would be 20 chains in radius. The proposed railway commenced at 404 miles 31 chains 43 links from Sydney at the end of the authorised line from Lockhart to Clear Hills at the end of the station site in Clear Hills, and by proceeding in a south-westerly direction for about 10 miles would cross Wongamong Creek and the main road from Jerilderie to Bull Plain and Ringwood. About a mile south of the latter crossing the line took an almost due south direction to Savernake and onward on the eastern side of the main road to Mulwala, where the line bent south-westerly and ran parallel to and between Lucan and Manners streets in that township. An alternative route had been suggested which would pass through Bull Plain and Ringwood. Its length was 34 miles, and the cost was estimated at £129,000. Another route lay between the two, 32 miles long, and this route, it was estimated, would cost £128,000. It was anticipated there would be a loss of £5404 on the line annually.

NEW MUSIC.

Messrs. Nicholson and Co. forward "Two Songs" (under one cover), by Ethel Wright, entitled "Farewell" and "A Legend." The former of these provides an extremely simple theme for mezzo or contralto, which derives charm from an arpeggio accompaniment in which are many plaintive harmonies. By way of contrast "A Legend" furnishes a joyously animated measure, and makes an effective little song.

Messrs. W. H. Paling and Co. publish "An Ocean Life," words and music by Fred. T. Smith, and introduced in public by Mr. Horace Stevens. This is a rattling, rollicking nautical number, and would catch on with vaudeville audiences or at a popular concert. The refrain, quite possibly by chance, bears a close resemblance to a comic song with the chorus "She Won't Get Home To-night."

Messrs. Paling and Co. forward the Academic Edition, No. 503, consisting of "Musical Questions with Complete Answers." These have been skilfully prepared by Maude Guilgault, a musician of evident experience.

EXECUTIVE APPOINTMENTS.

The following appointments have been approved of by the Executive Council:—

Judge Rogers, K.C. (South-western district), to exercise jurisdiction in the metropolitan district for one month from the 12th proximo.

Judge Docker (Western district), to exercise jurisdiction in the metropolitan district from the 1st to 9th proximo, and in the South-western district from the 10th proximo to September 9.

Mr. W. G. H. Smith to act as a stipendiary magistrate at Sydney from the 30th instant.

Mr. A. O. Butler as police magistrate, etc., at Narrabri.

Mr. W. H. Parker as coroner at Bobadah, and for the State generally.

Mr. P. T. Doyle as deputy coroner at Wollongong and a coroner for the State generally.

Dr. H. T. Alsop as Government medical officer and vaccinator at Bowral.

Dr. A. P. Gillespie as medical officer of the Lock Hospital at Goulburn gaol.

The Rev. T. K. Pitt as honorary Church of England chaplain to the gaol at Hay.

Messrs. V. Cornfield and H. P. Mulligan as mining surveyors.

Dr. H. D. Baret as junior medical officer, on probation for six months, Hospital for Consumptives, Waterfall.

Mr. M. Rorrison as draftsman in-charge, Local Land Board Office, Goulburn.

Mr. E. W. Moroney as deputy shipping master, Newcastle.

Mr. J. G. Johnston as inspector of stock for the pastures protection district of Wilcannia.

Captain A. Thomson, on probation, as first mate, pilot steamer Captain Cook.

Mr. S. G. Ferguson as first-class pilot at the port of Newcastle.

Mr. H. J. Kelly, temporary foreman, Nyngan Demonstration Farm, on the permanent staff, Department of Agriculture, as manager of such farm.

Mr. A. T. R. Brown, on probation, as assistant dairy instructor, Hawkesbury Agricultural College.

Miss N. M. Booth as teacher of cookery, Department of Public Instruction.

SKIN AFFECTION FROM HEAD TO FOOT.

"I wish to say I was suffering for about six weeks with a skin affection which broke out all of a sudden in boils like water blisters all over my body. In fact, I was covered from head to foot with them. They were very itchy, and when I scratched them they became very sore, and I did not know what to do, as I could get no rest night or day, the pains being terrible. I tried different kinds of medicine, but they still kept breaking out. I then saw an advertisement recommending Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment for ailments of the skin, so thought I would give it a trial. I used to have a warm bath, using the Cuticura Soap, after which I applied the Cuticura Ointment to the sores, and was at once greatly relieved of the great pain I had been suffering. I used to bathe them twice a day, and within a fortnight the sores had disappeared altogether, and my skin became quite clear and smooth, and I am now glad to say the cure is a permanent one, as the trouble has not returned." (Signed) W. A. Wilson, 80 Burren-street, Erskineville, Sydney, N.S.W., May 12, 1911.

Although Cuticura Soap and Ointment are sold throughout the world, a sample of Cuticura Ointment, with 32-page book, will be mailed free on application to R. Towns and Co., Dept. 31 K, Sydney, N.S.W.—Advt.

ON THE LAND.

FARM AND STATION.

GRADING FARM PRODUCE.

There is ample room for improvement in the manner in which farm produce generally is prepared and marketed in this State. Mr. E. D. Butler, an inspector of the Department of Agriculture, who has devoted a good deal of attention to the subject, has much that is interesting to say in regard to the paramount importance of raising the standard of Australian products in the world's markets, and it behoves the farmers, with this end in view, to pay more attention to the grading and general "get up" of their products than is frequently found to be the case.

It has been said that success in farming depends upon an aggregate of small profits, and it may be stated, with equal truth, that failure is often, if not always, due to an aggregate of small losses. It cannot be denied that in marketing farm produce the art of taking infinite pains is essential to profit, and the lack of it ensures certain loss. Anyone may be convinced of this if he take a walk through the market streets or along the wharfs, where fruit and produce are extensively handled. Mr. Butler, who is recognised as an authority on the most improved methods to be followed in grading produce, is on sure ground when he says that painstaking care and patience will generally result in building up an enviable reputation, securing for his shipments top prices, because of their known unvarying good quality. When a producer desires to build up such a reputation, it will pay him to adopt a special brand or mark, having first ascertained from his commission agent that his brand will not interfere with any other on the market. He should then make a rule, from which there must never be any deviation, to use it only on his choicest products. Anything not being up to the standard should be sold under a different brand.

After attending to the quality, another important consideration is the packing—a point upon which Mr. Butler holds very decided views. The farmer, after a study of the route his produce has to take, might convince himself of this. Nearly all the produce grown in this State is marketed in bags, and ere it reaches the market it is probably subjected to several miles' haulage in a dray from farm to railway or steamer over a more or less rough road; then, perhaps, hurried and careless handling, possibly some days in transit, perhaps in an ill-ventilated tuck or hold of a steamer, unloaded on the wharf, reloaded on waggon for transhipment or conveyance to store. It is thus obvious that there is a necessity for extreme care. To pack properly requires experience. Growing the crop is only half the farmer's business. He must not only produce what the people want, but put his goods up in as attractive a condition as possible, so that they will commend themselves to buyers. Instances are not wanting where the neglect of these important considerations has not only resulted in immediate losses, but important trade has been transferred to other markets and lost for years, perhaps permanently, and there is no doubt that the change was not owing to any superiority in the quality of the goods, but simply because the successful competitors paid more attention to details and took more pains to satisfy the convenience and tastes of the buyers. The farmer should be well aware of the main points to remember when preparing his produce for market. These points are neatness, cleanness, and uniformity. It may be accepted as practically an unvarying truth that the finest produce will not bring the highest price if packed in unattractive packages. Nor is it safe to aim at anything but the highest price for good produce, for should a shipment deficient in any way as to style, neatness, form, etc., happen to reach the market, either when the demand is right or the supply excessive, it will perhaps remain unnoticed until the best lines have been picked up, and then, the demand having been supplied, it must await the next day's buyers, suffering severely by the delay.

CO-OPERATION.

The need for co-operation in the fruit-growing industry is strikingly exemplified by the low margin of profit shown in the returns to hand of the recent shipments of apples to England from the Bathust Experiment Farm, and also from apple orchards in the same district. The actual net return for 494 cases was only £88 18s 5d, which, allowing for the cost of the cases, gives a net return of 3s 1½d per case. A leading Bathurst grower found that the cost for freight, agents' charges, etc, came out as high as 6s a case. It is pointed out by the Department of Agriculture that the net return is only about half the local value of similar fruit at the time of despatch or at the time of sale, and is not remunerative under present conditions. There may be special reasons which operated against the return of a fair margin of profit, but it is beyond doubt that much could be accomplished by co-operation as an offset against the high charges. The grower is often too much at the mercy of agents and brokers, and is unfortunately often compelled to take what he can get, knowing at the same time that the consumer is paying an exorbitant price. The latter is certainly keenly interested in any steps likely to bring the grower and himself closer together. Undoubtedly unity among the growers would result in their getting a better return for their produce, and the consumer obtaining cheaper fruit.

The ideal position can only be reached by co-operation, and by the growers taking full advantage of the most modern methods in connection with the industry, such as cold storage, canning, preserving, jam-making, or any factor which will mitigate the effects arising from the perishable nature of their produce. Apart from marketing, co-operation in securing labour, manure, spraying material, cases, and so on, would be of direct material value. Definite results cannot be achieved unless there is co-operation amongst at least the great majority of growers. With proper organisation the fruit-growing industry would be revolutionised while the local market would be controlled in a legitimate way. The export trade could also be regulated so as to secure the best results. Until the fruitgrowers come together, determined to act for themselves, the industry can hardly be expected to be permanently placed upon a sound and prosperous basis.

ENGLISH WOOL TRADE.

VALUES STILL TENDING UPWARDS.

(FROM OUR SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT.)

BRADFORD, June 28.

Once more the unexpected has happened, and the kaleidoscope presents a different view from what it did a week ago. The picture is brighter, more inspiring than it was last week, and should encourage the majority of those who are connected with the raw material. At the same time, there are some whose feelings with regard to this latest turn of events are not very pleasant, the man's attitude depending entirely upon his own position. Diverse opinions are expressed regarding merinos, crossbreds, and English wools, some favourable and others the opposite. I have long since learnt to disregard the plaintive remarks of any section of the trade, being content to record actual facts, and to describe in plain English the general tendency of markets. No doubt everybody likes to see prices move up when they have their warehouses full of the raw material, but, as was pointed out during the past two or three weeks, the turned tide has been coming in with steadily increasing force, and now that this is recognised all alike wish they had had larger stocks of raw material in hand.

MERINOS IN SELLERS' FAVOUR.

Looking first of all at fine wools, it cannot be said that much more money can yet be made, but they certainly occupy a sounder position than they did a week ago. These have had a turn during the past month, and all through the recent vacation have occupied a very strong position. Directly the last series of London sales finished prices were put up to 26d, and some were bold enough to ask 26½d for their standard 64's; but they never sold, and about a month after even merinos sagged a little, until 64's were bought as low as 25½d in some instances, some big topmakers taking 25½d for their well-known standard makes. Spinners fully availed themselves of the opportunity thus presented, and no sooner had topmakers sold all they wanted to than they went back again to their old figures, a big business taking place a fortnight ago in merinos at 26d and 26½d for 64's. One or two topmakers have been able to sell at 26½d, but they are exceptions. However, the majority are standing firm at that quotation to-day, and circumstances justify their attitude. In a few days we shall know the actual standing of merinos, and I am confident that an average 64's will cost at least 26½d next week in Coleman-street. In fact, some of the wool bought last series cost this price, and as no ease is anticipated topmakers cannot afford to take less than they are doing. A fair amount of new business has been put through during the past week, prices are firmer than ever, and there is every indication of the market continuing firm, even if it does not gain strength. During the past fortnight some good weights of Botany yarns have been disposed of, mostly whites, and to-day the majority of spinners are asking ¼d to ½d per lb more. There is no doubt about Botany spinners being well supplied with work, and in many cases they can run well on towards the end of the year with the orders in hand.

CROSSBREDS DEARER.

The event of the week in wool circles has been the upward turn of crossbreds, and after some big sales have taken place in both tops and yarns, prices have been advanced. To-day, quotations are mostly ½d dearer than a week ago, and crosbred topmakers are firmer in their attitude than they have been since the close of the second series of London sales. I am afraid that only too much of the business has been done at quotations current ten days ago; in fact, I am certain the bulk of the contracts have been fixed upon that basis. Some realised what was going to happen nearly a fortnight ago, and stiffened their backs accordingly. Topmakers who produce a decent article could sell to-day further big quantities of 40's at 12½d, and 46's carded at 14½d, but they have closed their books, and are unwilling sellers unless they can command ½d more; some even want ¾d. There is no doubt about crossbreds being stiffer all round, and to my mind the strongest feature of all is the general recognition of the soundness of the wool situation. Raw material appears to be wanted, and there is every likelihood that at the forthcoming series of London sales, crossbred wool will sell most readily. The volume of business done this last few days is less than earlier in the week, spinners refusing to pay more money. Still, topmakers are as independent as ever. They know that Coleman-street will bring no relief, for it is certain that every quality of wool will fetch higher prices than those current in Bradford to-day. At 13½d for 40's, it is possible to get just a shade profit, and what a topmaker is certainly entitled to, and those who have been taking less than 13½d have only been changing one shilling for twelve pennies. Crossbred noils continue to move very freely, and 9½d is still easily obtained for average 40's, with 9¾d for 46's carded. The home trade seems to be taking the bulk of the former, probably because of the activity seen in the blanket trade.

A MOVE IN MOHAIR.

Considerable activity has been seen in the mohair world during the past three weeks, the business done being mostly confined to the centres of production. For many months prices have been sagging, until the raw material has now got down to a very low level. It has been my contention all along that directly users felt a safe level had been reached there would be a big buy. Something like 16,000 bags have been bought at Constantinople during the past three weeks, and between four and five thousand bales at Port Elizabeth. This represents a big buy, and the bulk of the mohair has been secured at bottom rates. This week we are advised that prices have now advanced about ½d, but even yet values are very reasonable. There has been no corresponding move at this end, though a few spinners have booked a fair amount of new business. With better accounts from Russia regarding the prospect of a good harvest, it is felt that the outlook has considerably improved. At the same time, we see little reason why there should be a material advance in values, for stocks are very heavy, particularly at Constantinople. What we need more than anything else is the placing of large yarn contracts; but seemingly they are not forthcoming to the extent one would like to see; still, the corner has been turned, and the outlook is considerably brighter.

OUTLOOK FOR LONDON SALES.

The third series of London sales will commence next Tuesday, and already that event is being looked forward to with a fair amount of interest. That there will be some good sittings goes without saying. The dockers' strike, involving the inability of owners to get wool out of the river into the warehouses, is responsible for more anxiety than anything else. We expect good combing merinos will move up about 5 per cent., and ordinary faulty wools will remain firm at last sales' best rates. Fine crossbreds will probably advance about 5 per cent., but medium and coarse ordinary topmaking wools should come at last sales' top values, though American crossbreds will probably show an improvement of ½d to 1d per lb.

BATHURST DISTRICT.

THE RECENT RAINFALL.

BATHURST.—A striking illustration of the uncertainty and the irregularity of the rainfall in the west is provided by Bathurst. At the State experimental farm the rainfall for the five months preceding the breaking-up of the dry spell on June 9 totalled 275 points; during the past seven weeks 717 points have fallen over 20 days. The result is that the land has received a good soaking. This, with the absence of frosts, and the mild conditions, has resulted in a greater growth of pasturage than is usual at this time of the year, and everything points to an early spring. Some seasonable weather, combined with frosts and sunny days, would now be welcome; the frosts would be desirable in checking the fruit buds to prevent premature bursting, and the subsequent injury by later frosts. The very wet conditions have in no small measure interfered with ploughing and seeding operations throughout the district. The prospects of the late crops are much brighter, as sufficient rain has already fallen to see them half grown. If favourable showers follow fair crops should be harvested.

Much has been written lately respecting the conservation of soil moisture. Mr. R. W. Peacock, the manager of the experiment farm, states that the question is: What will be the value of the seven inches which have already fallen? Seven inches, he says, are half enough to grow a 30-bushel crop of wheat, and would go a long way towards a good crop of maize, or would grow an indifferent crop of weeds. If the best is to be made of it for maize or autumn crops, the land, Mr. Peacock advises, should be ploughed now, and not after half of it has been pumped out by weeds. Ploughed lands will naturally receive a larger quantity of future falls, and conserve a maximum quantity of past rains. It would be good for the farmers, the district, and the State, in Mr. Peacock's opinion, if one-third of the area to be put under crop in the district next autumn were fallowed this spring. There is no question about the land being ploughable. A short fallow of about five months has proved the best practice in this district, and a forerunner of 30 and 40 bushel crops. Such yields may occasionally be obtained without, but they are the exception, and not the rule. They can be made the rule, says the manager, by a combination of forethought and ploughing.

VICTORIAN WHEAT LANDS.

MELBOURNE.—The area under wheat in Victoria is officially estimated at 2,505,000 acres, of which 2,205,000 acres are for grain, and 300,000 acres for hay. The stocks of wheat in Victoria on June 30, including flour, were 8,124,242 bushels, against 16,135,000 bushels at the corresponding date last year.

IRRIGATED CANE.

AMERICAN METHODS.

Mr. Nielsen, M.L.A., reporting upon his recent mission to America, makes the following observations:—

"In Honolulu I decided to make a thorough examination of the irrigation work being carried on on the island of Oahu, and with this object in view I visited all the important sugar, rice, and pineapple plantations on the island. Although the rainfall on this island is good, an enormous benefit accrues, especially to the sugar crops, by the application of additional water; the effect of keeping the cane continually growing not only improves its actual growth, but increases its sugar contents also, much more than compensating for the cost of the irrigation works and the extra labour required.

"Most of the water used is obtained from storage reservoirs and artesian wells, there being no rivers of importance on the island.

"The conditions existing, as far as labour is concerned, however, make it impossible to compare the work of irrigation here to similar work in Australia, as nearly all the labour employed is cheap coloured labour, paid at an average rate of a dollar a day.

"Owing to this cheap labour being employed very little labour-saving machinery is used. Practically the whole of the work that in a white country would be done by machinery is here done by actual hand labour; it appeared to me that owing to its cheapness there was a tendency to be careless as to the amount of labour used, and I believe, from what I saw going on, that on even the best managed plantations white labour, with the assistance of up-to-date machinery, would be cheaper in the end.

"The amount of money that has been and is being expended to bring water to these sugar plantations is enormous, and shows what value is put upon water, even if merely to supplement an already good rainfall, by those who have had experience in its use."

Ideal Desk Comfort.

SPEAKING in the broadest way a man's life is divided up pretty well between the Office, the Bed, and the Armchair. Certainly, the greater part of a man's life is passed at the desk, and it is remarkable how indifferent some people are with regard to the suitable furnishing of their offices.

In this regard a Roll-top Desk seems to be almost a necessity—your work can be left in an instant—locked up just as it lies on your desk, and on your return taken up where you left it. The privacy and comfort of the Roll-top make it an ideal convenience, and it is generally admitted to be a sine qua non for commercial men.

Hitherto America has had the monopoly of Office Furniture, but we think business men will readily admit that the above desk, which we make in our factories, is superior to anything we have had from U.S.A.

One glance tells you that it is cleaner, more sanitary—the sweeping brush can be got underneath; then it is made more accurately and solidly than are American desks. The Locks and Fittings are suporior, and the Drawers fit better; it is a better-looking article, and in spite of high local wages, the price is no higher. We quote as follows in Solid Oak:—

Double Pedestal, 50in., £12 10s.
Double Pedestal, 54in., £13 10s.
Double Pedestal, 60in., £14s 10s.
Single Pedestal, 42in., £9 10s.

Gentlemen are invited to inspect these beautiful Desks, and compare them for Style, Finish, Convenience, and Price with the imported article.

AUSTRALIAN PRODUCTS.

TRADE WITH RUSSIA.

MELBOURNE, Tuesday.

The External Affairs Department has received from the High Commissioner in London a copy of a letter from Mr. J. Neufield, a merchant in Warsaw, Russia, respecting the opportunities for creating a market in Russia for Australian products. "Australian butter," Mr. Neufield wrote, "could certainly be sent to Russia in the winter. When in Australia it is summer time, and the butter is cheap, it is dear with us here from October till the end of April. The duty amounts to about ½d per pound, and is scarcely worth taking notice of. Australian fruit could also be exported. Warsaw is the leading market for fruit, while in regard to wool Losz Tornxschoer, Zgiers, and Vralystenk must also be considered. Australian meat cannot be considered in regard to Russia. If, however, there is a product of the nature of the extract of meat, much business might be done with such an article. I should be pleased to give full information to any exporters of wool and other Australian products."

STUD SHEEP SHOW.

EXHIBITION IN MELBOURNE.

MELBOURNE, Monday.

The Australian Sheepbreeders' Association's annual exhibition of stud sheep was opened to-day at the rooms of Goldsbrough, Mort, and Co., Ltd., Bourke-street. Practically the whole day was occupied in judging nearly 400 exhibits, which were slightly fewer than last year. The character of sheep exhibited, with the exception of the merinos from Riverina, which were shown under unfavourable conditions, owing to drought, showed distinct improvement in quality compared with last year. Several pens of merinos which were in the non-competitive classes evoked the admiration of all who attended. They were exhibits of the Urangeline Company, Urangeline, N.S.W., and Messrs. F. S. Falkiner, Boonoke, N.S.W. The executors of W. J. Clarke, Cobran Station, Deniliquin were successfull in the merino (strong wool) section. They secured championship prizes for a grass-fed ewe and a hand-fed or grass-fed ewe, first and second prizes for grass-fed rams under 1½ year, first and second prizes for grass-fed ewes over 2½ years, first and second prizes for grass-fed ewes under 2½ years and over 1½ year, first and second prizes for grass-fed ewes under 1½ year, second prize for grass-fed ram under 2½ years and over 1½ year, and second prize for a grass-fed ram over 2½ years.

PROSPEROUS FARMERS.

NEED FOR COMBINATION.

WELLINGTON (N.Z.).—Addressing the annual conference of the New Zealand Farmers' Union, Mr. Wilson, president, referring to the Farmers and Settlers' Association in Australia said:—"Their danger ahead is that freehold is threatened, and their fight will be long and strenuous as ours has been, though I hope to see the fight won here soon. In Victoria, and generally all over the Commonwealth, farmers are awakening to the necessity for combination, much on the lines of our union. There is much to congratulate farmers and New Zealand on during the past 12 months. All classes of those who make a living upon the land have prospered. How could it be else, seeing that prices have been good, though the output has not been equal to last year? Probably the portion of the industry we are connected with which affects beneficially the greatest number is dairying." Referring to the extraordinary growth of the dairy industry, he said it was little short of miraculous. Butter factories should be able to pay out 1s and cheese factories 1s 2d per lb for butter fat. Great strides had been made in the industry, and the milking machine had improved the conditions under which the farmer worked.

MODEL FARM AT GILGANDRA.

FRUIT-GROWING POSSIBILITIES.

GILGANDRA.—Messrs. Leveridge and Foley, owners of Caringa farm, comprising 200 acres within a mile of Gilgandra station, have determined to make it a model farm. Within the last few months they have transformed the property, which is now parklike in appearance. There are several kinds of soil on the property, and as the owners were determined to put it to the best possible use they brought an expert from Sydney to report on it. After analysing the soil he stated that the land was the best he had seen in the State for grapes and citrus fruits. Acting under his advice, they have decided to plant a large vineyard and orchard, and have planted a variety of fruit trees. There are 150 acres under wheat, 35 acres planted with lucerne, and the remainder is being prepared for corn and potatoes, and market garden produce. The future of the farm will be watched with keen interest, as it will show what can be grown in a district on a comparatively small area.

AGRICULTURAL SOCIETIES.

BARRABA.—At the annual meeting of the Pastoral, Agricultural, and Horticultural Association, the annual report stated that the show returned an actual credit of £62. The following officers were elected:—President, Mr. O. H. Carter (re-elected); vice-presidents, Messrs. D. Capel, H. B. Jackson, W. J. Morrow, W. P. Wilson; hon. treasurer, Mr. G. S. Evans (re-elected). Dates of next show were fixed for March 2, 3, and 4.

MEETINGS OF FARMERS.

BOWRAVILLE.—The officers elected by Bowraville Agricultural Association were:—President, Mr. J. W. Attwood; treasurer, Mr. W. J. Tuck; secretary, Mr. C. S. Cliff.

CASINO.—At the annual meeting of the Kyogle A. and I. Society the report showed that the debit balance had been reduced by £126. Mr. R. E. Alcorn was re-elected president, and Mr. L. W. Westwood treasurer.

CROOKWELL.—At the annual meeting of the Crookwell Agricultural, Pastoral, and Horticultural Society, the report and balance-sheet for the past year showed that the debit balance of about £85, owing at the beginning of the year, had been paid off, and there was now a credit balance of about £27. The following officers were elected:—President, Mr. C. T. Clifton; hon. treasurer, Mr. J. Keith; hon. secretary, Mr. M. P. Levy.

MUDGEE.—The Farmers and Settlers' Association here has decided to affiliate with the head association. A request has been made that an organiser be sent to the district. Many names have been added to the membership, as the result of a fortnight's canvass by Mr. T. Waterworth.

QUEANBEYAN.—At the annual meeting of the P. and A. Association it was resolved to revert back to the holding of spring shows. The officers elected were:—President, Mr. R. Moore; hon. treasurer, Mr. A. H. Croaker; auditors, Messrs. W. S. Cantle and L. Dunshea.

DAIRYING.

CESSNOCK.—At the 10th half-yearly meeting of shareholders of the Cessnock Co-operative Dairy Company, Ltd., the directors showed a further large increase of business and cash turnover. The amount of cream treated during the six months was 560,528lb, producing 103¾ tons of butter, for which £12,277 5s 6d was distributed amongst suppliers. This amount is the largest turnover yet made by the company for six months. The export portion of the company's business had this year been unsatisfactory owing to the English coal and transport strikes and the fact that the Sydney market prices were too high for export business to be profitable. The company had paid top Sydney rates throughout the term. The report urged that more care be taken with cream, also the necessity of more frequent deliveries in the summer months. The directors recommended a dividend of 7½ per cent. to shareholders.

DENMAN.—The dairying industry is making rapid strides, and several new suppliers have opened accounts at the local factory, which is now increasing its output weekly.

GRAFTON.—Last month the Grafton Dairy Company, Ltd., paid for first-class butter 1/0½ per lb, second-class /11½; pork, /3½ to /3½. The total pay was £1800. The supply was considerably below that of May, many dairymen having turned their herds out. Carrot weed is now making its appearance, and some of the cream is tainted with the flavour.

ULMARRA.—The Pioneer Dairy Company (Ulmarra) for the half-year ending June 30 manufactured 350 tons butter, a decrease of 103 tons compared with the same period last year, due to the dry weather experienced. The quantity of second-class butter manufactured was 4¼ per cent. of the output. The total amount realised for butter was £42,343, an increase of £1332 over the corresponding period last year. The average price paid was 12.94d per lb for all grades. The profit and loss account showed a profit of £890. The sum of £36,867 was paid to suppliers.

DISTRICT ITEMS.

INMAN.—This district has benefited considerably by the recent rains, which during the month have totalled nearly five inches.

QUEANBEYAN.—Following the rain, bitterly cold weather prevailed, which will be hard on the weak stock.

RICHMOND.—Nearly five inches of rain fell in five days, whilst 760 points were recorded for the month. A magnificent spring is anticipated. The river is coming down rapidly to summer level.

TAMWORTH.—Farmers are becoming anxious at the absence of frosts, fearing that they may hold off till late in the season. The crops are coming along rapidly, and the frosts are needed to strengthen them and retard growth. At present there appear no prospects of the weather clearing.

WEST WYALONG.—Stockowners are beginning to count their sheep and cattle, and with regard to the former find that the losses have been very severe; more so than anticipated in many cases. Though deaths of stock from starvation have nearly ceased, some owners are still handfeeding large stock, which do not yet find much benefit from the young grass.

YERONG CREEK.—The steady, soaking rain which has been experienced here for the greater part of the present week could not have come at a more opportune time to benefit the Riverina wheat areas, and now everything seems to promise a good harvest. Stock are now beginning to thrive, but the clip will be thin and broken, and far from good. The losses have been very heavy, and the lambing has been a complete failure. Among lambing ewes the losses were very severe, and in some instances amounted to 75 per cent.

PROFIT IN PUMPKINS.

Growers of pumpkins in the Singleton district have been paid many thousands of pounds during the last few months. One farmer, on about 17 acres, is reported to have netted £230, or about an average of £13 10s per acre; and from the reports of the profitableness of the crop in different parts of the district, no doubt there are many others who have done quite as well. At the railway station it is a common occurrence to see a string of drays and waggons unloading pumpkins.

AGRICULTURAL SHOWS.

JERILDERIE.—The forty-third annual show of the Riverina Pastoral and Agricultural Society opened yesterday. There were splendid entries in all classes, except sheep. The cattle entries exceed previous years. There is a fair number of entries in farm and dairy produce. Awards:—

Soft milling wheat: S. Wilson, 1; Miss Pearce, 2. Hard milling wheat: S. Wilson, 1. Wheaten chaff: Wilson, 1; W. F. Comans, 2. Wheaten hay: G. D. Theakstone. Ensilage: S. Wilson. 3lb of salt butter: Mrs. M'Gee, 1; Mrs. Wilson, 2. 3lb of fresh butter: Mrs. M'Gee, 1; Mrs. Wilson, 2. Seventeen entries of sides of bacon; Mrs. Theakstone. Collection of hams and bacon: Mrs. Theakstone, 1 and 2. Collection of vegetables: H. Lang. Collection of fruits: H. Lang. There was a large number of entries in the food and cookery sections. Some fine jumping of the military remounts and hunters was witnessed, but the judging of these will be made later.

ATTEMPTS AT SUICIDE.

MELBOURNE, Tuesday.

Early on Sunday morning Mrs. Donohue informed the Collingwood police that she had seen her son Henry, aged 23, going down the yard towards the stable with a piece of rope. She was afraid he intended to do himself some violence.

A constable returned with Mrs. Donohue, and on entering the stable found the man suspended by the neck by a piece of rope, which had been tied to a rafter in the roof. He appeared to be dead, and the constable made a determined effort to resuscitate him. The St. John Ambulance was sent for, and when they arrived the man opened his eyes, and inquired who had hit him. He asked one of the ambulance officers for a cigarette.

He was subsequently charged with attempting to commit suicide. Some time ago Donohue was committed for trial on a similar charge.

CURLEW'S INCIDENT.

MARINE MISUNDERSTANDING.

CAPTAINS AT VARIANCE.

Of the many events that occurred at sea during the great southerly gale of a fortnight ago public attention was directed to the then missing scow, Curlew, by the report of her whereabouts obtained on arrival at Sydney from the big Tyser liner Star of India. Captain D. Smythe, the master of the Curlew, gives another version of what took place. He writes to the editor under date South-west Rocks, July 24, as follows:—

"I have seen the report of the Star of India and the version put forward of the interview between both vessels. The report from the steamer regarding the sea being too rough is beyond my conception, as we had but two hoists of our flags, and they were quite unnecessary, as we held a conversation by mouth for fully 20 minutes. When I first saw the steamer I hoisted 'W.O.' (want doctor). He took no notice of me until I sighted the Orient steamer going north, when I hoisted 'N.C.' (want assistance). Then the Star of India was fully three miles south of me, and seeing the Orient boat inside of me the captain ran back and came close under my quarters, and without flags asked me if I required any assistance, as he had no doctor on board. I told him my mate was seriously injured, and he said 'Send him in your boat.' I then informed him that my boat was damaged, and that my oars were gone. I asked him to send his boat. We could hear quite clearly every word spoken without a megaphone. I consider it most cruel to have been left unaided. If, as the Star of India stated, the sea was so bad, why did he ask me to send my old boat, with men suffering from the knocking about we had for 48 hours' previous? Every man of us were wet to the skin during that time, and could not get a proper meal. I have lowered not once but on many occasions in much worse weather than when the Star of India was alongside of me."

CAPTAIN KEARNEY'S REJOINDER.

Captain F. J. Kearney, master of the steamer Star of India, explained yesterday that the signals "N.C." (requiring assistance) were not observed by him or by those on his vessel, until long after he had turned back.

"I went back," said he, "purely on what I regarded as a mission of humanity. I considered those on board might be in need of assistance of some kind. When we drew up in the first place, the scow had no flags up of any kind. Two were subsequently hoisted. I took it from the signals that they wanted a surgeon. I replied I had not one, and asked, 'What ship?' While I was at breakfast, the third officer reported that they had taken no notice of my inquiry. I thought, however, that I had better go back. I got within 30 yards of the scow, which was then flying 'N.C.'—intended, I thought, to attract the attention of the Orient boat. I saw this signal only as I neared the little vessel. It had nothing whatever to do with my motive in turning back. I spoke through a megaphone, and could probably have been heard, but none of us could hear those on the scow, who did not use a megaphone. I waited about for an hour, while terrific rain squalls were on, and the scow made no attempt to come under my lee. It could not have been expected that a 13,000-ton vessel could manoeuvre up to a 90-tonner. At all events, before we left we understood that the scow was all right, and that those on board of her desired only that we should report her to Sydney.

"A boat from the steamer could not have taken a man from the scow, unless," added the captain, "the latter came under our lee. This she did not do. What I could not understand also was—why those on the scow, having all possible sails set, did not make for the Clarence River, which was on our lee the whole time."

TRADE FACILITIES.

IMPROVEMENTS SOUGHT.

MELBOURNE, Tuesday.

Resolutions were agreed to at the recent annual meeting of the Associated Chambers of Commerce, Melbourne, in favour of reciprocal trade with other British dominions, the resumption of the Vancouver steamship service, improvement in the lighting of the Australian coast, simplification of quarantine regulations, the procuring of correct returns of import and export statistics at important ports, and sympathetic administration of the regulations concerning the importation of cornsacks and other Calcutta goods. These were yesterday presented to the Minister for Customs (Mr. Tudor), who promised to give them serious consideration.

THE TURF.

THE PAST AND COMING SEASONS.

The racing season 1911-12, which closes to-day, is easily the most prosperous in the annals of the Australian turf. The prize money distributed during the year has not hitherto been equalled, and, taken all round, the sport appears to be in a very healthy condition right through the Commonwealth. The steady progress which has always been the policy of the governing body in this State has not been relaxed, and large sums of money have been expended on improvements at headquarters in order to meet the ever-increasing demands of transit and stand accommodation. During the last twelve months the transit problem has been virtually solved by platform extensions and an increase in the number of tracks, whereby sufficient cars can be kept in reserve to furnish a continuous procession when the outgoing traffic has to be handled, and its distribution to the city and suburbs has been expedited by the linking up of the various tramlines. In that respect Randwick now compares more than favourably with any racecourse in Australia. Though great additions have been made to the stand accommodation in the reserves, much more is required. This has been fully recognised by the executive, and already the conversion of the grand stand into a "double-decker" has been sanctioned, but, owing to causes over which the club has no control—the coal and shipping strikes in England—it has been impossible to obtain the material required for its construction. But, even when that work is completed, there will not be enough seating accommodation for attendances similar to those at the last spring and autumn meetings, and the committee will find it necessary to make provision for further extensions in the very near future. In the matter of prize money, the best traditions of the club have been ably upheld, and, with added money amounting to £61,500, for distribution during the coming season, the prestige of the premier club in Australasia is not likely to be dimmed; and when it is considered that no less than £26,000 of that sum is devoted to the classic races for two and three year-olds and other w.f.a. events, it must be admitted that the governing body is fulfilling its mission by providing the greatest inducements for the breeding of horses possessing speed and stamina.

WINNING SIRES.

FOR THE SEASON 1911-12.

The first instalment of statistics of the winning sires of the racing season, 1911-12, which closes to-day, appears in the current issue of the "Sydney Mail." There are over 150 stallions included in the table, which deals only with horses whose progeny won £500 or over in stakes. The list is headed by Maltster, who for three years in succession has held pride of place, and whose sons and daughters have credited him with £34,494. Wallace is again in second place, but this time his score is £27,626—about £8000 more than his total for last year, the principal contributors to his aggregate being Trafalgar and Wolowa. Imported Flavus has also made a pronounced forward move without the aid of any of the big money prizes, and now occupies the position of a good third with £18,022; while imported Ayr Laddie comes next with £16,053, but he tops the poll as regards the number of winners, his stock having secured 139½ races, or 19 more than did the progeny of Flavus. Bobadil succeeds Ayr Laddie with £13,284, in which is included Australia's richest prize—the Melbourne Cup, won by The Parisian. St. Alwyne (imp.) heads the others with over £12,000, and is slightly in advance of imported Pistol, who is followed by Positano (imp.), San Francisco (imp.), Sir Tristram (imp.), Simmer (imp.), Orzil (imp.), and Havoc, who are all over the £6000 mark. Winners imported from England bring in several well-known sires belonging to Great Britain, included among whom are Wildfowler, Persimmon, Santoi, and Rock Sand; and among the New Zealand sires represented are Soult, Seaton Delaval, Stepniak, Merriwee, Royal Fusilier, and Calibre, whose progeny have won races in the Commonwealth.

NEW ZEALAND RACING CONFERENCE.

The Legislative interference with racing in New Zealand, by the reduction of totalisator permits during the past year, was trenchantly referred to by Sir George Clifford in his opening address to the delegates of the New Zealand Racing Conference on the 18th instant.

"We have now had one complete season's test of the ill-advised legislation which so unduly restricted the days of racing within the Dominion," said Sir George, "and even if we admit that some few of the many racing clubs abused their trust, or failed to justify their existence, or were in undue proximity to neighbouring courses, no justification existed in this widely distributed and growing community, for a cast-iron legislation, curtailing the recreations of the people and preventing their legitimate expansion in proportion to increasing population. This hysteric law-making must finally result in depriving many country districts of an annual holiday, or in seriously injuring those greater meetings which are chiefly instrumental in encouraging the breeding of the best class of horses. Let us hope that saner counsels will prevail, and that our legislators may learn in the near future that an ample supply of high-class thoroughbred sires is essential for breeding good cavalry and general utility horses. The restrictive enactments have been based on want of knowledge and false analogies. The average inhabitant of New Zealand, with its many centres of population, cannot attend one-tenth of the race meetings available to the Englishman with his perfect system of race trains, or to the dwellers in the principal Australian cities, whose opportunities recur almost every week. I maintain that we need more racing and more weight-for-age contests of the best class. Crush down abuses with the firmest of hands, but do not involve in one common ruin the imperfections of a great industry and its undeniable advantages to the State."

Referring to the reforms that have been effected during the 25 years' existence of the Racing Conference as a governing body, he said that the most powerful influences that had to be fought against were the bookmakers, with all their antagonistic interests, and the proprietary clubs, draining into private pockets the profits of what should be public institutions. "The merest suspicion of proprietary interest would now be regarded as shameful by any racing club in the Dominion. The bookmaker, formerly predominant on the turf, is no longer one of its supports, but lurks illegally on its outskirts, banished from our enclosures and plying a surreptitious trade to which can be traced the occasional downfall of an eminent jockey, or the suspicion which grows round an owner who is known to patronise it. Nowhere exists such freedom from the fundamental causes of decadence. Elsewhere the sport is almost universally exploited by proprietary clubs or their equivalents, and vested interests have become rooted which strangle reforms, and perpetuate abuses. These obstructions no longer retard us from devoting our energies and our funds wholly to the provision of pure and healthy recreation. Therefore, I say, and I say it with the utmost emphasis, that your hands in New Zealand grasp an opportunity unique in the history of the world for regulating your sports and primarily that of horse racing, in such fashion as may satisfy the most sensitive conscience, and the most subtle code of honour."

The law prohibiting the publication of totalisator investments and dividends also came under the criticism of the chairman, who said that it served no purpose except to abet the schemes of the professional trickster as against the straightforward sportsman, and reached its climax of absurdity when applied to such races as the English Derby, and he wound up his address with the following remarks:—"Not only is racing a healthy outdoor relaxation, but it is the centre of a large industry, employing about 5000 of our fellow citizens; it is a source of considerable revenue directly in taxation, and indirectly through the railways; the export of horses to Australia and India for racing and for military use is a colonial asset; and, above all, if our defence scheme is to be duly organised the blood of the thoroughbred must supply the essential endurance to our cavalry remounts. In combating the opponents of racing we are challenging the most unpatriotic and shortsighted of our fellow citizens, and playing no ignoble part in the service of a United British Empire."

NOTES.

The current racing season throughout Australasia ends to-day, and to-morrow is the equine birthday, the ages of all horses increasing by a year. Now yearlings will to-morrow be two-year-olds and other ages advance accordingly.

Racing statistics for the season 1911-12 place Wolowa at the head of the list of the juvenile brigade, with five wins, including the match with Tadanga, two seconds, and twice unplaced, his earnings totalling £4960; Ventura comes next with two wins, one third, and twice unplaced, worth £2867; Cider follows with three wins, two seconds, and seven unplaced, worth £2790; Golden Gauntlet, three wins, and twice unplaced, £2502; and Gold Brew, two wins, a second, and four times unplaced, for £2125. Wolowa's successes were achieved in the Federal Stakes and Alma Stakes at Caulfield in the autumn, after which he captured the V.R.C. Ascotvale Stakes, the match with Tadanga, and the A.J.C. Sires' Produce Stakes. Ventura's successes were in the A.J.C. Breeders' Plate and Gimcrack Stakes; Cider secured the St. Albans Handicap at Moonee Valley, the V.R.C. Junior Handicap, and the A.J.C. Champagne Stakes; Golden Gauntlet annexed the V.A.T.C. Debutant Stakes and Mona Nursery, and the A.J.C. December Stakes; while Gold Brew appropriated the V.A.T.C. Gwyn Nursery Handicap and the V.R.C. Maribyrnong Plate.

During the season which ends to-day, the Adelaide Racing Club held four race meetings, which returned a profit of £7602 2s 11d as under:—Grand National Steeplechase, £2727 6s 1d; Foundation Day, £946 10s 8d; Summer, £917 16s 5d; and Birthday, £3010 9s 9d. The club paid away in stakes £11,115; the totalisator receipts amounted to £14,635 3s 6d; and the Government tax on the totalisator receipts aggregated £3658 16s.

Green Seal, who won the Squatters' Handicap at Broken Hill last Wednesday, is the first of the American importations introduced by Mr. Irving H. Wheatcroft, to win a race in Australia. Green Seal was foaled in 1904, and is by Greenan (son of St. Simon) from Gold Seal, by Goldfinch (son of Ormonde) and sire of Chelandry, the dam of Neil Gow and Traquair. On his native soil Green Seal won 23 races during his four seasons' racing, and his performances include the world's record of 1m 50 2-5s for nine furlongs on a circular track, and 1m 37 2-5s for a mile. He was purchased last March at Randwick for 580gs.

It is not of very frequent occurrence for a jockey to ride half a dozen winners in an afternoon, but that feat was accomplished by Horton at Kimberley (South Africa) races on May 18. He had a mount in each of the eight events on the card, and rode the winners of five of them in succession, the other success coming at the close of the afternoon. Horton served his apprenticeship with Chaloner at Newmarket (Eng.), and while home on a holiday last year was offered a good retainer by a prominent stable. He is now located at Johannesburg, and is regarded as the cleverest jockey in South Africa.

J. E. Watts has been appointed trainer to the Graditz Stud in Germany, a position held for some years by Reginald Day, a brother-in-law of Watts, who is returning to Newmarket. Watts is a son of the famous John Watts, who four times won the Derby, viz., on Merry Hampton, in 1887; Sainfoin in 1890; Ladas, in 1894; and he was on Persimmon two years later. Young Watts was apprenticed to his father, and on the latter's death in 1902 the indentures were taken over by the King's trainer, R. Marsh. In the following season Watts won the Jockey Club Cup at the Houghton Meeting on Mead in the Royal Colours, and was presented by his late Majesty with a breast-pin as a memento of that victory. Increasing weight compelled Watts to relinquish the saddle, and he trained at Newmarket for three or four seasons with success. He had charge of Willaura before the death of his owner, Lord Derby subsequently purchasing the colt for 3900gns.

Among the winners at the meeting of the Melbourne Trotting Club on Thursday last was the five-year-old horse Ebonywood, by Ribbonwood, and who captured the Burnley Handicap. Ebonywood was 15s behind.

The operations of the South Australian Jockey Club during the current season show a profit on every meeting—the spring re-union, £1281; New Year's Day, £1278; Summer, £484; and Cup Meeting, £3944; making a grand total of £6987, as against £5700 the previous year. During the year the club paid over to the Government a totalisator tax of £3605, and the local charities benefited to the extent of £435.

Racing statistics in New Zealand show that during last year 57 licensed jockeys had no rides at all, and 40 had only one ride each. This is a big surplus of talent that might be more advantageously used in other industries.

The death is reported from Coonamble of the thoroughbred sire Marcome, by Marvel from Welcome (imp.), by Dutch Skater from Fair Duchess (imp.), by Blair Athol. Marcome, who was bred at the Hobartville Stud was the sire of Confide, Credit, Lady Marcome, Marker, Tinapagee, and other winners, the first-named of whom won the V.R.C. Grand National Steeplechase, 1911.

ANGLING.

Last week was full of gloom for the case-hardened sportsmen who pursue the drab-hued black-fish in his haunts, but it was vastly more depressing for those who drop long lines from motor-boats, tugs, and yachts for the aristocratic schnapper and the fish which keep it company in the deep waters. The persistence of the rain and cold kept the inshore men by their firesides or in the club-rooms which take their place, and the roll of the billows and the cold southerlies told the deep-sea salts that there were more comfortable occupations than hanging on to the rail of a rolling boat while they fished. There is no enjoyment in the sport in such circumstances. Trips were cancelled in all directions, and wisely so, but when the weather conditions are such that the glass again shows "set fair," a pleasant change will come over the scene.

The Anglers' Casting Club has so far this winter been fortunate in being able to carry out the majority of its Saturday afternoon programmes of casting. It is noticeable that the men at the top of the casting art maintain their positions. Very few of the front-markers have improved enough to give promise of being able to oust the older experts. Even the liberal handicaps fail in this respect.

Ranjitsinhji, Jam of Nawanagar, is not only a cricketer of extraordinary ability, but also an enthusiastic angler. One of his favourite places is at Brandon on the Little Ouse, in the Suffolk fens. It is known in Suffolk as "Ranji's" corner. In India the Jam has had successful fishing on many occasions amongst the trout streams.

Lake Narrabeen had again to be opened to the sea last week, and it appears likely that it will be a tidal water for some time. At high tide the entrance is unsafe to cross. Mullet are still at the opening.

Tuggerah has had a much-needed scouring. Weedy patches have been swept away to sea, and the extent of cover for the fish which protects them from netters has been greatly reduced. There will be good fishing there and at Narrabeen during the coming summer.

One of the remarkable incidents of the recent storm was the washing up of fish on the beaches. How it is that such deep-water fish as schnapper and nannegai are washed ashore on beaches is not definitely explainable, but seeing what huge quantities of deep marine growth and great boulders are torn from their resting places, it may be that in their movement shoreward they injure the fish.

It is again timely to remind black-bream[illegible] that the mouths of the harbours and bays will be worth fishing before the water has cleared. The fish have come out of the estuaries in large numbers, and, being unwilling to go to sea, and [illegible] favourite for food. They will take prawn, worm, and [illegible] fish baits with avidity. Jibbon will be worth visiting at night.

Several new varieties of [illegible] have been taken by the [illegible] trawler on the south of the continent lately.

GOLF.

A WET WEEK-END.

CLUB COMPETITIONS.

COUNTRY WEEK.

Saturday brought to an end a week remarkable if only for the continuous rain which fell during its course. For the usual week-end competitions many of the links were unfit for play, and several of the clubs had no option but to postpone their events. Killara was to have held an open mixed foursomes competition, but the green committee inspected the course early in the morning, when rain was still falling, and wisely decided that a postponement was necessary, and the competition will accordingly be held on September 14. A good entry had been received, and much disappointment was manifested at the postponement of the fixture, but it was the only course possible under the circumstances.

Royal Sydney, Manly, and Dobroyde also found it out of the question to hold their competitions, while Concord was only able to play on the ladies' course. The other clubs which adhered to their fixtures did so under very adverse conditions, casual water being an all too frequent occurrence. The Kensington links were better able to stand the soaking than other courses, and a large entry faced the starter and the elements in the first stages of the Denman Cup, an 18 holes handicap stroke event, the ultimate winner to be decided by knock-out match play between the eight players leading in the medal round. S. Macphail, who recorded the best round, has lately had his handicap increased. He started fairly well, but was in trouble at the 6th, which cost him 10, and he took 51 to the turn, but did better coming home, when he had an average of fives, his round of 96 enabling him, with a handicap of 22, to return 74 net, two strokes better than J. H. Robinson, who was second with 91—15—76. O. L. M'Coy, who is one of the most consistent players at Kensington, had the best gross round with 83, and finished fourth with 79 net. The last of the eight to qualify for the match play stages was a player with 81 net, which must be accepted as exceedingly good in view of the adverse weather conditions. The first round of match play was published in Monday's "Herald," and must be completed by August 12.

The final of the Killara Club championship was played during the week, when J. E. Matthews beat W. W. Lyon by 4 up and 3 to play. The golf exhibited by either player was not nearly up to championship form, but it must be said that the links were very wet, and conditions did not favour good golf. Both men played very indifferently, and at the conclusion of the morning round Matthews had a lead of three holes. In the afternoon Lyon won the 1st, 3rd, and 6th holes, and made the match square at the lastnamed hole. Matthews, however, went ahead again, and at the 13th was 3 up. At the 14th Matthews had a bad drive, a poor second, and put his 3rd into the ditch. Lyon, who obtained a fair drive, showed very poor generalship by trying for the green with his second. He also found the ditch, and, dropping out, played into it again, allowing Matthews to win the hole, and incidentally to become dormy. A half at the 15th gave the latter the match and the championship.

Matthews is a young player with a nice easy style, who, on his good days, plays brilliant golf, and only wants to cultivate steadiness to develop into one of the best players in the State. Lyon, who has only lately been promoted from the B to the A team of the club, did remarkably well to get as far as the final of the event.

The Bonnie Doon G. C. was only able to hold its monthly medal competition by making special local rules dealing with balls which might be found buried in soft ground. Under such adverse conditions as prevailed, L. W. Mogg's round of 84—6=78 was a very good one. He was out in 40, but principally owing to trouble at the short 18th, which cost him 6, took 44 to come home. P. R. Russell and N. S. Collie tied for second place with cards of 81 net. Russell started and finished well, but had several very poor holes at the middle distance. He was out in 46, but took only 40 to come home.

Concord played a stroke handicap on the ladies' course, and R. B. Godbolt once again proved his superiority by returning a good score of 74—1=73. He was out in 38, but did better over the second 9 holes, which cost him only 36. His putting was of the highest order, but he showed a tendency to pull both his drives and his iron shots. C. Hope, playing his usual steady game, recorded an excellent 80—7=73, and tied with Godbolt for first place. D. W. Roxburgh was 3rd with 86—12=74, and other players were well up from a handicapper's point of view. J. M. Arnott had a fair gross round of 79, taking 39 out and 40 home. The final of the club championship was not played.

As was generally expected, C. L. Mackenzie beat Dr. W. Denniston in the semi-final round of the Hunter's Hill Championship by 5 up and 4 to play, and has now to meet the winner of the H. R. Lysaght-T. W. Garrett match. Mackenzie has acquired a reputation of being unbeatable on the Hunter's Hill links, and there is little doubt that he is in a class of his own there. He may be expected to again secure the championship (as he generally does) without much trouble. Hunter's Hill handicaps from Mackenzie, who is more or less a wizard on his own links and consequently results are occasionally surprising. For instance, on Saturday, notwithstanding the bad weather, the first three men all broke 70. Gordon Phillips, a young player of much promise, had a round of 80—13=67, while J. A. May, with 81—12=69, and Dr. Wallace 96—27=69, tied for second place. Surely it would be advisable to put Mackenzie plus something rather substantial.

COUNTRY WEEK.

The Suburban and Country Golf Association annual country week carnival has been commenced. The association may claim to have made country week one of the principal golfing events of the year, outshadowing in some respects even the amateur championship, not, it must be admitted, in the standard of play shown, but in general importance, viewed from the standpoint of the interests of the game. In the first place, country week appeals to a larger body of golfers, who come to Sydney from all parts of the country, while the amateur championship and the handicap events played during the meeting attract very few outside metropolitan and suburban players. At country week, however, the man from Albury meets the man from Armidale, and the player from Dubbo the enthusiast from Dungog. All quarters of the State are represented in Sydney during country week, and friendships are made, such is the freemasonry of the game, that otherwise would never have been possible. It is no mean achievement to bring together men from the four quarters of the State, bound, it is true, by a common interest, and make them known to, and appreciated by, one another.

Apart from the social point of view, the country players appreciate the opportunity of improving their play on links which are probably better golfing courses than their own, and of testing themselves against Sydney men on or about their own handicap.

Golf in many parts of the State is carried on under considerable disadvantages, as with the exception of the more favoured seaside and highland courses, it is, as a rule, only possible to play during portion of the year, and even then the majority of the country clubs are unable to get proper turf greens, and have to be content with those of the chip variety, sometimes known as "browns."

That the country has turned out numerous good players, notwithstanding these disadvantages, speaks well for the enthusiasm of the men, and, incidentally, for the fascination of the game itself. This week many of the best country players will be in Sydney, and will be tried out by leading metropolitan golfers. The unavoidable absence of some others is much regretted.

B. W. Farquhar, of Terragong, is a brilliant player, who, with more practice than he is able to obtain, would be quite in the first flight. He was, a few years ago, a cricketer of the same stamp, and rose to interstate honours. John Leigh, of Cowra, is a steady player, quite one of the best the country districts can claim. Jas. Chirnside, of Bombala, a regular attendant at country week, is a golfer with a vigorous style and fine match-playing abilities. The Newcastle club, as usual, is represented by a number of excellent players, such as J. R. Hooper, R. C. Forbes, and the two Parkes. S. Gordon Clift, of Maitland, last year's country champion, is an absentee, and so is A. A. Burt, of Albury. S. Hobson, of Wollongong, a very strong player on his own course, but unknown in Sydney, is coming up for the teams' matches; his play will be watched with interest. Other leading players include E. S. Scarvell (Young), A. F. Rose and R. Craig (Cooma), B. M'Hugh (Orange), L. M. Broughton, N. J. Holmes, and G. W. Rutherford (Bathurst), J. W. Windridge (Wagga Wagga), and J. H. Bettington (Terragong).

The programme arranged by the association is an excellent one, including country championship and district teams' championship, as well as stroke and bogey handicaps. An interesting week is expected.

ATHLETICS.

SOUTH SYDNEY ROAD RACE.

CROSS-COUNTRY CHAMPIONSHIPS.

Unfavourable weather conditions prevailed on Saturday for the last open road race of the season, when the South Sydney Harriers' sixth annual "cup" race was decided over a measured three miles' course. Thirty-seven runners competed. The rain held off during the progress of the race, but the roads were in such a bad state that although the competitors were instructed that running upon the footpaths would not be permitted, these regulations were ignored.

The cup has to be won twice, before it becomes the property of any runner. The race was instituted in 1907. Of all the previous winners, W. O'Reilly was the sole starter in last Saturday's race. The Botany Harriers were again successful, for W. Price, of that club, was the winner. As this was his first entry, he received the half limit allowance of 65s, and for his initial venture displayed the judgment that is usually only found in men of experience. If Price has not been previously associated with distance running, he is a novice of the superior order, for he secured the second fastest time of any competitor in the race finishing the course in 16m 33s, and winning by nearly 50yds from the 10 miles' champion, H. Hayden, who was conceding him 5s. H. Tye (allowed 70s) was third, followed by the virtual scratch man, C. Weyman, who from the 15s mark covered the course in 16m 8s, securing the fastest time prize, and beating Price's figures by 25s. The first seven places were filled by members of the Botany Club. W. Manson, whose allowance was 95s, finished eighth, and received the trophy for the first unplaced member of the promoting club.

Fourteen clubs were represented in the Queensland five miles' cross country championship, held at Rocklea on Saturday last. The Toowong Harriers were again successful, gaining 66 points, with East Brisbane second, eight points behind. The Redfern Harriers were defeated by one point for third place, with East Sydney fourth, with 104. The race appeared a foregone conclusion for T. J. Wood, of East Sydney, who has been successful over the distance in the New South Wales championship for the past two years, defeating better runners than those whom he met on Saturday. Wood gained the individual title in 29m 48s from last year's winner, W. J. Hamilton, of Toowong, with E. E. Austen of the Redfern Harriers, in third place. The time recorded by Wood was 21s worse than that of last year, the damp state of the ground making the going heavy.

The Redfern Club's team in Saturday's race was not such a formidable one as last year, when they were placed first, with 74 points, with Toowong 6 points behind in second place, but at a meeting of the Queensland A.A.A. held later, a protest lodged was upheld, and the race awarded to Toowong. Upon that occasion S. Sheaves (8th) was the first Redfern man to finish, with the captain, F. Flowers, next. On Saturday Flowers again failed to defeat his men for the honour of being the first Redfern runner in, as E. Austen, who appears to improve with every race, reached third place, while Flowers was not in the first six men to complete the course.

The Toowong and East Brisbane Harriers were represented by strong teams; the latter club annexed the New South Wales cross-country championship in 1906, and Toowong placed a team in last year's race here, but was the last club to finish.

The distance season will close on Saturday next, with the five miles cross-country championship of New South Wales. The race will be held on the Randwick racecourse, the use of which has been granted by the Australian Jockey Club. About 3¾ laps will be covered, starting on the eastern side of the ground, four furlongs ahead of the winning post, thence around the steeplechase track, covering about 40 obstacles, and finishing at the judge's box the fourth time past the stand.

The entries have not reached last year's total, 58 having been nominated for the A grade, and 118 for the B section. The race for the individual title should be well fought out, and the success of T. J. Wood in Brisbane shows that he may be relied upon to make a great effort to retain the title held by him for the past two years. C. Weyman, of Botany, has so many seconds to his credit that it would seem inconsistent for him to secure a victory, but he is running in great form, and may at last break the monotony. H. Hayden, the present 10-miles champion, will be dangerous, if he has improved in negotiating the obstacles. He is possessed of pace, but loses ground by his slow method of getting over the timber. F. Flowers, who occupied third place last year, does not appear to be going too well in his racing, but if in form on Saturday may be expected to occupy a leading position at the finish. The only others who may create a surprise and the most likely to fill the places are R. J. Fitzsimmons (South Sydney), E. E. Austen (Redfern), J. Chalmers (Botany), and J. M'Kenzie (South Sydney), the winner of the B division last year.

The teams' championship should be won by the Botany Harriers. The members are showing well, as was evidenced in last Saturday's race. Of the other clubs, not a team has been entered with a chance of defeating the club that has for the past four years held the cross-country title. It is difficult to understand why the distance runners of other clubs will not devote their attention to this race. Each year the Botany Club places a strong, well-trained team in the field for the five and ten miles championships, offering the members many inducements to prepare for the events.

The field for the cross-country championship, to achieve success in which should be the ambition of every distance runner, is marked by the absence of many good men who have not passed the stage when retirement is necessary. Club secretaries are blameless, for their untiring efforts do not meet with success, and while these conditions exist one club will continue to carry off the two big distance races of the year. Three other clubs are represented in the "A" grade—East Sydney, Redfern, and South Sydney. Of the remaining clubs included in last year's race, Newtown has not supplied a team, and the Toowong (Q.) club has decided not to journey south on this occasion.

The "B" section will be despatched at the conclusion of the "A" grade race, and a much better spectacle may be witnessed, for the number of starters will be double that of the senior event. Here, again, the Botany Harriers are represented by a team large in numbers, and, upon performances, superior athletically to the opposing clubs. For the past two years this section has been annexed by the "Royal Blues," and the team should again achieve the honours of success. The Cumberland, Redfern, and South Sydney harriers may be expected to finish well. For the individual race, W. G. Slattery (South Sydney) and H. Tye (Botany), who finished second and third respectively last year, W. Price (Botany), W. Manson (South Sdyney), F. Colbert (Cumberland), and R. A. Anson (South Sydney) should be the most probable to be amongst the leading division at the finish.

The announcement that the co-operation of all sporting bodies in the State is to be sought with the object of altering the present conditions of compulsory training, which prevents our youthful athletes taking an active part in amateur sport, will meet with the approval of all interested in amateur athletics. The drills and Saturday afternoon parades have had a marked effect upon many of the clubs whose ranks have been depleted by the withdrawal of junior members. It has been pointed out that the Saturday half-holiday concession was granted some time ago to all employed in business establishments, and the advent of compulsory training immediately deprived the youth of the privileges enjoyed by the adults, who have not only their Saturdays free, but are at liberty on week nights while the boys are at drill.

FIXTURES

Saturday, August 3.—Five miles cross-country championship of N.S.W., at Randwick Racecourse.
Saturday, August 3.—Victorian five miles cross-country championship.
Saturday, August 17.—Australasian cross-country championship, at Brisbane.
Thursday, August 22.—N.S.W. A.A.A. council meeting.

HOCKEY.

THE INTERSTATE GAME.

The second interstate match between New South Wales and South Australia will take place on Saturday next, at 3 o'clock. The following have been selected to play for New South Wales:—

Carter (Royal Navy), Terrey (University), Newsom (Pilgrims), Seldon (Pilgrims), Redgrave (Bandits), Abel (Dalgety), Soden (Barbarians), Hall (Pilgrims), Wooley (Coronas), Macpherson (Dalgety), Knox (Dalgety).

Of the above, nine have represented the State before. Redgrave and Soden appear for the first time. Carter, Terrey, and Newsom represented New South Wales in the matches against Victoria two years ago, and Terrey also played for the State the first time they appeared in Melbourne three years ago. The interstate matches were first initiated four years ago in Sydney. None of the players who took part in that match will play against South Australia on Saturday next. The fixture will be preceded by a game between the New South Wales Second Eleven and Victoria. The following have been chosen to play for the Second Eleven:—

M'Lachlan (Bohemians), Lloyd (Coronas), Castle (Bohemians), Ritchie (University), Mackenzie (Corinthians), Bray (Pilgrims), Shelley (Bandits), Finlay (University), Estaugh (Barbarians), White (Barbarians), Thompson (Dalgety), Mr. W. E. Foskett, umpire.

Of these, Lloyd and Shelley played for the State last year in Melbourne; whilst Bray, Shelley, Estaugh, and White played two years ago. Thompson was a member of the first State team to visit Victoria three years ago; Bray, Estaugh, and White played four years ago. The Victorian match will commence at 1.45 p.m.

The South Australian and Victorian teams will arrive in Sydney on Friday morning by the Melbourne Express. In the afternoon they will practice at Rushcutter Bay Oval. The official reception to the visiting teams will take place at the New South Wales Sports Club at 5 o'clock.

On Monday next the Navy will play Victoria at 1.45 p.m., and the Army will meet South Australia in the late game. Unfortunately, the Navy will not be at full strength owing to the absence from Sydney of one or two of the ships, but they will have a very fair side for their last appearance. The Army team has been selected by Mr. Lloyd as follows:—

Lieutenant Macnaghten (Scottish Rifles), (Goal); Lloyd (25th Batt.), Lieut. Newsom (25th Batt.), Sgt. Green (University Scouts), Bombardier Hughes (A.F.A.), Lieut. Buskin (26th Batt.), Lieut. Soden (25th Batt.), Lieut. Harris (R.A.F.A.), Lieut. Thompson (17th Batt.), Lieut. White (25th Batt.), Private Patten (University Scouts), emergencies, forwards, Lieut F. Hinton (34th. Batt.); backs, Lieut. Ansley (A.G.A.).

On Wednesday next South Australia and Victoria will try conclusions, and on Saturday, August 10, at 1.45 p.m., the New South Wales Second Eleven will play South Australia, and later New South Wales will meet Victoria. The New South Wales First and Second teams to play on August 10 will be chosen after the Navy and Army matches on August 5.

On the evening of August 10 the visiting teams will be entertained at dinner at the A.B.C. Rooms. Rushcutter Bay Oval will be available for practice for the home players every afternoon after 4.30, commencing to-morrow.

The weather, which has considerably interfered with hockey the last few weeks, was at its worst last Saturday, and the only match played was that between Buccaneers and Sydneians, at Marrickville Oval, when the former won by 8 goals to 4.

CRICKET.

CONTROLLING THE GAME.

The managerial aspect of cricket in this State has during the past week or two occupied the close attention and enthusiasm of local cricketing bodies. It has expressed itself, firstly, in the numerous annual meetings of the various clubs affiliated to the New South Wales Cricket Association, and, finally, in the annual meeting of the association itself. To the average man in the street, perhaps, there is nothing worthy of special notice in these proceedings. He takes it for granted that every club should hold its annual meeting—what club does not?—for the purpose of pointing out the congratulatory features of the past season, and in order to make suitable preparations for the new season. If he has not been beyond the Commonwealth he does not pause to think of the significance attaching to the holding of these club meetings all within a few days of one another some months before the opening of the season, but immediately preceding the meeting of the Cricket Association. These meetings are, in fact, part of a system of cricket management unexcelled in any other part of the world.

A prominent and experienced cricketer, when asked some little time ago how he accounted for the fact that Australian cricket, with its limited number of first-class players, with extremely limited opportunities for first-class play, holds its own with English cricket, though the number of players in the latter is legion, and their opportunities for development practically unlimited, unhesitatingly put down the reason as "good and systematic management."

Cricket in the Old Country is not organised in the same way that it is here. The M.C.C., by courtesy, is still regarded as the traditional and paramount authority in the game; but the M.C.C. is merely a club—a very strong and rich club certainly; it does not in any way represent the English counties, nor is it in any way responsible to those counties. The county clubs themselves are also merely clubs, big and strong, and self appointed to carry on as representing the cricket of the county. Lancashire County Club, for instance, is merely a club evolved out of and incorporating the Manchester Club, with its ground (Old Trafford, where the current test match is being played); it is not an association of the clubs of the county. It does not in any way represent the club cricket of the county, nor is it in any way responsible to the myriads of clubs in the County of Lancashire. No club cricketer in the county has any chance of getting a place in the county eleven unless he is specially brought under the notice of the county club officials, when, if he be an amateur, he may get an invitation to show his skill in a minor engagement; or, if he be a professional, he may get an offer to become one of the Old Trafford Ground staff. Thus it is that from year to year you see very little change in the personnel of county elevens.

SYSTEMATIC ORGANISATION.

How different it is here in Sydney. Each club has its representatives on the association; each club has its competitions arranged for it and watched over by the association; each player in each club knows that his performances are being keenly watched, and the moment he shows any special aptitude he is singled out for special encouragement and opportunities of advancement. No sooner does a vacancy occur in a representative team than the man to fill it is immediately forthcoming. Club cricket here is practically the only avenue leading to the representative goal; club cricket in England leads anywhere but there. Obviously, therefore, our cricketers are happily placed, thanks to the prevailing excellent system of management, which, like the cricket teams, is essentially representative. The clubs at their annual meetings appoint their own officials, also their representatives upon the association. The authority of the clubs is, therefore, delegated to the association through these representatives, who again appoint the officials of the association, and, from amongst their number, representatives to the Board of Control. Thus the whole system is one of representative government in which every club member, indirectly or otherwise, takes his share.

WHERE CUSTOM RULES.

Not so in the old country. The M.C.C. rules the roost—by the sanction of custom and by tact. Each county is a law unto itself, and owing allegiance to none. Each county arranges what fixtures it likes for the season—any county failing to arrange eight home and home first-class engagements, ceases to be a first-class county—and once a year, in December, the various secretaries of the county clubs meet at Lord's to finally settle their programmes—a mere matter of form, since it has already been done months before—and hand them over to the M.C.C. secretary. On another day in December the county captains meet, and, with due regard to the reports submitted upon the umpiring at the close of each match in the previous season, select the umpires for the ensuing year. They also discuss other matters appertaining to the playing of the game in general, and any resolutions framed thereon are submitted to the M.C.C. It was at one of these, for instance, that MacLaren, after one of his visits to Australia, suggested the use of a new ball in English cricket after every 100 runs to help the swerving bowlers. The M.C.C. committee liked the idea borrowed from Australia, but decided that the ball should not be used so frequently; but, if desired, immediately after each 200th run has been scored. That has been the custom in English cricket ever since.

The only attempt at representative government in English cricket comes through a recently-created committee of delegates from the counties, known as the Advisory County Committee. This body deals essentially with county affairs, but has no power other than to frame and submit proposals for the consideration of the M.C.C. This subject of cricket management is one about which there are many vague notions, and much misapprehension, concerning which the writer has from time to time received many queries of one sort or another. This opportunity, therefore, has been taken of dispelling doubts, and at the same time of emphasising the high state of managerial efficiency reached in New South Wales. The matter is well worthy of this special emphasis, because nowhere else have the cricketing community and its cricketers generally such direct and responsible representation in the councils of the game, and nowhere else is the management of the game so free from the canker of extraneous influences. We trust that it will always remain so.

THE LUCK OF THE GAME.

There was nothing much to "enthuse" over as regards the team results of last week's matches of the Australians in England, since the first match was lost and the second drawn. Defeat at the hands of Hampshire, one of the lowliest of English counties, is noteworthy merely on account of its unexpectedness. It is the first time that Hampshire has ever beaten an Australian side, although in a low-scoring match the county put up an excellent game against the 1909 team. Probably on this occasion the result would have been reversed had Gregory not lost the toss again, for it was his side's misfortune to have an all-day struggle on a rain-damaged pitch after their opponents had enjoyed a full day's outing on a perfect wicket. Luck, the powerful attribute of the game of cricket, plays a more prominent part in England than it does here. The spin of the coin really becomes a very important factor in the game, and in order to minimise the luck attaching thereto, it has been proposed that in county cricket the side losing the toss in the first of the two annual engagements should, in the return game, have the choice of innings, as if it had really won the toss for same. The proposal went so far as a recommendation to the M.C.C., but the committee of that most conservative of clubs did not approve. In respect to the toss, the Australian team, therefore, has been tremendously handicapped, since up to this match Gregory had only won it five times in 23 attempts. "Little Syd." will be rivalling MacLaren for the reputation of being the unluckiest of captains if he does not soon mend his ways.

SCIENTIFIC TOSSING.

Some captains are considered to be proverbially lucky with the toss; it will generally be found, however, that these people follow a very definite system. To the majority of people tossing is purely a matter of luck. They wait till the coin is in the air and then suddenly, as if by inspiration, "call" according to the promptings of the moment. The good tosser, however, generally wants to see the coin, and he makes his call accordingly. The reason for this is that the conformation of many coins makes one side a little heavier than the other, and the tendency, therefore, is, if the coin rolls at all, for it to settle with the heavier side downwards. This is exactly what happens in practice so consistently that with a given coin a majority of "tails" or "heads," as the case may be, can be relied upon turning up with perfect safety. Coins behave differently, of course, but with a fair uniformity a little practice will satisfy anyone on this point. It follows, therefore, that, provided he knows the coin, the man who "calls" has a distinct advantage in the customary method of deciding the toss. The man who spins the coin is entirely passive; he has to take what is left for him. In English cricket it is the custom to give the visiting captain the privilege of "calling," so that Gregory, instead of being so far behind in the matter of wins, ought in reality to have a useful majority in his favour. Probably he has spun the coin a number of times himself; opposing English captains would gladly allow him to do so if he showed any desire that way.

MEAD'S BEST.

Mead, of course, was the batting hero of the Hampshire match. His 160 not out is the highest score so far recorded against the Australian team, supplemented by his 33 not out in the second innings. It represents also the highest individual aggregate. Apart from this performance, the best double against the team to date is that of M. C. Bird, the Surrey captain, who scored 76 and 68 in the first Surrey encounter. J. W. H. T. Douglas' 69 and 53 in the first Essex match is the only other player who has scored as many as 50 in each innings against the team, though five centuries have been hit by English players, as follow:—

C. P. Mead, 160 not out, for Hampshire.
J. W. H. T. Douglas, 123, for Essex.
H. H. Jam of Nawanagar, 125, for Sussex.
J. B. Hobbs, 107, for England.
P. Perrin, 104, for Essex.

In addition to these, Faulkner made 122 not out for the Africans in the first test at Manchester. Mead's extraordinary success is noteworthy, because he failed to realise expectations against Australian bowling when out here recently with Warner's team, being apparently always tied up with the "googlie" attack. He had Emery against him in this match, but from all accounts the Redfern bowler is no less erratic than he used to be—more's the pity. With these scores, and his previous efforts (19 and 61 for M.C.C.) against the team, Mead has atoned for much of his Australian disappointment.

TWO "GIANTS" OF THE GAME.

To those who know "Ranji" best, his century for Sussex against our men last Friday will come as no surprise, for his skill is of the sort that becomes second nature. He is generally remembered chiefly for the delightful daring of his on-side play, and the perfect precision of his strokes in general; the wonderful soundness of his defence usually escaped the notice of all but the bowlers in the contemplation of the grace, versatility, ease, and success of his stroke play. But it was there all the same. His defence from the bowlers' view-point was magnificent; it was the real foundation of his greatness. He, like Arthur Shrewsbury, helped to teach the cricket world the value of back-play. The ease with which he played back to and controlled the most difficult bowling under almost any circumstances was truly remarkable; he could play back to any bowling on any wicket, and his mastery of the situation never seemed at fault. It is this foundation of soundness in defence that enables "Ranji," Jackson, Fry, Hayward, and many others of the world's great cricketers to come back to the game after varying periods of absence, and commence again almost where they left off. It is this foundation that has always made "Ranji" such a dangerous opponent, when he likes; it is when the great Indian batsman sets his mind on doing well with the bat that he is most dangerous. One can easily imagine with what set purpose he took part in this match, and his success will add another to his long list of triumphs on the county ground at Hove. True, this ground is one of the best "scorers" in the United Kingdom, a very easy pitch, with a short boundary at each side, and a long slope downhill at the long end of the ground, clear atmosphere, and bright light—a holiday ground in a holiday town, for Hove is a suburb of Brighton, the greatest watering-place and pleasure resort of England.

Charles Macartney will have most pleasurable recollections of his visit to this ground in virtue of his double century performance. Statistics in connection with the little champion's exceptional feat were fully detailed in Monday's "Herald," so that one need do no more now than place on record our heartiest congratulations. When the final summary of the team's doings comes up for consideration it seems quite certain that the richest vein of achievement will be associated with the name of Macartney—the newest giant of the game. It is unfortunate that immediately following his great achievement he should have to retire from the field in the test match against England on Monday through catching a chill.

LACROSSE.

INTERSTATE JUNIOR GAMES.

The carnival is over, and the representatives from Queensland and Victoria have returned to their homes. Looking back at the "gala" it could hardly be called a success. In the first place the weather militated against many supporters being present. Then, again, the great body of lacrosse players did not interest themselves in the fixture, and, in fact, outside the men taking part in the games a very small minority put in an appearance. Financially the first junior interstate contest in Sydney was a failure, but as regards the games the contests were well fought out, and the results achieved were excellent.

The visiting teams, the Brisbane boys and the Wanderers, are to be congratulated on their play and on their wins, which were well deserved. The first match of the afternoon was between schoolboys of limited age, size, and weight of New South Wales and Queensland. Queensland won the game by 8 goals to 1, but the difference in the teams was hardly so marked as the result of the match would indicate. Our boys are to be commended on their showing. The majority were first-year boys, and the team had not played a match together, nor received the coaching and training necessary to bring about that match-winning factor—combination. In Raymond, Barnett, Heine, Wood, Morris, and the goalkeeper, Carroll, the association has six promising players. Of the Queensland team, Strickland, Park, Lord, Atwell, Clough, Cross and Kain played most conspicuously; in fact, many A grade players could not have thrown the backhand goal that Cross did on the call of time. Edwards, who was playing a great game for the home team, was unfortunately injured.

What might be termed the return match between the N.S.W. Juniors and the Wanderers was the chief game of the afternoon. Good reports were received in Sydney of the great game put up by these two teams in their first match at Brighton, Victoria, when they both played as "schoolboys." The Wanderers came here with a good reputation, and on their play they maintained it.

No excuse can be offered for the Juniors. They were well trained, were not wanting in stick-work nor combination, they had a goalkeeper second only to Thomas of the representative team, yet they played very poorly. Gleeson and Fountain were the only men to play up to form, though at times Barnett and Graham and Nicholls played well. The Wanderers as a team combined well, relieved well, and showed that they are a well-trained and disciplined team, and when an opportunity occurred they quickly availed themselves of it. Bade in goal was good; Johnson on the defence intercepted well; Beech at centre was always on the ball; and in the attack Summers was the most prominent player. Clarke also played a cool game.

The late match was between the team to represent this State at the carnival in Melbourne next month and the next 12. The play was disappointing, for the reason that the second twelve players would persist in hanging on to the ball, and the N.S.W. representatives were more intent on scoring goals than working up the combination that will be so advantageous to them when opposed to such capable players as the Victorians and South Australians. It was understood that the match was arranged more to give the players who are going away a chance of getting to know one another's play than to see whether the selectors had chosen a goal-scoring team. The material of the N.S.W. team is good, but some practice together is necessary before the team leaves on the 8th proximo.

The following team should be successful in the first match against Queensland:—Rec. Rowe, first home; A. Thomas, second home; H. Hallett, third home; attacks, Stillman and Fulwood; centre, Sutherland; defence, Turnbull and Miller; third man, W. [illegible]; cover point, P. Rogerson; point, [illegible]; and goal, C. Thomas.

FOOTBALL.

RUGBY UNION.

THE QUEENSLAND FIXTURES.

The conquering Queenslanders will arrive by the Brisbane mail to-morrow morning, and will be tendered an official reception at the Rugby Union rooms at 12.30 p.m. The visitors will arrive with a record that has been unequalled by any of the Northern fifteens during the past 11 years. Their two victories over this State's representatives in Brisbane on June 22 and 29 make their fixtures in New South Wales on this occasion of more than usual interest. Added interest will also be imparted owing to the selection of the Australian team to visit America in September.

The Queensland team will be the same as that which gained the dual victory at Brisbane, but the Light Blue side has been altered somewhat. The selection committee has included four men who were chosen for the Brisbane trip, but who could not go; also four others who are expected to strengthen the side, so that more than half the previous team will be dropped. In the circumstances, some excellent football should result at the University Oval on Saturday next.

Among the Queensland men most fancied for the American trip are Willcocks and M'Cabe. The former is the ex-Brisbane Grammar School boy, who plays centre three-quarter. He is an excellent kick. M'Cabe is a wing three-quarter of ability. Besides being possessed of great pace, he runs most awkwardly, and is a hard man to tackle. Both of these players performed excellently against our representatives in previous matches. In 1910 M'Cabe played on the wing, but received few chances. However, Willcocks fills the post at centre much better than his immediate predecessors, and gives the sprinter his chance. He will be remembered as being the player who drop-kicked an excellent goal against the metropolis with a wet ball last year, and won the game by one point.

The Queensland forwards are bigger than usual, and this helped considerably towards their late successes. In the team selected to meet them, however, there is ample weight, Massie, Wylie, Fahey, Reynolds, Hill, Watson, and George being a very big lot. The visitors are accompanied by Mr. Austin Gralton, who represented Queensland and Australia several times at half-back. He will act as honorary coach throughout the tour.

The interstate carnival will commence on Saturday, and be continued on the following Monday and Saturday. The two Saturday games will be interstate, and that on the Monday will be between Queensland and the second fifteen of New South Wales. Attractive early games have been arranged for the purposes of selecting the team for America. A combined metropolitan team will play each day at 2 p.m. against two country teams and a City and Suburban fifteen.

There was ample evidence on the sodden fields of Saturday that the practice and experience of the previous wet week-ends of this season had borne good fruit. The usual hard grounds of Sydney and the country districts are apt to cultivate the dry-weather passing game, which is attractive under suitable conditions, but is most ineffective on wet days. In the forwards the quick-moving, sure-footed player who rarely picks up, but trusts to his foot throughout, was the one who shone on Saturday. In the backs the unhesitating rush-stopper, the sure handler and kick, who does not fail to gather through over-anxiousness, and who, by judicious use of the touch-line, allows the opposing forwards to run themselves out, while he nurses his own vanguard, was the man who helped his side materially.

On Saturday, whilst University made the most of their chances in this way, Eastern Suburbs failed to adapt themselves to the prevailing conditions. The Collegians did not attempt a passing rush except a few short bouts in the first-half that sent Lamrock over the line in the corner. When the ball reached the backs anywhere outside their opponents' 25, kicking was the method that invariably gained ground. Generally, the touch-line was the point aimed at, but, when in attacking position Adamson occasionally punted across field to Lamrock, and these tactics were very effective. Eastern Suburbs tried the passing game, and generally lost ground.

In the forwards the long line kicks of Smith tired the tri-colours, and helped the vanguard of 'Varsity. A wet day is not usually to the liking of University, but on Saturday their tactics, style of play, and dash, made them an infinitely better side than their opponents.

The defeat of North Sydney by Manly was accomplished in a somewhat similar manner. Richards, in the Villagers' backs, showed up well, playing the wet weather game suited to his forwards, and thus helping materially towards the win. As may be expected, the forwards had the play most of the time, but occasionally Mayo showed glimpses of that brilliancy which earned him his representative cap. The Villagers' vanguard, with the veteran Buckley always in front, paid more attention to ruck work than their opponents, and came through time after time, with many of the Shoremen hanging out. On the whole, the play was very entertaining, considering the sloppy condition of the field and the heavy ball.

Western Suburbs had an extremely narrow win at Drummoyne against Balmain, but, despite the strenuous attacks of the losers' forwards, their defence proved equal to the demand. The black and golds often failed to take advantage of good openings through over-anxiousness; nevertheless the defence of the westerners was exceptional. Balmain should do well next season, as the experience of this year will help considerably in building up the side. Western Suburbs maintain their position on the competition table in an able manner—a tribute to their fine defensive play, which is second to no other team in the competition.

Saturday's results practically decided the four teams that will figure in the semi-finals on August 24. The defeat of Eastern Suburbs puts that side into fifth position, and, incidentally, gives the premiers, Newtown, another chance of winning the 1912 honours. Eastern Suburbs were looked on as likely premiers, but on Saturday the weather—and University—obliterated their chance. Had a fine day prevailed it is probable that the result would have been reversed. University and Western Suburbs have been most consistent, and have maintained the leading positions, with Glebe always handy. Newtown have not shown the form of last year, but may be reserving this for the final stages of play.

Efforts have recently been made to introduce the Rugby game further into Europe. As it has become very popular in France, Vienna and Buda Pest were both attacked. At the former place Roslyn Park met on Oxford and Cambridge 15, but the writers generally favour adhering to the Association game. All admired Rugby as a spectacle, but contended that it was unfitted for the Austrian temperament. The self-control and spirit of the players were highly praised, but, however excellent the game may be as a form of violent exercise, it was stated it would be unwise to try and introduce it where the people had not the virtues mentioned above. At Buda Pest a local paper (Az Est) arranged a match between the Roslyn Park team and the London Nomads. Over 12,000 people watched the game, and were enamoured of its qualities.

RUGBY LEAGUE.

EASTERN SUBURBS AND GLEBE ASPIRING PREMIERS.

The results of the two principal fixtures on Saturday have caused the sides with premiership prospects to be narrowed down to the teams who figured in the final scenes of last year's competition—Eastern Suburbs and Glebe. They will meet in the next series of games, and should the premiers be defeated public interest will quicken on account of the even position of the two great rivals. The large attendance at the Sports Ground, in what a "Kangaroo" termed "Manchester weather," did not expect the game to be replete with the bright passing movements that Eastern Suburbs and South Sydney are so capable of executing, as the adverse conditions which obtained precluded sure handling. Nevertheless there were many compensatory happenings.

The extreme pace which was maintained from the moment the game started until "no side" sounded, with the premiers victorious by 10 points to 7, the magnificent open play by the forwards of both sides, and the excellent kicking, sound judgment, and good defensive work of the backs, were in themselves ample repayments for attending.

The average play of the premiers was of a higher standard than that of the defeated side, who were unfortunate as far as accidents were concerned. In the loose, the work of the two sets of forwards was very even, though no South Sydney player equalled the brilliant and versatile L. O'Malley. He headed every rush, dived at the possessor of the ball in a most determined manner, and defended with remarkable grit. His showing on Saturday was quite equal to anything displayed during the season, and as sodden fields will probably be experienced during the coming New Zealand tour, one expects the Eastern Suburbs forward's claims for inclusion to receive very favourable consideration. Less capable front row forwards have represented the State this season.

The other five members of the Eastern pack showed marked ability, with Williams and White in the thick of the fray from start to finish. As scrummagers, honours went to Eastern Suburbs, but it was not until after E. Hilliard had been compelled to retire and W. Cann was put out of action, that the margin became pronounced.

That there were not many concerted moves by the two back divisions, is not remarkable. On the contrary, credit is deserved for the few that were effected. The bright dash in which forwards and backs blended harmoniously and in which the sterling individualism displayed by H. H. Messenger, enabled his brother to score, and a couple of others of almost equal merit by the losers' back division deserve much commendation, not only on account of the greasy condition of the ball, but also by the reason of the fast flying forwards, who gave the backs no peace. The bouts which were effected were started by a player fielding long punts which arrived before the onrushing vanguard. Cann quickly perceiving the error of kicking too far, punted high, and frequently set the forwards moving in this manner. It was a wise move, especially with the breeze favouring his side.

The place-kicking was excellent, especially two by W. Messenger. It is rare that a ball which traverses such a distance soars to the height reached by this brace of remarkable kicks. Except that it slightly lacked direction, the one that failed was really the greater.

The decisive victory of Glebe over Newtown on Saturday strengthens their chance of checking the victorious career of Eastern Suburbs when they meet on Saturday next. The Reds played together finely under adverse weather conditions, and seem to be more perfectly attuned now than at any other period of the season. The backs, if not possessing any stars, are a more uniform lot than is contained in any other team, and can be relied upon to defend with safety and grit. The forwards are youthful, lusty, and clever in open play. They excelled those of Newtown in the close rucks, which were a feature of the game on a ground that was sodden in parts, and little else but black, slimy mud that defied every effort to maintain an upright position with any pace up.

The first score of Glebe, the result of fast forward work, seemed to indicate thus early their superiority over the Blues, and excepting for occasional bursts when the visitors flung themselves almost desperately at the Red defenders, they proved to be too fast and vigorous all round. The Glebe back division played a more prominent part in the second half, and behind successful scrummagers they swung into line often, and proved that the heavy and greasy ball affected their play but little. It was a day when the forwards might be expected to loom big on the score-sheet, but excepting for three points secured by Burge from a superb dribbling effort, the remainder of the points were shared by two backs, Algie and Thiering, the former scoring four tries, and the latter notching four goals.

Glebe's back division quite eclipsed that of the Royal Blue, but it is regrettable that V. Farnsworth had to stand down owing to an injury sustained in the South Sydney game. Stewart gave a mediocre display at full-back. He kicked weakly, and was slow to move on the greasy turf. With Glover off the field for some time in the second half, and Stewart suffering from a kick on the head, the Blue backs had a busy time defending. Towards the close they fell away, and Glebe were masters of the game. Russell, Nelson, and R. Farnsworth were the safe links in the backs; Noble (and Glover until injured) were the best of the forwards. Glebe played their part well, with M'Kivat dominating the moves generally, and shining in the loose.

Annandale in the third game of the season were beaten by 9 points (16-7) by North Sydney. This is the biggest defeat they have sustained, yet they have secured only one victory throughout the winter. In the return game against the Shoremen they put up a characteristic display, and were, as usual, narrowly defeated. The return of J. Devereux and S. Dean has had a strengthening effect on the rearguard of North Sydney. The cleverness of the former at making openings should enable Sydney enthusiasts to witness Berecry at his best. The fast wing three-quarter has been largely compelled to rely on his own resources, hence his comparative failure.

Balmain has always been the home of fine forwards, who revel in the game when the going is heavy, and on Saturday at Birchgrove they lived up to their reputation. Ball at toe, they swept down the muddy field—and it was muddy—at a great pace, giving no quarter to Western Suburbs. The work of Cummins was admirable throughout. The backs were very safe both in handling and in defensive play, especially Fraser, Hilliard, and Johnson; consequently there were not many mistakes of which the visitors could take advantage.

Newtown will most likely include in their team for the remaining games Leggo, the Goldfields player who recently showed fine form against the South Coast and Tramway Leagues.

FIXTURES.

SATURDAY, AUGUST 3.

THE AUSTRALIAN GAME.

THE METROPOLITAN EIGHTEEN.

After two postponements the selection committee of the New South Wales Football League met on Wednesday last and chose the eighteen from the metropolitan clubs who will play against East Fremantle on Saturday next. It is seldom that the chosen team meets with general approval, and that which will face the Western Australians does not differ from previous ones in this respect. The team is a strong one, but it is not by any means the best. Several good players were not available, owing to the League sending a representative team to Riverina. It is further weakened by the absence of some players who, in present performances, might reasonably have been chosen. Little exception can be taken to the inclusion of Muggivan, Ratcliffe, Mahony, and Pite, all of whom learned their football in New South Wales, the pity of it is that similar players like Todd, M'Laren, Page, and others were not also selected. Of the older players Watts, Vincent, Manchester, Pascoe, and Ellis are fine footballers, though the lastnamed is not displaying last year's form.

Of the men new to representative honours in this State, Cross, Pike, and O'Brien deserve places, but it is difficult to understand the inclusion of Delaney as rover. Four five seasons back he was without a rival, but he has lost almost all his former brilliancy. On present season form the Paddington rover, Robinson, who has not been selected, is superior to Delaney; besides he is a good place man, and would be an acquisition to the forward division, which East Fremantle will probably find to be our weakest point. O'Brien, Ratcliffe, and Mahoney are all good forwards, the two lastnamed on the right and left positions, but the team is badly in need of a cool, reliable man like Robinson playing centre-forward against a strenuous team. Regarding the back division, it is hard to understand why Payne should displace Hyett, who last year was full-back. Hyett has a safe pair of hands; he also has weight and reach, and is an excellent kick, his one weakness being slowness in gathering in. Payne, on the other hand, is on the light side, and save in picking up the ball, he suffers by comparison with Hyett. If G. Williams, of Y.M.C.A., were available, neither Hyett nor Payne would have been required, but as he preferred the Riverina trip to playing against East Fremantle, the selectors were compelled to go further afield. The names of Robertson, of North Sydney, and Hortin, of Newtown, are missing from the team. Both of these men represented the State at the carnival last year. The former captained the team, and his performances are so fresh that it is difficult to understand his omission. A good kick, an excellent mark, and a cool head are qualifications in a player that ought not to be lightly passed, and as R. Robertson possesses all three, his absence from the eighteen seems unaccountable. P. Hortin was selected as emergency centre, but has since notified that he prefers to tour Riverina therefore his name has been withdrawn. Hortin would have been an acquisition to the eighteen which will appear in the first interstate game of this year.

Whatever the result of the East Fremantle match, it will give the selectors a line as to who will represent Sydney against Geelong on the following Saturday. Of the several visiting teams this will be the strongest. Two years ago a metropolitan eighteen defeated them on Erskineville Oval; since then, however, Geelong have come to the front in the Victorian League competition, and on Saturday last defeated Essendon, the 1911 premiers.

It is proposed by the selectors to pick the eighteen to meet Geelong at the conclusion of Saturday's match. Seeing that two of the selectors will have been engaged against East Fremantle, and the third will be away in Riverina as manager of the touring team, the wisdom of such a course is not quite apparent. It is doubtful policy to have players on the selection committee at all.

What a reversal of form the Paddington-East Sydney match produced! What looked a sure victory "on paper" for Paddington proved the reverse. After the first 10 minutes it was clear that East Sydney were the superior team. With the exception of Manchester, whose energies did not flag from bounce to final bell, and the dashing efforts of Mahony, Paddington seemed to be all abroad. Besides, they were ill-advised to kick the wet ball on the ground. A moment's consideration will show the absurdity of this method of play. Players, after carefully placing the ball, frequently make a wretched kick from the position. How much more so is this likely to happen when the ball lays upon the ground in all sorts of positions? The ball used in the British Association game lends itself readily to lusty kicking without having to be placed in position; but this is not the case with the ball used in the Australian game. Of course, it can be dribbled, an art which Rugby players often bring to perfection, but when kicked hard it generally ends in the ludicrous discomfiture of the player attempting it. East Sydney adopted headier wet weather tactics, in so far as they picked up more carefully, and when they secured the ball they made haste to get rid of it, choosing the punt in preference to the drop-kick.

During the next month the New South Wales Football League will have a busy time playing the part of host, the guests being East Fremantle, Geelong (a big party), 30 Canadian cadets, the Victorian Railway team, Queensland League team, the Victorian schoolboys, and the Riverina.

The secretary of the Newtown Club has received a communication from Mr. F. Marlow, of the South Adelaide Football Club, in which he states that that team purposes visiting Sydney in November, but too late to take any part in football. Old-time players will remember that this club came to Sydney more than five and twenty years ago, and have the honour of being one of the first interstate football teams to play on the Sydney Cricket Ground.

During the reception to the East Fremantle Football Club by the Victorian Football League Mr. M'Cracken said that when they had railway communication with Western Australia they would have a yearly Australian carnival. He also stated that Victoria would endeavour to send a team to Western Australia this year. In view of the importance of this State, surely a representative combined team to play in Sydney should have precedence over one to Western Australia. The Australian game will never hold its own here until home-and-home matches with Victoria form the principal features of the football season.

FIXTURES.

SATURDAY, AUGUST 3.

Interstate match, East Fremantle (Western Australia) v Combined Sydney, Australian Football Ground.

BRITISH ASSOCIATION.

THE QUEENSLAND TOUR.

The Tasmanians left for home with an unenviable record, and although the New South Wales players were not thoroughly tested, owing to the weak opposition, it is now being impressed on those who were wont to decry our footballers, when compared with first-class players in Great Britain, that our standard of play is, at least, worthy of some recognition in that respect.

Mirrlees was the pick of the Tasmanian forwards on the form shown here, and Benson was, at times, very prominent. Coombes made a fair half-back, but the need of two sound full-backs was badly felt. Reid shaped like a goal-keeper, though he was hardly first-class, and his knowledge of the various means of saving appeared rather limited. With a little more resource, he should prove a hard man to score against.

It has been found difficult to secure a sufficiently large number of capable players to volunteer for the trip to Queensland, in order to make the New South Wales team thoroughly representative. The tour will occupy two playing Saturdays, viz., August 10 and 17, on which it will probably be necessary to set down some of the most important of the Rawson Cup matches. Glebe, Sydney, and Balmain are all in the running in the Rawson Cup division of the First League, and a defeat, more or less, will possibly make all the difference to any one of the teams' prospects.

Two interstate matches will be played during the tour of the New South Wales team, one being fixed during show week in Brisbane.

The trip will not greatly interfere with the Gardiner Cup competition. Sydney and Cessnock have already qualified for the semi-finals, which are at present scheduled for August 24. The winner of the replay between Corrimal and Garden Island on Saturday next will be the third semi-finalist, but Balmain A will probably have to play their match in the qualifying round while the New South Wales team is away. The second replay between Balmain C and Burns' Anniversary is a fixture for Saturday next; the winner will meet Balmain A to decide which will be the fourth team in the semi-final.

LOCAL GAMES.

Sydney had a close call against Balmain B. The goalkeeper who has stood so well to them since the beginning of the season did not put in an appearance, and F. Nicholls, after starting speedily, had to retire owing to his knee giving way. Only the stanch work of Gallagher and Herron in the forward line, and the splendid defence by the halves and backs enabled Sydney to gain the advantage.

A STERLING HALF-BACK.

Meehan was invaluable. In addition to tackling with telling effect, he came up several times with the forwards, and at one particular stage of the game he must have sent along four or five dangerous shots within the space of a couple of minutes, finally scoring one of the finest goals one has seen.

In a lesser degree Holcombe was also successful as a half-back for Newtown, insofar as he assisted the forwards in attack, but he partly neglected his work as centre-half, and remained too much with the forwards, for the opposing side had an easy passage down the field to the Newtown backs. On the other hand, Meehan was continually on the move in following the ball, and was never found out of position when Balmain threatened attack on his wing.

GROGAN QUIETENED.

The Balmain players showed such dash that they frequently came through down the centre of the field. Jackson, Pryde, and Ferguson were in good form. Harrigan kept close to Grogan when Sydney's outside right looked likely to put in one of his characteristic runs, but Gallagher's judgment in cutting through without passing to Grogan was very successful. Latta defended in a very capable manner, and Law was the best of the halves, though Ferrier was frequently prominent.

The wet ground did not appear to suit Burns, the Sydney centre forward, but the rest of the players seemed quite at home.

FINE GAMES IN STORE.

The competition for the Rawson cup is narrowing down in the number of matches to be decided, but the three leading teams continue to add to their victories. The matches, Balmain v Glebe and v Sydney, and that between Glebe and Sydney should provide sufficient excitement for the most exacting adherent of the code. As the semi-finals and final of the Gardiner cup also promise to be strenuous games, the balance of the season will probably be more interesting to the average spectator than that part taken up by the interstate matches, which were undoubtedly disappointing through being so one-sided.

TALKATIVE PLAYERS.

Although Newtown have no prospect of winning the Rawson cup, they are still worthy opponents, as Balmain were aware on Saturday, and as Glebe and Sydney will also realise in the remaining matches. Little weaknesses were noticeable in Newtown's forward line, though not in the restriction of free speech, for the majority of them appeared most anxious to advise the others. Milton did not seem eager to go in pursuit of the ball, Parry was rather slow, and Grummett hardly accurate enough in his centre kicks.

Blake showed more pace than Thomson, but the Balmain full-back followed his man closely and hampered the final movements of his adversary a good deal. Byers impeded the progress of the Newtown forwards on many occasions.

Of the Balmain forwards, Ferguson was the most dashing, with M'Donald a close second. N. Ratgens did not render material assistance to any great extent.

FIXTURES.

SATURDAY, AUGUST 3.
GARDINER CUP.

Corrimal v The Navy (Garden Islands), Sydney Cricket Ground, at 3.15; Balmain C v Burns' Anniversary, Sydney Cricket Ground, at 1.45—both replays.

FIRST LEAGUE RAWSON CUP.

Sydney v Canterbury, Campsie, at 3.15; Glebe v The Navy, Lyne Park, at 3.15; Balmain v Granville, Clyde, at 3.

FIRST LEAGUE—ASSOCIATION CUP.

West Sydney v Newtown, Sydenham, at 3.15; Balmain v The Police, Police Barracks Area, 3.15; Y.M.C.A. v Glebe, Moore Park No. 9, at 3.15.

BILLIARDS.

THE INMAN-REECE RIVALRY.

HAVERSON'S FINE PLAY.

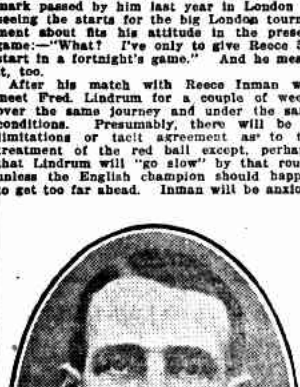
There is a keenness in the rivalry displayed by Reece and Inman in the present match that is a distinct relief from the lackadaisical method of the majority of exhibition games. In the match under review more double baulks have been set up, more coups run, and more safety tactics adopted than in any important game between visiting players that had previously been played in Sydney.

This rivalry is of long-standing. Reece is of the opinion that he is Inman's superior as a player. He undoubtedly is, to watch. However, the latter has the happy—Reece terms it "lucky"—knack of winning just when his opponent fancies the honours are his. In a way Reece dreads playing against Inman. The champion "slows" him down; instead of moving the balls along the cushions with gentle taps, and running up century breaks at the rate of three and a half minutes to the hundred, most of his time is taken up in thinking out schemes to checkmate Inman's double baulks, coups, misses, and other safety tactics. Hence, Reece is not seen at his best when playing against Inman, although his performances during the past week have been exceptionally good. His 513 in record time on Thursday was one of the finest breaks ever compiled in Sydney. At no period did Reece make a faulty stroke. The runs of close cannons were his masterpieces, and makes one regret that the controllers of the game in England saw fit to limit the number of cannons made by this scientific process.

No doubt it was wise to limit the cradle cannon, but it is doubtful if it was just to alter the rail nurse in the manner they did. This piece of legislature handicaps Reece greatly, for were unlimited close cannons allowed, there is little doubt that he and not Inman would now be the recognised champion of English billiards. As it is, there is very little between them, and if Reece only had the same self-control as his more mechanical opponent, he would be almost certain to win, despite the disabilities referred to.

As for Inman, he never gets ruffled. He treats the game very seriously. He is always certain that he cannot lose. A remark passed by him last year in London on seeing the starts for the big London tournament about fits his attitude in the present game:—"What? I've only to give Reece 500 start in a fortnight's game." And he meant it, too.

After his match with Reece Inman will meet Fred. Lindrum for a couple of weeks over the same journey and under the same conditions. Presumably, there will be no limitations or tacit agreement as to the treatment of the red ball except, perhaps, that Lindrum will "go slow" by that route, unless the English champion should happen to get too far ahead. Inman will be anxious to maintain his reputation, while Lindrum will strive to wipe out the severe drubbing of 5762 points in 16,000 which Inman meted out to him in London some months ago. If the Australian uses the red he will undoubtedly avenge that defeat almost as signally as it was administered, but if he tinkers with his game, that debacle will go unavenged.



L. J. REYNOLDS (North Sydney),
A Brilliant Forward. He will captain the New South Wales team against Queensland on Saturday next.

It is a pity that the international tournament and the Reece-Inman contest should clash. There is not room in Sydney for two first-class billiard shows at the same time, consequently the "three fights to a finish weekly" at Messrs. Heiron and Smith's rooms were poorly attended, as compared with the gathering at the "money match" at Billiards, Limited. William's withdrawal after taking part in the opening heat was the beginning of a sea of trouble. Frank Smith junior, took his place, but "could not hit a ball" for the first session, and failed to make a century break in his three heats. His father did a little better against the same opponent on Friday and Saturday, but both the Sydneyites were a disappointment, and do not appear to possess the nerve necessary for big billiards—for billiards is essentially a game of nerves—nerve is touch, and touch is nerve.

Edward Diggle did little better than the Smiths, when he met F. Weiss. This was the second occasion on which the pair crossed cues in competition; Weiss has won both—the English engagement by 800 in 9000, and last week's heat by 1001. Weiss played well, but Diggle did not attempt breaks after the first session. Some of the shots that were missed by him were very easy ones. The event appears to have resolved itself into a duel between Harverson and Weiss, who will meet next week. The others appear to be hopelessly out of the running.

Harverson and Reece were anxious to play Frank Smith, jun., a match at snooker, but the latter tacked on such impossible conditions that a contest was out of the question. If the youth waives his demand for a certain make of ball matches may be arranged.

Williams's challenge to Reece and the rest of the English players was only noticed by one of them—Reece—and he would not meet the challenger unless he received three-quarters of the gate-money, "win, lose, or draw." So that match may also be considered off.

Tattersall's Club tournament, now in progress, used to be the tit-bit of the billiard season a decade back, when much greater interest was taken in an individual heat than is now centred in the final. In those days many members of the medical profession were constant visitors and competitors, but golf has now lured them to the other green, where they take exercise in the open air, and under less exacting conditions.

City Tattersall's Club, the young offshoot of the premier institution, appears to impart more energy to its tournament than the older body, judging by the large nominations and enthusiasm displayed since the event started.

FIXTURES.

July 31 to August 3.—Reece v Inman, 18,000 up, for £200, at Alcock's Tournament Hall, afternoons at 3, evenings at 8 o'clock.

July 31 to August 13.—The International Tournament, heats of 9000 up, at Heiron and Smith's Hall, afternoon and evening sessions at 3 and 8 o'clock.

July 31 and following Evenings.—Tattersall's Club and City Tattersall's Club annual tournaments.

BOXING.

The newly-roofed stadium will be opened on Saturday night, when Sam M'Vea and Sam Langford will endeavour to definitely decide the question of supremacy, also which of them will have the opportunity of meeting Jack Johnson for the world's title. Both men are reported to be in the best of condition.

Paul Til, the French lightweight, who is under contract to the Stadium, was due to arrive at Fremantle yesterday. His first opponent in Australia will in all probability be Jack Read, and, failing him, Hock Keys.

Ernie Zanders, whom they call "the fighting printer," is advertised to box a few rounds prior to the big contest on Saturday next. Zanders' first 15 engagements were all victories—ten of them by the knock-out. A few months ago his backers were challenging the world at welter-weights, but Zanders, who is just of age, is growing heavier very rapidly, and can now box only as a middle-weight.

Maurice Fleming, the South African middle-weight, who showed up well in all his local contests, but who had the misfortune to fracture his arm twice, left on Monday on the barquentine Lindsten for New Zealand, where he purposes spending a short holiday.

Now that he has completely recovered from the effects of his recent operations, Bill Lang has announced his intention of returning to the ring.

"Bob" Maher is another likely arrival in Australia within the next couple of months. He is a stocky middle-weight, with a rushing style, which, in his earlier career, got him the name of the "wild bear."

FIXTURES.

Stadium: Saturday, August 3, Sam Langford v Sam McVea.

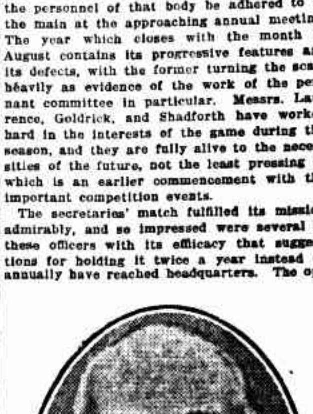
Gaiety Athletic Club: Saturday, August 3, Young Dibley v George Prentice; Tuesday, August 6, Hock Keys v Young Hanley, 8.

BOWLING.

RANDOM NOTES.

Now is the winter of bowlers' discontent. Chilling winds and incessant rain for three weeks, with scarce a break, have precluded active participation in the delights of the green. With the decision of the Maxfield Shield the Association programme of competitions came to a close, somewhat tardily perhaps, but the experience will not be lost on the executive committee, especially if the personnel of that body be adhered to in the main at the approaching annual meeting. The year which closes with the month of August contains its progressive features and its defects, with the former turning the scale heavily as evidence of the work of the pennant committee in particular. Messrs. Laurence, Goldrick, and Shadforth have worked hard in the interests of the game during the season, and they are fully alive to the necessities of the future, not the least pressing of which is an earlier commencement with the important competition events.

The secretaries' match fulfilled its mission admirably, and so impressed were several of these officers with its efficacy that suggestions for holding it twice a year instead of annually have reached headquarters. The opportunity for filling vacant dates was readily seized, and closer secretarial acquaintance must inevitably facilitate club arrangements.



Mr. J. J. CALVERT
(President of the New South Wales Rugby Union). Mr. Calvert has held the position since the foundation of the Union in 1873, a period of 39 years.

So many changes in policy took place during the year that a thorough revision of the rules book became imperative. The work of the sub-committee in this regard has been completed, and was submitted to last night's meeting of delegates.

The Australian Council has intimated that it will fix the dates for interstate matches in each State each year, that it cannot alter its decision re the Queensland-New South Wales engagement in September, and that no objection stands in the way of friendly matches.

Nominations for the visit to Queensland are invited, and should be in the hands of Mr. Shadforth by August 15. The team will leave Sydney early in September.

A return match with the Northern District Association at Newcastle is on the tapis for August. A meeting of the delegates to that body will consider the matter almost immediately.

The annual meeting of the State Association is set down for September in each year (vide new rule No. 25), and secretaries of affiliated clubs should not overlook the fact that the names of accredited representatives should be sent to Mr. Shadforth in good time.

The president's team will not visit Parramatta to-day, a postponement having been decided upon till August 14.

N.S.W. IN THE UNITED KINGDOM.

The performances of our team of late weeks have been of such a character as to cause feelings of pride in local bowling circles. In the pavilions and clubhouses and in other quarters where bowlers congregate may be heard congratulatory references to their sustained success. The excellent impressions which their skill created on the greens of England, and which were generously reflected in the columns of the home bowling journals, have been intensified beyond measure by their wonderful victories in the very cradle of the pastime, Bonnie Scotland. As one writer remarked in reference to their tour of South Wales, the twin experience of rain and defeat marred at least some of the pleasures of their jaunt. "A lot of excuses are being made for their defeats," continues the critic, "but only two feasible causes present themselves to my mind, and they are the rain-soaked greens and the keen quality of their opponents' play. The Australians do not care for those heavy swards which some of the home talent revel in, for Welsh players particularly are used to trundling over greens on which the 'swish' of water is to be heard when the wood is delivered. The bowlers of Wales intend to go far in the international events of future years. They have got the right spirit of play, a highly infectious contagion which has percolated through England from Scotland. Personally I do not expect the Australians to play mighty well against the Scots' teams at home. I have the advantage of knowing the worth of an average Scotch club side."

WARD S. PRENTICE (Western Suburbs),
The Famous Five-eighth, who toured Great Britain with the "Wallaby" Rugby Team in 1908.

In view of such opinions as the foregoing, the record of New South Wales in Scotland is doubly gratifying. The great international games between England, Wales, Scotland, and Ireland were set down for decision on July 4, 5, and 6, at Glasgow, and it is probable that some at least of the Australian party would witness the play. The experience of watching the picked bowlers of the United Kingdom in this historic contest could not fail to be profitable, and as onlookers, who are said to see most of the game, they would gain sounder knowledge than can possibly be acquired during the heat and excitement of actual conflict. The value of playing through an English season has been demonstrated scores of times in the case of Australia's young cricketers, and the less fortunate clubmates of the touring bowlers will watch with keen interest on their return the effect which the diversified methods and styles of play have brought about.

A player of rare endowments indeed was encountered in the Brownswood match, and, provided that his qualifications have not been overstated, he may aptly be termed a unique bowler. Ambidextrous performers in other games are not unknown, as, for instance, in billiards and cricket, but even the executants themselves, without exception, probably, would confess to a decided preference for one hand or the other if interrogated. The case under notice is that of Mr. W. E. Warran, one of the Brownswood skips, who uses either hand as the position of the woods or fancy dictates. He is credited with the remarkable achievement of standing on the mat with a bowl in each hand, and, delivering them simultaneously, placing both on the jack. Most bowlers find it difficult enough to gauge the green and length with one bowl, but considering that on almost every green there is more "draw" on one hand than the other, and consequently a difference in the "strength" required to rest on the kitty, the difficulty pales into insignificance before that of the performance quoted. Placed against our redoubtable Harry Thorpe, he was confronted with the problem of saving six with his last wood, but playing it on the back hand with his left hand, he succeeded in cutting the jack a few feet, and saved five. Warran was unlucky in not catching the white ball full and trailing it through to his own timber, but as it was the effort was a remarkable one.

Inclusive of July 24, the record of the team was:—Played 36 matches, won 25, lost 11. As far as June 20, the total number of games played was 20, but in two of these details have not come through. In connection with the other 18 the following figures have been compiled, showing 39 rink wins against 29 losses, and four ties, and an aggregate of 1534 points against 1343, a surplus of 191 in favour of New South Wales.

BANKS AND INSURANCE v WAVERLEY.

Instituted in 1895 by that prince of organisers, Mr. H. C. Evans, the above match with each passing year comes more closely under the designation of time-honoured fixtures. Two matches were played in each of the first three years of its history, and thereafter an annual contest became the order of the day. The August bank holiday is appropriately chosen as the date of settlement, so that next Monday will see the twenty-first engagement, weather permitting. Some of the old stalwarts will be in evidence, notably Mr. Evans himself, who will make a special trip from Melbourne for the occasion, Mr. G. S. Arthur, and Mr. Wat. Goddard. The visiting bankers and insurance representatives will be the guests of the Waverley club at luncheon as of yore, and the game will commence punctually at 2.15. Mr. Fred Fullwood has this year been entrusted with the duty of organising the 12 visiting rinks, no light task, and the list is complete. Such an array of players would not be possible on many greens, if indeed on any at all, with the exception of Waverley. Banks and Insurance have some leeway to make up, as the record at present stands 13 to 7 against them.

LAWN TENNIS.

AMERICA AND THE DAVIS CUP.

The cabled news received this week by the Australasian Association to the effect that prospects of America being able to send a team were very discouraging has been received here with regret, though not with surprise, as it was known that some of the most prominent players in the United States, notably M'Loughlin, were not likely to be available. Coming after the American season is so far advanced—such important events as the Longwood championships and Eastern doubles having been completed—indicates fairly well that those players who are showing most ability this year find it difficult to make the trip to Australia. We can only hope that, in spite of all obstacles, the detrmination which characterises the United States National Association will yet triumph, with the result that America and England will be seen in opposition in Australia.

T. J. RICHARDS (Manly),
One of the World's Greatest Rugby Union Forwards. He was a member of the "Wallaby" team which toured Great Britain in 1908.

Prospects for the "little Davis Cup"—the Mars Buckley Cup—are also rather discouraging. Continuous rain in Sydney has delayed the selection of the New South Wales team for the match, which is to begin next Saturday, and has prevented any practice. The members of the home team will, therefore, hardly be in their best form against the challenging Queenslanders. A change has been made in the northern team, Shirley taking the place of N. M'Lean, who finds it impossible to come to Sydney. The change will not affect the strength of the team materially, as there is little difference in ability between the players named.

Queensland will have a stronger team for the six aside match against New South Wales at Brisbane next week. Latest advices state that the side will probably include St. John, Turner, Shirley, Radcliffe, and Lindrum. The lastnamed has shown up well in the Frew competition, which is a species of American tournament amongst the "possibles" for the interstate team. It was instituted a few years ago, and has apparently served good purpose, judging by the good results achieved by Queensland teams of late. The New South Wales team, composing H. Rice, A. B. Jones, N. Peach, H. Morgan, G. Jordan, and G. Dickens, will have its work cut out to emerge successful from the contest, which will be more than ordinarily interesting, for each team will have two seasoned star players, Rice and Jones of the southerners, and St. John and Inmer of Queensland, while the contests in which the four New South Wales colts will meet those of the northern State should be equally attractive.

Although the Haberfield Club will be obliged to leave its present courts next year, it is gratifying to know that, so far from becoming extinct, the club is likely to become stronger than ever. Arrangements have been made for the purchase of two acres of ground immediately at the rear of the present site, and on this it is intended to construct eight courts, four of turf and the rest of loam. Work on the construction of these is to be commenced forthwith. The new arrangement will permit of more members being accepted; and anyone desirous of joining the club may obtain all information from the hon. secretary, Mr. R. R. Mackenzie.

MOTORING.

AUTOMOBILE CLUB OF AUSTRALIA.

The postponement of the petrol consumption test arranged by the Roads and Tours Committee of the Automobile Club of Australia until August 10 caused disappointment to many motoring enthusiasts, but from reports received by the secretary of the club during the past week, touring has been out of the question, the rain and consequent bad state of the roads have been prohibitive. Some, indeed most, of the suburban roads have been impossible. Parramatta-road, and particularly that portion of it known as Taverner's Hill, has been in a very bad condition, the numerous holes being very deceptive and dangerous. Complaint has been heard regarding the Old South Head-road, from Queen-street, the mud on parts of it being inches deep. The La Perouse-road is very bad, especially in the neighbourhood of Matraville. The Parramatta to Windsor road has been in an unspeakable condition on account of the mud and clay, and quite impassable after M'Grath's Hill, the flat between the hill and the town being completely flooded. A member of the club resident at Parramatta ventured along the Windsor-road on Sunday, but decided to return after driving about ten miles, his car at the finish being almost unrecognisable, owing to mud splashings. Members are advised that it would be unpleasant, if not unwise, to venture far from Sydney by car in any direction until the rain has stopped and the weather definitely settled.

NOTES AND NEWS.

An interesting report which bears on the reliability of the modern motor-cars has been received by Mr. Sorrell, of the Cadillac Agency, from Mr. W. A. Cramsie, of Glen Innes, in which the latter states: "I left Grafton and ran through to Glen Innes in [illegible] hours, a journey of [illegible] miles. The roads were in a very [illegible] state, as a result of the recent rains, [illegible] I consider the performance a very good one. The bonnet of the car was not lifted once during the journey."

At present the North Coast roads are at their worst, and the latest report from a rider of a B. and H. cycle is to the effect that the route is rough and hilly from Coff's Harbour to Raleigh. However, it is in much better condition from there to Urunga, at the Bellingen Heads. Thence to Macksville the road is good, except for a few hills. On to Barrangaratti, about 17 miles on the Kempsey-road, it is hilly, and the surface is not too good; but for the next 20 miles, into Kempsey, it is level going, and can be covered with ease. From Kempsey to Bellbrook, about 37 miles, the road is fairly good all the way, but after leaving Bellbrook en route to Armidale the road is very hilly. At one place, about 38 miles from Bellbrook, there is a hill about seven miles long, and, with the exception of some 300 or 400 yards, it is hard to negotiate. Hillgrove is about 19 miles from the top of the hill, but there are some stiff pinches to be surmounted, and the road is badly in need of repair in many places. From Hillgrove to Armidale the going is good, and in the vicinity of the latter place there are some splendid stretches of road. Fourteen miles on the southern side of the town the road conditions are bad, until within six or seven miles of Tamworth, where they are well cared for, but only within a limited radius of, say, 10 miles on the average from the town centre. On the way to Wallabadah the first section is good, but the rest of the way is in very bad condition. Very little metal has been placed on the road, and for several miles the black soil is troublesome. This soil, when caked after rain, is hard going, but during wet weather almost anything would "bog" in it. A few days ago a motor-car was down to the axles about 16 miles out of Tamworth. The roads in this section can only be described as being very bad, with a few good patches here and there. From Wallabadah to Murrurundi the road, although hilly, improved considerably, and could be classed as good in fine weather.

A small monthly magazine devoted to motors, known as the "Austin Advocate," has been forwarded by Dalgety and Co., Ltd. It is nicely arranged and printed, and contains many items of general interest to motorists, including mechanical hints, special articles, and good descriptive foreign tours.

MOTOR CYCLE CLUB OF N.S.W.

The final round for the L.M.C. Trophy will take place on Saturday on the Carrington Hill, Coogee, at 2.30, and some exciting racing is promised. A gold medal will be presented by the club to the winner, providing he is not the winner of previous rounds. Therefore competitors who may think they have little chance in the actual result will have a medal to compete for. The following is the number of points scored, the lowest numbers being the leading men:—A. H. Zink (3½ Speedwell), E. Fletcher (3½ B.S.A.), 5; E. Bunting (3½ Sarolea), 6; N. Saunders (3½ Bradbury), 7; G. Schliemann (3½ Coventry), 8; R. Robinson (3½ T.T. Speedwell), E. J. Skinner (3½ T.T. Premier), E. Childs (3½ Sarolea), 9; E. Rigg (3½ T.T. Triumph), J. Fair (3½ T.T. Speedwell), H. J. Clements (3½ T.T. Rudge), A. Searl (3½ T.T. Rudge), J. D. Elliott (3½ L.M.C.), J. Wellspring (3½ B.S.A.), E. Whybury (3½ T.T. Victa), J. Blomley (3½ Triumph), 10; A. Metcalfe (3½ T.T. Speedwell), F. Scott (3½ T.T. Speedwell), H. Wayland (3½ T.T. Bradbury), 11; H. Seabrook (3½ T.T. Bradbury), A. Robinson (3½ T.T. Triumph), G. Higlett (3½ T.T. Premier), F. Ross (3½ T.T. L.M.C.), R. Glanfield (3½ Bradbury), A. Hargreaves (3½ Speedwell), J. K. Richards (3½ L.M.C.), R. Hughes (3½ Triumph), H. Bartlett (3½ Ivy), A. Macfarlane (3½ T.T. Bradbury), H. Saunders (3½ T.T. Ariel), A. Watson (3½ N.S.U.), W. N. Millar (3½ L.M.C.), R. Willard (3½ L.M.C.), H. Macartney (3½ Premier), C. Sanderson (3½ Coventry), A. Fraser (3½ L.M.C.), 12.

At the general meeting on Thursday eight new members were elected. It was decided to send a representative to Melbourne to compete in the interstate championships.

A challenge will be issued for a hill-climb, to be limited to three twin cylinders, three speed models, and three touring, the fastest of the nine representatives to be the winning club. Mr. Alphonso Brown, who is a vice-president of the club, has given a trophy, valued at £5 5s, for the contest.

The club's smoke concert will take place to-morrow night at the G.U.O.O. Hall, Castlereagh-street, when the president, A. E. Morton, will present the prizes won in the recent competition.

ROWING.

ENGLISH CRITICISM.

English criticism of the Australian eight has been both varied and plentiful, but that which was published in the "Herald" on Saturday last, is, perhaps, the most interesting and instructive. It was written by "W.B.W.," who is no doubt William B. Woodgate, a graduate of Brasenose College, Oxford, a barrister, and present editor of the "Field." He rowed in the winning Oxford crews of 1862 (bow) and 1863 (No. 4), also in a number of other races at his university; also at Henley. He was both an oarsman and sculler of considerable ability, and among his trophies would be found the Diamond Sculls of 1864, and the Wingfield Sculls of 1862-64 and 67. The previous editor of the "Field" was an active rower about the same time, the late Edward Dampier Brickwood. This was when slides were unknown, and oarsmen were seated about 13 inches away from the work, or rowing thowl. Mr. Brickwood published useful books on rowing, and so has Mr. Woodgate in more recent years, one in particular having a wide circulation, and is certainly as great an aid to the uninitiated oarsman as any other book on the subject; but Mr. Brickwood criticised it adversely in reviewing it.

The interest in "W.B.W.'s" criticism of our eight is enhanced because it has been claimed that the foundation of Victorian rowing has been laid down on his text book; yet he has failed to recognise in Australian methods the ideal he had in view when he put into book form the results of his wide experience. New South Wales rowing of the present day is an adaptation of the Victorian. It is, however, quite plain that we do not row as Mr. Woodgate meant his book to teach us, and the work done is nearly all on wrong lines. The forward reach is considered too short, and there is not length enough in the swing back at the finish of the stroke. The points which found favour were several in number. He liked the way the hands were got away after the blades were released, the arms being shot away lively and straight. The feather was clean, the wrist work sharp and incisive, and there was no washing out of the blades at the finish. The action of keeping the elbows well down, and near the body, when the arms were bent, so as to make the finish, was considered very good, and a vast improvement on the American style of throwing the elbows out from the body.

As to the fittings of the boat, "W.B.W." does not approve of them, nor does he like the short oars. He prefers side-seating to centre-seating, as a reason that longer inboard oars can be used; but if that is worth having, why not increase the length of the riggers, and seat the crew over the centre if only for neatness in appearance? Our oars are about 5in shorter overall, and a couple of inches shorter inboard, but the rowing pin is fully 2in nearer the men in our boats, which makes a deal of difference. A more natural forward reach can be got, and although the space is the same in both boats, and the oars the same thickness, yet our oarsmen can always chock with the reach they get, and chock when the finish is effected. English rowers can do no more, but, because the poppet is further away they have to crouch lower to get the reach. Our men, too, are seated higher off the skin of the boat, and the heels are higher. This enables the rowers to lift better. Another point is that in our boat the height of poppet sill above the seat is about six inches, but in an English boat, carrying a crew of similar weight, the height is a full inch more, a proof that the Australian boat draws less water, for both are nine to nine and a quarter inches in depth.

The use of a fin as well as deep rudder was not favoured, because the stern part was so deep, but the point is lost that the boat has height out of the water, not depth in it. As to the length of oars, they are long enough for the leverage, which is fully two inches less than in English builds. We have tried 31 inches, and greatly prefer 29. English builders seem conservative to a fault, and even the cracks of strongest personality have to accept the views of builders as the right thing for the requirements of a crew. Some years ago—1896—James Stanbury was ordering a sculling boat from a famous builder on the Thames. He asked for a good deal of spring, or rise in the ends. The builder replied, "Who's building the boat, you or I." "Well," said the Australian, "I am paying for her." "Isn't the water flat, so why shouldn't the boat be flat?" asked the expert builder. The order was refused, and Stanbury had to go elsewhere for his boat.

A meeting of supporters of Balmain Regatta will be held this evening at Balmain Town Hall to consider the advisability of holding the annual aquatic carnival this year. In 1849 the first regatta was held, and the sequence remains unbroken, although the date has been changed from St. Andrew's Day to King's Birthday, and was held last year on Eight-hour Day, there being no other suitable holiday between October and the end of the year. The Mayor and aldermen of the aquatic suburb are keen in their support.

THE ULMARRA HUNDRED.

Our Ulmarra correspondent writes:—The annual report submitted to the annual meeting of members of the above club a few days ago discloses a highly satisfactory state of affairs. The club has only been in existence about 12 months, but during that time the membership has grown to about one hundred. Six new up-to-date boats were purchased during the year, and a number of regattas were held, including the first Ulmarra Hundred, which resulted so successfully. The club spent over £400 in purchase of boats, prize-money, etc., but notwithstanding this large initial expenditure it ended the year with a debit balance of only [illegible]. Arrangements are now being made for the next Ulmarra Hundred. It has been [illegible] that the date of this function [illegible] October 5, which will, by the [illegible] of the date decided upon for the Coraki Hundred. Every effort is being made to bring this year's event up to the standard of the opening regatta last year, and larger entries are anticipated. The date is being arranged so as to give visiting scullers an opportunity to reach the Richmond River in time for the Coraki fixture.

BASEBALL.

INTERSTATE CLUB CONTESTS.

The fourth visit of the Melbourne C.C. baseball team to Sydney came to an end on Saturday. In winning two out of three contests they did well; but the honours of the series remain with Leichhardt, the N.S.W. premiers, who, in the first engagement, inflicted a severe defeat on the champions from Victoria. To travel 600 miles, at their own expense, to indulge in their favourite pastime, is eloquent testimony to Victorian players' enthusiasm, and is an example which some of our teams might reciprocate.

Fortunately the rain held off long enough to enable the Victorians to play the series of matches arranged. In defeating University and Waverley, who rank second and third in the district competition, there was some compensation for the inconvenience and discomfort otherwise met with. On a saturated turf and with a slippery ball the baseballer from Victoria is more at home than his Sydney rival.

On Wednesday and Saturday last, against University and Waverley, on slow and sloppy grounds, the visitors showed to far greater advantage than against Leichhardt, and displayed greater capacity to cope with the vagaries of the ball and turf than their opponents. Without detracting from the merit of their victories, they were fortunate in meeting the defeated teams somewhat depleted and below their ordinary efficiency. For instance, Single, 'Varsity's regular pitcher, had developed a "glass arm," and only pitched in two innings, his place being taken by a novice in F. Farrar. Waverley were minus H. Woolcott, whose speed might have made a considerable difference, whereas after Stacey "fell down" three unrecognised pitchers had to be called into action, and the batters had a royal time.

As forecasted, the visitors' exhibition in their opening contest proved to be no criterion of their capabilities. The alteration in their attack and defence contributed in no small measure to their success. Ransford does not possess the physique, stamina, nor experience as a pitcher to sustain the strain of a hard contest, and the substitution of Over, who won both his games, was a happy experiment. The evergreen, who is 47 years of age, uses his head, for his slows proved very deceptive.

The bringing in of Vaughan from the outfield to third base, the changing of Johnston to first, and the stationing of Ransford in his specialised position at right field, all conduced to a higher standard. The players fitted in to their positions, the team combined better in defence, apart from their improvement aggressively in striking. Ransford's outfielding was brilliant, especially in the last game. Fink, at centre, also revealed a sound knowledge of the requirements of the position, and worked effectively. Vaughan, at the home turn, was a solid support, and Ingleton retrieved some of his former glory. Taylor behind the bat was plucky, a hard trier, and showed promise as an able catcher.

In the three games, which embraced 24 innings, the M.C.C. scored 35 runs to 26. They tallied in 10 sessions, and failed in 14; their adversaries scored in 12, and were shut out in 11 times at bat. The majority of the visitors returned home by express on Sunday night.

The result of the match between Leichhardt and University now places the former on top of the competition. They have yet to meet Paddington and Petersham on their own ground, and, if necessary, Lane Cove at Longueville. After the conclusion of the second round, which terminates on the 10th proximo, the intention is to draw the four leading clubs against each other first, and the remaining four similarly, and according to the highest percentages of wins over losses matching them until the season closes. Under this approved system it is possible Leichhardt may have to meet University again. Judged on performances Leichhardt's prospects are the brightest, although their position is not impregnable.

The match on Saturday was the first time the two leaders met, rain having prevented the first fixture being played. As each had only sustained one defeat, and that at the hands of Waverley, great interest was aroused. There was no luck about the "The Explorers'" victory. Notwithstanding only seven innings were completed, it was convincing enough to satisfy even their most biassed opponents. If they shine in one department of the game more than another it is in their consistent striking. Throughout their batting there is not a weak man.

Leichhardt went to bat 33 times, made 13 safe hits for 6 runs, and stole 4 bases. University batted 26 times, made 7 safe hits for 1 run, and stole 3 bases. C. Franks struck out 7, gave one first base, and made 8 assists. Single struck out 1, walked 5, and made 5 assists. Stephens and Lane at first were credited with 8 and 7 put outs respectively. The comparison shows that the winners made better use of their opportunities.

The New South Wales team selected for the carnival to be held on Richmond Cricket Ground, in Melbourne, early next month, is a good one, and providing the chosen are all available they should render an excellent account of themselves. It is to be hoped club considerations will not be allowed to stand in the way.

Probably no selection yet has given entire satisfaction, and this may be no exception to the rule. On previous occasions great dissatisfaction has been caused through preference being given to players for positions they do not usually occupy, while the regular players in those positions have been overlooked.

The question of merit is always a matter of opinion, and opinions will differ. The selectors are to be complimented on not repeating the blunder. Every man chosen plays in the position allotted. If Simmonds and Machado can work concertedly, with good support behind them, the other States will be up against a tough proposition. H. and J. Franks are a formidable reserve battery, Machado, A. Thomas, L. Turner, and A. Campbell are debutants.

SKATING.

J. W. Munch, the American skater, left for his home on Monday by the Makura. During his two months' stay in Sydney Munch was kept busy by local champions, who challenged him repeatedly. The visitor endeavoured to meet as many of them as possible, and took part in 12 matches without being defeated. Munch is a very speedy skater, much speedier than his style suggests, as on his Sydney form he is a glider. Unlike the local men, he uses his body, especially his shoulders, to get up speed, and he races with his head as well as his feet. He is a typical American, 31 years of age, and is a keen business man. He created much amusement by the way in which he dawdled round the Exhibition rink track picking up hairpins and lollies prior to his match with Alex. McEwen. Though he was booted for taking exception to the manner in which the starting line was drawn across the corner, he was in the right. The Exhibition Rink management carried out the event in a very capable manner. That the racing created interest is evidenced by the fact that over 5000 people attended on the three evenings on which Munch appeared. M'Ewen, the Australasian champion, whom Munch defeated, is a small youth, 19 years of age. All he needs to become a really great skater is experience. Munch thinks a lot of his abilities. The American made many friends during his stay in Sydney.

SWIMMING.

The Australian swimmers at the Olympic Games are in great demand, as the invitations already mentioned in these columns have been added to. H. Meyboom, who won the 100 yards English championship in 1908, wrote from Brussels to Mr. A. C. W. Hill, the manager of the team, in an endeavour to arrange for a visit to Spa, a bathing place in the Ardennes Mountains, on August 3 and 4, and at Brussels on August 6. The Berliner Schwimm-Verein Friesen asked for a visit from the team on August 10 and 11 at Berlin. The Hungarian Association (Magyar Moza Szovetseg) wants the team to swim at Vienna on August 3 and 4, and at Buda Pest on August 10 and 11. The same body wants a second tour by Longworth after September 6. The "Dagens Nyheter," from which the above particulars are taken, further states that the Australians were not yet able to accept the invitation owing to the clashing of dates, and to the large number of invitations received. It is apparent that the Australian swimmer is very popular on the Continent, due, no doubt, to the former appearances of Cecil Healy, Frank Springfield, Frank Beaurepaire, etc.

From English files to hand, it appears that Miss Fanny Durack had great trouble in striking form. "Aquarius," in the "Sporting Life," refers to the matter thus:—"Last week, through an error, I quoted Miss Fanny Durack as being confident of doing 69s for 100 metres. This should have read 100yds. Nevertheless, recent reports of the Australian champion somewhat alter my views, for her practice trials show that the cold water has greatly affected her times, and she cannot get within seconds of Miss Daisy Curwen's latest performances. The latter's achievement on Monday last at Birkenhead in covering 100 metres in 1m 20 2-5s, and equalling her own 100yds record, was magnificent."

A member of the team, writing to a "Herald" representative, from Stockholm, says:—"We have heard that Miss Fanny Durack has failed to strike form, and that the English girls are already counting her a back number."

The time of Miss Curwen's is indeed excellent, but Miss Durack's 1m 19 4-5s 100-metres swim at the games over a straightaway course is infinitely better than the English lady's 1m 20 2-5s swim in the 25yds bath at Birkenhead.

The mile championship of England will take place at Exeter on Saturday next, and the 500yds on Tuesday. Unless Longworth is sufficiently recovered to take part, it is unlikely that Australia will be represented.

THE WEEK IN LONDON.

AN AUSTRALIAN'S NOTES.

(FROM OUR SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT.)

Three Authorities on "Unrest."

LONDON, June 28.

I was present last night at a debate at which three of the leading authorities in England each gave his ideas on the "labour unrest," and the way to cure it. They had been asked there by the "Anglo-Saxon" Club, which organises these discussions. One was a Socialist—Mr. Alfred Henderson; one the leading advocate of co-partnership—Mr. Aneurin Williams; and one of the most notable independent politicians in England—Mr. Harold Cox. The business men, who formed most of the audience, were therefore getting the cream of a good deal of concentrated thought, and the three arguments are worth shortly stating for that reason.

Mr. Harold Cox started. He said he doubted the present unrest were really as serious as in previous stages of the same movement, early in the last century for example. It was not grounded in so much misery, and it was not accompanied by so much violence. Although the cost of living had risen rather more quickly than wages in the last 10 years, yet in the 20 years before that wages had very much increased, and the cost of living fallen immensely. And even in the last 10 years, he thought, the labourer really received more than ever before, because the community had begun to provide him with so many things which is predecessors did not possess; he meant things like cheap trams, perfect drainage, pure water, cheap gas, parks and recreation grounds. The cause of the unrest, he believed, was not economic but social—due to the idea that men who followed some sorts of work must necessarily be inferior socially to those who followed other sorts of work. That idea had got to go once and for all. Economic Socialism was no remedy. "If we are all to lean upon the State," asked Mr. Cox, smiling, "upon whom is the State to lean?" The unrest was found not amongst the poorest workers but amongst the prosperous ones. It mean that, having progressed, they wanted to progress more; and he was not so sure that he wanted to see it cured. It was by unrest that men progressed.

The Socialist and the Co-partner.

Mr. Henderson, the Socialist, said that just because the unrest was amongst men much more prosperous than of old, and was accompanied by less violence and more reasoning methods, therefore it was more serious and not less so. The deep cause of it was the grievance of the wage-earning class against the property owning class. Allowing for all sorts of degrees in between it was mainly true that the poor lived by earning wages, and the rich lived by owning property. At present the property-owners had in their hands all the sources of production—the mills, machinery, materials, and so forth; and a man, however capable he were by his brains or physique, of producing wealth, had no present right to produce it. At present, if he wanted to apply his brains or hands to production he had to go to the property-owner and ask to become a producer with the aid of the property-owner's machinery, and in return for the wages the owner allowed him. What the Socialist proposed was to do away with private ownership, not of property but of the sources of production. A man would still earn money in proportion to his powers; and he could save that money, and use it to acquire property and comforts for himself and his children, or to travel, but not to acquire the sources of production.

Mr. Aneurin Williams said that he had a methods which gave larger increased earnings without the employer losing anything or the worker toiling any harder—co-partnership. It had been proved that the increased earnings which co-partnership gave came out of "waste." The added interest which the worker took in his job resulted in the saving of wealth which had been simply lost before; and under co-partnership all this went to the worker.

Those were the three arguments. But what struck an Australian particularly was the importance which each speaker attributed to the social distinctions between classes of wage-earners as a cause of the unrest. One could not help thinking that, whilst the consideration hardly applies in America or Australia, it really does make up a big part of the special problem of England.

The Special Problem of England.

An Australian gentleman and his small son were sitting near me at the test match at Lords this week—both were taking a keen, intelligent interest in the game. "That's Mr. Fry in that end, isn't it, dad? and Mr. Woolley tots end?" asked the youngster. "Woolley's a professional dear," said his father. "They don't call them Mister." A few minutes later I heard another ejaculation: "That was a good stroke of Mr. Woolley's, wasn't it, dad?—I mean Woolley's," the child corrected himself, after a pause.

The Root of It.

At the same time, the feeling, which causes this distinction to be kept up, really is that the professional, if he were introduced to the members' dressing-room and smoking-room, would be out of place there. The amateurs in a cricket team form, for the time, a small social circle with themselves, making their own conversation, enjoying their own stories, with their interests, upbringing, and ideas almost entirely in common; whilst the "pro.," whose ideas are assumed to be (and sometimes naturally are) different, would break the charmed circle, as it were. He would be out of touch with some of the conversation, and, perhaps, with the manners; and the Englishman values immensely the sort of intercourse that follows between persons of the same manners and ideas, and the intrusion into it of anyone who is out of touch with it is apt to freeze up all sense of freedom and make the Englishman curl up in his shell (and show the intruder quite clearly, sometimes almost brutally, that he does so) in a manner which Australians can seldom understand.

The grades in English society do not mix well, and generally the best people in any grade do not enjoy themselves if they do mix. So far is it different from Australia, that it is one's honest experience that in this country you may almost be suspicious of a man who is more than usually eager to mix with a grade of society above his own or below it; an Englishman instinctively suspects a man who shows himself especially ready to talk to strangers in a railway carriage—and no doubt, as things are in this country, his suspicions might be not without foundation. In Australia, on the other hand, the man to be suspected would be any man who appeared anxious to lay stress on the difference between his status and yours, whether from an apparent sense of his superiority or by paying you unaccustomed deference.

The peculiarity of these distinctions in England is that it is not a case of their being simply assumed by the "upper ten" for their own benefit. The distinctions of breeding, which do, in fact, exist between the classes, and which, as things are, it is impossible altogether to ignore, are recognised as preventing their social intercourse as equals, and are so recognised not only by the upper ten, but by the classes of whom the cricket "pro's" are an example. Indeed the distinctions go far higher than that. As far as one can remember, it never made any difference to a man's relation with his friends in Australia whether he lost his fortune or made it, his old friends remained his friends still, and nobody thought anything else to be possible. A poor person could have rich friends and a rich person poor friends. But there is no question money makes a difference here. I have heard it not only admitted, but justified. A British colonel, himself one of the most charming of men, told me that he considered a man with £300 a year could not properly make a friend of a man with £3000. "I would not make a friend of a very wealthy man, myself," he said. "He would be nice to me, no doubt, and mean to be kind. But I couldn't have his interests and he couldn't have mine. I shouldn't be happy in his set. He would have to find his friends amongst wealthy people and I should find mine amongst nearer ones."

WOMAN'S WORLD.

INTERNATIONAL ASPECT.

SYDNEY CONGRESS.

"We do not represent the women of Australia at present. We should like to feel that we really represented what the women of this country felt and thought. We want the support of those societies who are doing such excellent work in our midst. Also we want more of the educated thinking women, to join the National Council, as associates."

This was the ideal set before the National Council of Women, by Lady Chelmsford this morning to be truly representative of the women of Australia. The occasion was the first interstate congress held in Sydney, and besides the local delegates there were eight delegates from Victoria, six from Tasmania, and one each from Queensland and Western Australia. The gathering was held in the King's Hall, Phillip-street.

PRESIDENT'S ADDRESS.

Lady Chelmsford, in welcoming the delegates, expressed the hope that the visit would be pleasurable and profitable to all. The congress should be a bond of union between those working so keenly in the interests of women all over the Commonwealth. Seeing the amount of time, trouble, and thought spent on the present congress, they should attempt to achieve something definite, so she would set before them what she hoped would be accomplished. Studying the work of the International Council, they found that they centred their energies upon (1) uniformity of methods, (2) gathering statistics, (3) arousing public interest in special subjects, and (4) doing one thing at a time. The International Council met only once in five years, the work being carried on by the standing committees, each of which had charge of a special branch of work. The council wisely realised that its main object was not to initiate definite work, but to collect and tabulate the statistics of the work all over the world, and disseminate the knowledge in all the countries where national councils are established, in the hope that those countries which are behind will rise to the level of the others. It was thus a society for the collection and dissemination of knowledge. Recently they had established an excellent book setting out the legal position of women under the laws of the various nations.

Seeing the wisdom of taking up special subjects, the health committee initiated a health campaign in Ireland. The work was energetically done with lantern lectures, and the result was a greater consideration of the health of the people, and especially on the matter of tuberculosis. Having drawn attention to the need for special work, they left it to the people whose real business it was to carry it out. And they did one thing at a time, but they did it well. (Applause.) It was more important to do a little work thoroughly than spread their energies over half doing many things.

Australia was so far from the other centres that they had to a certain extent to carve out their own career, and find out what came within the sphere of practical politics. They were pleased with what they had accomplished, but a great deal remained to be done. On the question of uniformity they should remember that, though they had five national councils in Australia, yet in the international council they spoke with only one voice, so they should work together as one. It would be well to have the same constitution for all the State councils. (Hear, hear.)

VOLUNTEERS WANTED.

More should be made of the standing committees. (Hear, hear.) They were modelled on the international council, but many of them were skeleton committees, "one-man" committees, and it was hard to get up a discussion, or even a difference of opinion. (Laughter.) There should be a number of women interested in education, or in ameliorating the conditions in factories. Then the place and the way to ventilate their thoughts was to strengthen the committees so that the council should be the voice of the women of the community. (Applause.) The real work of the council was done on these committees.

Then the national council should be a clearing house for women's knowledge, collecting all the available information on subjects affecting women. The affiliated societies were inclined to ask what good is the national council to us? It was no use to them, but it was a great use to the Commonwealth. (Applause.) They were asked to affiliate for the good of the community. Another matter was charity organisation. She could do no better than quote the remarks of Frances Power Cobbe, who said:—

"Intuition will teach me that I must love my neighbour, and reflection will thence deduce that I am bound to relieve the wants of the poor to the best of my ability. But intuitive morals will not teach me what are the wants of the poor. Experience must collect the facts, to which intuitive science is to be applied, and a large and glorious field is thereby opened to it. Without the aggregate experience of millions which statistics afford us, our best efforts are aimed in the dark, and the objects of our ill-directed endeavours are as often injured as aided. In old times, when experience was never applied to such subjects, the mischiefs arising from the indiscriminate bounties were incalculable. Even in our own day there is an immense task for the experimentalist still to do, both with the collection of facts concerning human want and sin, and in drawing inductions of their most efficacious remedies." (Applause.)

So they would take up any subject that interested the community. They had taken up the subject of picture shows, not necessarily for or against, but because the women of the community had a right to deliberate on any subject where the weal or woe of the people was at stake. (Applause.) There were so many wrongs to be righted, so many questions still unsolved. (Applause.)

LOYAL RESPONSES.

Lady Chelmsford then welcomed the interstate delegates, and Mrs. Stourton responded on behalf of Mrs. Dobson, of Tasmania. Dr. Edith Barrett, on behalf of Victoria, said they had 44 affiliated societies as well as 300 associate members. They had established a child saving council, and discussed the baby bonus. (Laughter.) Lady James told of the work in Western Australia. Mrs. Irvine, for the Queensland council, spoke of the difficulty of reaching the scattered areas out back. Their Charity Organisation Society had done away with the over-lapping of charities in Brisbane. Her Excellency Lady Denman, patroness of the national council, was welcomed, and expressed her pleasure at being able to attend. Lady Chelmsford expressed regret at the absence, through illness, of the hon. secretary, Mrs. Jenkins.

Mrs. Dobson (Tas.) brought up the subject of the proposed international congress in 1914.

It was eventually decided that the next international congress should be held in Melbourne—with meetings in Sydney if possible—somewhere about August or September, in 1914.

LADY DENMAN'S ADDRESS.

Lady Denman presided at the afternoon session, and spoke of the great interest she had taken in the National Council of Women, not only on account of the good work they had done, but because of what she had heard from Lady Aberdeen, who spoke of what Australia had done, and hoped that Australia would co-operate more and more in the international work. A great deal of the work done by the council was in moulding public opinion. It was much easier to do this if all the councils in all the States were working on the same lines. The great distances in Australia made this co-operation difficult. When Mrs. Dobson was in England she was expected to know everything, not only about her own State, but about all the States of Australia. It reminded her of an old farmer at home, who, when she was leaving for Australia, said he had a son in the north of Western Australia, and would write to him to call on her when she reached Melbourne. (Laughter.) With regard to the international congress in 1914, it would take a great deal of work to make it a success, and all the councils should co-operate. Not only should it be a great international congress, but a great Australian national congress. (Applause.)

Miss Michealis (Vic.) read a paper on the "Importance of International Work." The formation of the international council was due to a company of far-seeing American women, who, after consultation with friends in England and France, convened an international gathering in Washington, U.S.A., in 1888, and Mrs. Fawcett was elected first president. The first quinquennial meeting was held in Chicago in 1893, when Lady Aberdeen was elected president. The second quinquennial was held in London in 1899, when Mrs. Wright Sewell was elected to the chief office. The next gatherings were held in Berlin in 1904, and in Toronto in 1909, Lady Aberdeen being re-elected president. It was a cosmopolitan gathering. There were now 24 national councils affiliated, with a membership of over 7,000,000.

At the conclusion of an address by Miss Rose Scott, reported elsewhere, Lady Denman said that considering all the horrible things that men were allowed to do by reason of the laxity of the law, it was rather a tribute to the men generally that so small a minority took advantage of the law. On the matter of deserted wives, her Excellency said that she went to a great many charitable gatherings in various parts of Australia, and visited many of the institutions, and often asked the reason for the presence of children, who looked as if they ought to be comfortable in their own homes, and very often the reply was that they were the children of deserted wives. If the National Council of Women could make it harder for these men to desert their wives they would be performing a very important work.

A discussion ensued. Mrs. Bogue Luffman referred to a proposal put forward by the Liberal Council to ensure greater justice to women and children. She said that, so far the women could not be very proud of what they had achieved with 10 years' of the franchise. Votes were not given for wire-pulling, but to make an impression on the laws of the country for the benefit of the community as a whole, and especially of women. Eventually Miss Michaelis (Vic.) proposed, and Miss Rose Scott (N.S.W.) seconded, and it was unanimously decided: "That this interstate conference of the National Council recommends national councils in each State to carefully consider the question of deserting husbands and fathers."

At the conclusion of the meetings the delegates were invited to a lantern lecture on the Stockholm Quinquennial Congress, to be given this evening in the Royal Society's room, by Mrs. Dobson, the Australian representative at the congress.

MOUNTAIN SHIRE.

NEW HEADQUARTERS.

There is every probability that the headquarters of the Blue Mountain Shire will be removed from Lawson to Wentworth Falls.

The shire council has now under consideration an offer from Mr. R. M. Pitt, a large land owner in the district, to give the residents free of cost 10 acres of land at Wentworth Falls as a recreation park. The shire council is to act as trustees. Mr. Pitt also purposes to give the council the freehold of a block of land, with 100 feet frontage to the main Western road, and 132 feet to a side street. This corner block is to be used for the erection of a public building, such as a shire hall, within two years from the date of acceptance of the offer.

The council decided to view the land next week in company with Mr. Pitt before coming to a final decision.

NEW ZEALAND POLITICS.

NEW GOVERNMENT'S POLICY.

WELLINGTON (N.Z.), Tuesday.

Parliament will resume to-morrow, when the Massey Government will meet the House for the first time since it defeated the Mackenzie Government three weeks ago. The interval has been spent by the new Administration in framing its policy, which, however, will not be declared for a few days. Ministers are reticent as to what is the policy of the measures to be introduced, but it is understood that the legislation will include an amendment of the Defence Act, intended to enable the principles of compulsory service to be more effectually carried into effect. Another measure to be promulgated will be one placing the Civil Service under the control of an independent board. The Legislative Council is to be made elective. Local Government reform and electoral reform are not likely to be put through this session.

THE SUGAR INDUSTRY.

LEGISLATION IN QUEENSLAND.

BRISBANE, Tuesday.

The Premier has announced the receipt of a wire from the Attorney-General (Mr. O'Sullivan) from Melbourne, stating "that in his opinion we may now proceed to carry into operation the provisions of the Sugar Works Act of 1911. Accordingly the Treasurer will see there is no further delay in connection with the Babinda and Darradgee mills, and will take necessary action with respect to the South Johnstone mill in accordance with the recommendations of the commission."

ANTI-TRUST CASE.

PROSECUTION IN NEW ZEALAND.

WELLINGTON (N.Z.), Tuesday.

The Chief Justice reserved his decision in the case in which discoveries were asked for under an information charging the Colonial Sugar Refining Company with a breach of the Commercial Trusts Act, in that it had given preferential terms to a group of merchants.

STATE ENTERPRISES.

METAL AND JOINERY YIELD PROFITS.

CAPITAL EXPENDITURE, £140,828.

The Minister for Works laid on the table of the Assembly yesterday interesting figures in connection with his State enterprises.

The total capital expenditure on the brickworks, limeworks, metal quarries, timber depot, and joinery works was £140,828 9s 11d.

The net profits of the State joinery works for eight months ended May 31 are set down at £5114 7s, as shown by the following figures:—

Active capital employed		£47,737 9 2
Sales, for eight months ended May 31, 1912		64,296 16 8
Gross profit		16,576 10 0
Net profit (after providing 7½ per cent. depreciation on plant per annum	£4476 18 0
Estimated net profit for the month of June	637 9 0
		5,114 7 0
Percentage of profit on above capital, per annum, after allowing for depreciation		16.07

The statement in regard to the State metal quarry at Kiama shows that 40,446½ tons were quarried and broken during the six months ended June 30, 1912. Of this amount 18,570 tons were delivered to public works, 15,575 tons to municipal and shire councils, and 6237 tons to private contractors.

The total receipts for metal from councils and outside firms is stated to be £9160 7s, and from public works and other departments £7621 7s 1d; total, £16,781 10s 1d.

The total revenue to the credit of the metal quarries for the six months is set down at £17,007 1s 5d, and the total expenditure at £15,282 3s 11d, leaving a net profit for the six months of £1724 17s 6d. The percentage earned on the capital invested is stated to be 16½ per annum.

The following is a statement of the capital expenditure on the State brickworks, limeworks, metal quarries, Uhr's Point timber depot, and Rozelle joinery works:—

Homebush brickworks, establishment	£19,158 0 0
Ditto, to provide means of delivery	8,922 0 0
Botany brick works, establishment	16,680 0 0
Ditto, to provide means of delivery	1,421 0 0
State lime quarries, establishment	5,283 0 0
Kiama State metal quarries	14,530 0 0
S.S. Kiama	8,000 0 0
Port Kembla State metal quarry	2,488 0 0
Uhr's Point timber depot	16,579 0 0
Rozelle joinery works	47,737 9 2
Total	£140,828 9 11

WHY THE MAILS WERE LATE.

OSTERLEY'S ROUGH VOYAGE.

The Orient Company's R.M.S. Osterley, due at Sydney on Thursday, brought the English mails, which were delivered in Sydney yesterday—a day later than usual. The ten hours which the vessel was behind on reaching Adelaide on Saturday night were occasioned by gales and rough seas. She left Fremantle up to time on Tuesday, and should have reached Adelaide in 3½ days, but she met fresh blows from the south-west, which developed into a hard gale, with high seas, until rounding Cape Leeuwin. Moderate conditions obtained for a time. Then strong blows came from the south-south-west, with a rough beam sea and high swell, which lasted while the liner was in the Bight.

Passengers had an earlier experience of rough weather. After leaving Perim and clearing Cape Guardafui on the morning of the 9th the vessel ran into a strong south-west monsoon with high sea and swell, which continued till arrival at Colombo on 13th. During the passage from Colombo to Fremantle north-west winds and showery weather prevailed.

FIRE BRIGADE CONTROL.

WEST WYALONG, Tuesday.

A public meeting last night carried a resolution protesting against the system of having the financing of the fire brigade and its working controlled as at present by the Board of Commissioners in Sydney. It was also resolved that the Minister be asked to have the Act amended, that shire or municipal councils in outlying towns have the sole control of fire brigades.

NEWCASTLE.

CONCILIATION COMMITTEE.

NEWCASTLE, Tuesday.

The Joint Colliery Conciliation Committee met to-day, and further considered the case of the wheelers, topbands, and shiftmen. Mr. R. Thomas, manager of Seapit colliery, was further examined, and Mr. Alexander Mathieson, manager at Hetton colliery, also gave evidence.

Mr. David Watson, on behalf of the Colliery Employees' Federation, handed in a list of claims from the Shortland colliery, which will be dealt with by the committee in due course.

GARRISON ARTILLERY.

Captain J. A. Douglas Robb, officer commanding the Garrison Artillery in Newcastle, speaking with regard to the trouble amongst the members of the Garrison Artillery in Sydney, to-day, said that no difficulties had arisen with the men in Newcastle, who were taking kindly to the new organisation. One effect of the new scheme would be that the men in Newcastle would get uniforms as soon as they were required, and would not have to wait for nine months, as was the case before. Previously, the men at headquarters got preference in this respect, and the men at Newcastle and Wollongong had to wait. A few men in Newcastle were sending in their resignations, but this, said Captain Robb, was owing to the long term of condition of training, or to the fear that employers would not allow the men the time off. The Newcastle company, which numbers 202 men, is the strongest in the Commonwealth. Some complaints had been heard in connection with the regulation prohibiting the use of tobacco, but otherwise the men were perfectly satisfied with the new regulations.

COAL AND OTHER EXPORTS.

The following vessels cleared at the Custom-house to-day:—Komura, s, for Melbourne, with 3150 tons coal and 210 tons bunkers; Clan Ogilvy, s, for Melbourne, with 3500 tons coal and 130 tons bunkers.

MISSIONS TO SEAMEN.

The building occupied by the Mission to Seamen suffered considerable damage during the recent storm, and efforts are at present being made to obtain a new building. A meeting was held last night for the purpose of considering the best methods of raising the necessary funds. The Mayor (Ald. H. M. Shedden) presided, and Dr. Stretch (Bishop of Newcastle), Dr. Golding Bird (Dean of Newcastle), and the Rev. F. W. Hair (Chaplain of the Mission to Seamen) addressed the gathering. It was decided, on the motion of Mr. H. Berkley, seconded by Captain Cummins, "That the meeting resolve itself into a committee for the purpose of raising the sum of £2000 to be devoted towards the erection of a suitable building."

HENLEY ON YARRA.

TEAMS FROM AMERICA.

MELBOURNE, Monday.

When Mr. Elwood Mead left Victoria on Friday last he was entrusted with a commission to arrange for a crew from Canada or the United States to visit Australia next year when the Henley Regatta is being held in Melbourne. If arrangements are brought to a successful issue, the arrival will coincide with the visit here of the English team, which Mr. C. S. Cunningham and other enthusiasts now in England are seeking to bring about. The Henley committee is prepared to arrange a very attractive programme of contests for the visitors. The arrangements, so far as they have proceeded, have the concurrence of the rowing authorities in Sydney, and a series of contests on the Parramatta will follow the Henley meeting.

BRAVERY REWARDED.

GRAFTON, Monday.

Master Sydney Henderson has been presented with a gold medal by parents and schoolmates in recognition of his action in rescuing a child from drowning at Brushgrove. A perambulator containing an infant was blown off the wharf, and young Henderson jumped into the river, which is deep and runs swiftly at the spot, and brought the infant safely to the shore. Some time ago he was presented with a certificate on behalf of the State Government.

SUBURBAN NEWS.

WILLOUGHBY SCHOOL OF ARTS.

The annual report of the Willoughby School of Arts, which has been issued, shows that the year has been one of marked progress. It is hoped that the new building will be completed during the ensuing year, as it is greatly needed. There are 430 members enrolled—a net increase of 75 for the year. The institution is in a healthy financial position, the surplus of assets over liabilities being £1665 3s. The assets are set down at £2487 6s 2d. The receipts to the general fund were £595 4s 6d, and the expenditure £514 11s. With the balance from previous years there was a credit to carry forward of £129 0s 2d. There exists a debit balance on the building fund of £704 17s 8d. Good increases have been made to the library, there being 2500 books now available—an increase of 579 during the year.

PADDINGTON POLICE COURT.

For many months past business has congested at the Paddington Police Court, owing to the fact that there is only one regular sitting in a week. It has now been decided by the Justice Department to revert to the old plan of two sittings per week, the change coming into operation at the beginning of September. The result of the present congestion is that there are frequent adjournments of cases, running over weeks, thus occasionally great expense and inconvenience to the public. As a matter of fact, the list of cases unheard has gradually piled up till there are about 80 waiting their turn. As an example, there are no less than 70 cases set down for hearing at the court this week. Forty of these are cadet prosecutions, and for the following week there are no less than 45 summonses returnable against cadets.

BEXLEY DAIRIES.

A difference of opinion exists between the sanitary inspector for Bexley (Mr. W. J. Devene) and the Board of Health, in regard to the supervision of dairies in the Bexley district, and a letter from the board, read at the last meeting of the council, brought the forthcoming rejoinder from the inspector:—"My attention has been drawn to a letter received from the Board of Health, in answer to this council's inquiry as to why the local supervision of dairies was classed as 'poor,' and asking for suggestions as to how such supervision could be improved. Both the questions have, I notice, been carefully side-stepped, no definite answer having been given to either. The vague assertion that in such an important matter as the milk supply of the district all dairies should be classed as good would be more convincing, if the principle enunciated therein were applied to all cases."

ST. GEORGE LADIES' BENEVOLENT SOCIETY.

The nineteenth annual meeting of members of the St. George Ladies' Benevolent Society was held at Kogarah School of Arts on Friday last, and was well attended. The report of the hon. secretary (Mrs. E. G. Wilson) showed that the vote taken on the question of disbanding had resulted in a decision to continue the work, and, as the sum of £30 was in hand (with only two or three families asking help), it was agreed not to collect for a time, but to work on the funds. During the year 63 individuals, representing 17 families, had been assisted, which, it was thought, was a justification for continuance.

CHEAPER FOOD WANTED.

A deputation from the Paddington Political Labour League waited on the local council, and asked for the establishment of a municipal fruit and vegetable mart.

Alderman Lofts pointed out that in Melbourne there were municipal markets, and they had proved a boon to the ratepayers, and were financially successful.

Mrs. Hickman contended that at the present time it was impossible to get clean, fresh, and wholesome products at a reasonable price, and the existing state of affairs was not conducive to health. She also expressed the opinion that the councils should establish milk-distributing depots.

It was suggested by other speakers that the markets should be located at a site which would be convenient to the contiguous municipalities. The council decided to send the proposal to the works committee for report.

VICTORIA BARRACKS.

At the last meeting of the Paddington Council the Mayor (Alderman Pointing) submitted a minute in regard to the approaches to the Sydney Cricket Ground and the Agricultural Ground, respecting which a deputation had recently interviewed the State Premier. It was pointed out that the fact of the Moore Park Sports Ground being cut off from natural approaches—at any rate from the eastern suburbs—and that the training ground for horses was being used by the military authorities, practically as a horse paddock, constituted an undesirable state of affairs in the vicinity of a valuable residential area. He recommended that the council should approach the Federal authorities and urge them to agree to the removal of the Victoria Barracks from the present site. He also suggested that a copy of the minute be forwarded to the Waverley, Woollahra, and Randwick councils.

The minute was adopted.

SAFEGUARDING THE COUNCILS.

A letter was read at a meeting of the Annandale Council on Monday inviting representation at the next meeting of the Metropolitan Municipal Association. Alderman Wells and the Mayor were asked to be present on behalf of the council.

Alderman Wells thought the new organisation would do something for the municipal bodies, which had been neglected by the Local Government Association. It was evident that the Greater Sydney scheme would soon be given great prominence. Every municipality should be prepared for action. The new association, composed of metropolitan municipal representatives, would attend effectively to matters which the Local Government Association had failed to take cognisance of in its transactions.

SOUND AND WEATHERPROOF

HABERFIELD COTTAGES.

HABERFIELD COTTAGES.

The pleasant design and attractive exterior of a Haberfield Home is set off to the greatest advantage by the clever planning of the suburb. To produce a healthy and beautiful suburb was the aim never lost sight of from the earliest moment. The result is the existence of an estate where the modern science of suburb-planning is seen to perfection.

The Villas themselves are all of distinctive design, each differing from the others. The interiors are decorated and finished with close regard to the general scheme of the structure. The appointments throughout are modern and artistic. Each building is sound, weatherproof, well ventilated, and possessed of every necessary convenience.

Wide, tree-lined streets and large open spaces, together with the pleasant gardens surrounding the handsome homes, unite in purifying and cleansing the air. Fresh air is the first and soundest canon of good health.

Prices are from £780 upwards. A small deposit secures possession and occupation. The balance is payable, without strain, as rent.

Haberfield is reached by Abbotsford or Haberfield tram from G.P.O. in 30 minutes, or by "through" train to Summer Hill in 10 minutes.

Take tram in George-street, and alight at O'Connor-street.

Full particulars from any of our three offices.

PUBLIC COMPANIES.

HYDE PARK THEATRE AND INVESTMENT COMPANY, LTD.

It will interest the investing public to learn that the formation of this company is assured, and that TUESDAY, AUGUST 6 is the date fixed for the closing of the Subscribing Share List.

The List could be closed now, but the Acting Directorate are desirous of spreading the interest in the Company as widely as possible.

To this end it has been decided to extend the date for the receiving of applications as far as possible, and to allow of as low as FIVE SHARES being subscribed for.

Applications for the whole remainder of shares in large lots, though assured, are not preferred by the acting directors to a multiplicity of applications for small parcels of shares, which would mean a greatly extended interest in the Company's welfare.

The success thus assured shows that public opinion has recognised the supreme value of the situation of the Company's property, and that it is felt this is to be inevitably the great business centre of Sydney, with vast new thoroughfares and the finest commercial places to be found in the city.

The edifice fronts Hyde Park, at Liverpool and Oxford streets corner, and possesses an extensive frontage to Wentworth avenue, leading to the Railway Station—one of the finest highways in the city.

Applications for shares may be made, and all information obtained at the Company's Office,

London Bank-chambers, corner Market and Pitt streets.

LAW REPORT.

THE HIGH COURT.

(Before Sir Samuel Griffith, the Chief Justice, Mr. Justice Barton, and Mr. Justice Isaacs.)

BIG RESUMPTION CASE.

HARRIS V MINISTER FOR WORKS.

VALUE 13 YEARS AGO.

Argument was continued in the appeal lodged by Matilda Maud Harris against a judgment of the State Supreme Court setting aside a verdict for £51,639 in her favour, obtained against the State Minister for Works.

The suit had reference to the resumption, for the purposes of a technical college, of Ultimo House and grounds, in Harris-street, Ultimo, consisting of about 3 acres, in respect of which the plaintiff claimed £96,000, the Crown offering £33,550, and the jury awarding £51,639. The defendant then successfully appealed to the Supreme Court, obtaining an order for a new trial, Mr. Justice Pring and Mr. Justice Sly (Mr. Justice Ferguson dissenting) being of the opinion that his Honor the Chief Justice, Sir William Cullen, who presided at the trial, had improperly rejected evidence as to the value of the land 13 years before the date of resumption. This evidence was contained in an affidavit sworn for probate purposes at that time by the plaintiff as the administratrix in the estate of George Harris, her late husband. There was a further ground that the evidence rejected had a bearing on the value of the land in 1910, when it was resumed.

Mr. J. L. Campbell, K.C., and Dr. Waddell, instructed by Messrs. Bradley and Son, appeared for the appellant; and Mr. Wise, K.C., and Mr. Pickburn, instructed by the Crown Solicitor, Mr. J. V. Tillett, for the respondent.

The contention on behalf of the appellant was that the Supreme Court had erroneously upheld the following two grounds of the defendant's appeal against the verdict recorded:—"That his Honor the Chief Justice did not admit in evidence a stamp affidavit for probate sworn by the plaintiffs, dated March 16, 1897. That his Honor did not admit evidence as to how Ultimo House had increased in value from 1897 until May, 1910."

It was argued by Mr. Wise that evidence was admissible to show the jury that the property was valued for probate purposes 13 years ago at only £11,000, and they were entitled to know how it came to be increased nine times in the interval.

The Chief Justice: I suppose the answer would be that the whole character of the neighbourhood has changed. It might have multiplied a hundredfold.

Mr. Wise: The jury, of course, might take no notice of the valuation for probate purposes, knowing that everybody tries to cheat the Government.

The Chief Justice: Very likely.

Mr. Wise contended that the plaintiff could not take advantage of her own valuation of the property 13 years ago for probate purposes, and not be bound by it subsequently for resumption purposes. He contended that the stamp duty affidavit was relevant to the question of the present value of the property. The discretion of the State Chief Justice in rejecting the evidence of the value 13 years ago, Mr. Wise further submitted, had been wrongly exercised.

The Chief Justice: The question whether the evidence was relevant is a mixed question of law and fact depending upon the facts.

Mr. Wise: The difference between the value of £11,000 13 years ago and £96,000 to-day is grotesque.

The Chief Justice: It does not strike me that way at all.

Mr. Justice Isaacs: Grotesque in Sydney, Mr. Wise?

Mr. Wise: In Ultimo.

Mr. Wise went on to argue that his Honor at the trial could not judicially say that the value in 1897 could not throw any light on the value in 1910, that being a matter he should have allowed the jury to decide.

The Chief Justice: If I had been presiding I should have been inclined to have admitted the document, and told the jury to take no notice of it.

Their Honors reserved judgment.

DISTRICT COURT CASES.

OLD PRACTICE CHALLENGED.

A practice of awarding costs in District Court actions came up for review in an appeal lodged against a judgment of the State Supreme Court. John Pillar, carrier, of Tenterfield, had obtained special leave to appeal in a case in which costs had been given against him in an action for £30, in which a plaintiff recovered £2.

Mr. Loxton, K.C., Mr. Young, and Mr. Alroy M. Cohen, instructed by Messrs. H. V. and R. Harris, of Tenterfield, appeared for the appellant, John Pillar; and Mr. Lamb, K.C., and Mr. Mocatta, instructed by Mr. J. F. Thomas, of Tenterfield (by his agents, Messrs. Wilkinson, Osborne, and Rundle), for the respondent, John Arthur, of Tenterfield.

The appeal was against a judgment of the Supreme Court on November 13, 1911, ordering that a rule nisi granted by Mr. Justice Rich on October 9 last be discharged, with costs against the applicant. The ground of appeal was that the Supreme Court was in error in holding that under the District Courts Act Judge Docker had jurisdiction to make an order granting the plaintiff the costs of the action on the lower scale where the sum recovered in the action was under £10. The order of Mr. Justice Rich was that the plaintiff, Arthur, should show cause why a writ of prohibition should not be issued to restrain him from further proceeding upon an order made on September 13, by the District Court, held at Tenterfield before Judge Docker, that Arthur, the plaintiff, should recover from Pillar, the defendant, his costs on the lower scale in an action for trespass. The Supreme Court, consisting of Mr. Justice Pring, Mr. Justice Gordon, and Mr. Justice Ferguson, unanimously based their judgment on the decision in the case of ex parte Goebel, decided in 1883, where it was held that "the sum sued for," under section 74 of the District Courts Act of 1858, meant the amount claimed, and not the amount recovered, that case having been followed ever since. In the action the verdict recovered amounted to £2, the plaintiff having claimed £30 for trespass to lands.

Argument was not concluded when the Court rose.

DISPUTE AS TO COMMISSION.

Gelling and another v Griffin and another.

Mr. Garland, K.C., and Mr. A. Thomson, instructed by Messrs. W. R. and F. B. Jones, appeared for the defendants in support of the appeal; and Mr. James and Mr. Boyce, instructed by Messrs. Dibbs and Farrell, of Temora (by their agent, Mr. F. R. Cowper) for the plaintiffs in support of the verdict. The action which was tried in June last before the Chief Justice and a jury of four, was one brought by Christopher James Gelling and [illegible] Payne Gelling, of Temora, trading as Gelling and Sons, commission agents, against Francis Griffin and Joseph Valentine Roberts, to recover commission alleged to be due to them by defendants on the sale of a pastoral property named Ascot in the Condobolin district, to H. F. Lampe, for the sum of £12,480. At the close of the plaintiffs' case his Honor granted a nonsuit, on the ground that there was no evidence to go to the jury on the count for the commission claimed. He was of opinion that the contract only bound defendants to pay commission if the sale was effected by plaintiffs, and clearly no sale was effected by them. His Honor, however, allowed them to add a fresh count alleging that they were prevented from selling the property to Lampe by defendants wrongfully representing to him that plaintiffs were not authorised to sell the property. Plaintiffs also asserted that in consequence of what the defendants stated to Lampe, the latter refused to negotiate with them as to the purchase of "Ascot," and it was subsequently sold to him through the agency of one Walker. The case was allowed to go to the jury on the new count, and a verdict was returned for the plaintiffs in the sum of £250. Defendants now appealed on the ground, among others, that the verdict was against evidence, that his Honor should have nonsuited the plaintiffs, or directed a verdict for the defendants on the ground that there was no evidence to support the count which the plaintiffs were allowed to add; that his Honor should have held that there was no evidence to warrant an inference that Lampe was misled by any representation of the defendants into supposing that the plaintiffs had no authority to sell the property, and that his Honor should not have allowed the fresh count. There was a cross-appeal by the plaintiffs on the grounds that his Honor was wrong in refusing to allow the fresh count [illegible] the instruction to go to the jury; that the damages were too small; and that his Honor directed the jury that the plaintiffs, if entitled to damages at all, were only entitled to [illegible] their chance was of selling the land at [illegible]. Both appeals were heard together.

[illegible] argument,

Mr. Justice Pring, in delivering the judgment of the Court, said that the main ground of appeal was that the verdict was against evidence, and it was clear that if there was no evidence to support the finding, the Chief Justice was right in allowing an amendment of the plaintiffs' declaration by the filing of a fresh count. Therefore, the real question was whether the verdict was such as no reasonable [illegible] could have found. Speaking for himself, he was always very chary indeed in disturbing a verdict on the ground he had referred to, because a jury, being business men, were much better fitted to decide as to the proper inference to be drawn from certain evidence than Judges were. It might be that if he had been on the jury he would not have been in favour of the verdict arrived at, but that was not the question the Court had to determine. The question was whether the verdict was so unreasonable that it could not be allowed to stand, and the Court could not say on the evidence that it was such a finding. That being so, the defendants' appeal must be dismissed, with costs. The plaintiff's cross appeal would be dismissed without costs, in accordance with Mr. James' statement during argument.

DEFENDANTS' APPEAL.

Fairfax and others v New Zealand Shipping Company.

Mr. Rolin, K.C., and Mr. Pickburn, instructed by Messrs. Minter, Simpson, and Co., appeared for the defendants in support of the appeal; and Mr. Broomfield and Mr. H. M. Stephen, instructed by Messrs. Cape, Kent, and Gaden, for the plaintiffs to oppose. The action, which was a commercial cause tried before Mr. Justice Pring without a jury in June last, was brought by Sir James Reading Fairfax, Geoffrey Evan Fairfax, and James Oswald Fairfax, trading as "John Fairfax and Sons," against the New Zealand Shipping Company, Ltd., to recover compensation for injury done to a quantity of printing paper consigned to them and brought out from St. Johns (N.B.) by the defendant company's steamer Waiwera. The vessel arrived on Monday, February 26, and was berthed at the German Company's wharf, on the western side of Circular Quay. The plaintiffs' paper was being discharged on the following Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday, and they complained that a certain portion of it was damaged by rain, especially the paper which was landed on the roadway. For this damage they submitted defendants were liable under the bills of lading. At the trial it was contended by Mr. Rolin, on behalf of the defendants, that under the bills of lading all that it was necessary for them to do was to land the goods on a quay from the ship's tackles where the carter could get them. The carter was assumed to have dominion over the goods, and when they were landed it was equivalent to actual delivery to him. The consignee was bound to find out when the ship arrived and to be there, and on the facts it was immaterial whether the defendants put the paper on the wharf or on the roadway. By the bill of lading the goods were "to be delivered from steamer tackles," and the contract was at an end as soon as the goods were discharged on to the quay from the ship's tackles. What took place afterwards in removing them to the street was no part of delivery so far as defendants were concerned. The Canadian Act did not apply, but clause 13 of the bill of lading did, and by that the defendants contracted themselves out of any duty imposed upon them as warehousemen. The road was equally fit and convenient with the wharf for the carter to get the goods, and he could have obtained them at any time on Wednesday or Thursday.

Mr. Broomfield, on the other hand, contended that the roadway was an unauthorised place on which to land the goods, and the plaintiffs could refuse to take delivery at an unauthorised place. Here the delivery was on the roadway, and not on the quay, and the word "delivery" must give the consignee an opportunity of getting hold of the goods. As to paper on a wharf, there was a liability on the defendants by reason of the sorting and stacking charge. That rested on the question of proper dunnage.

His Honor gave a verdict for the plaintiffs for £217 18s 5d, in respect of damage to the paper deposited on the roadway, and the defendants now asked that the verdict should be set aside, and entered for them, or that a new trial should be ordered, on the following grounds:—(1) That his Honor should not have refused to admit evidence that according to the custom of the Port of Sydney delivery of goods on the roadway adjoining the wharf is delivery on the quay, within the true intent and meaning of the bills of lading; (2) that his Honor should not have rejected evidence that by custom of the port, goods landed from ships at the wharf may be placed on the portion of the roadway adjoining the shed; (3) that his Honor should not have held that discharge of the goods on to the roadway adjoining the quay constituted a breach of contract on the part of the defendant company; (4) that on the evidence his Honor should have held that the plaintiffs accepted delivery of the goods, and were responsible for loss arising after such delivery was accepted; (5) that his Honor should have held that the defendant company was exempted from liability as soon as the goods left the steamer's tackles; (6) that the verdict was against evidence, and the weight of evidence; (7) that his Honor should have held that the defendant company was not responsible for the damage done to the goods.

The case stands part heard.

EQUITY COURT.

(Before Mr. Justice Rich.)

APPOINTMENT OF A RABBIT INSPECTOR.

CLAIMS AGAINST A P.P. BOARD.

Mr. Harvey, instructed by Mr. F. S. Hegarty, of Coonamble, by his agents, Messrs. Mackenzie and Mackenzie, appeared for the plaintiff; and Mr. Maughan, instructed by Mr. L. B. Cadden, agent for Messrs. McGuinn and M'Guinn, of Dubbo, appeared for the defendant, in an action brought by John Munro, who was a rabbit inspector, appointed by the Governor under the provisions of section 14 of the Pastures Protection Act, against the Coonamble Pastures Protection Board, for dismissal.

It was claimed for the plaintiff that under the section of the Act quoted he was appointed on August 8, 1903, the appointment to take effect on August 12. Under the same section the Minister fixed the salary at £200 a year, and subsequently it was raised to £250. On July 12, 1911, the defendant board purported to dispense with his services, and paid the salary due to that date. He contended that he had a right to a continuation of his position as inspector, in view of the manner of his appointment; but the board claimed that it had the right to discharge him, and had declined to recognise him as an inspector from the date mentioned. The board had applied to the Minister to sanction its dismissal of him, but the Minister had declined to do so. He claimed that he was entitled to retain his office until dismissed therefrom, either by the Governor, or by the defendant board with the approval of the Governor or the Minister.

Plaintiff prayed, amongst other things, that it be declared he was entitled to retain the position; that the defendant be ordered to pay his salary from July 12, 1911, up to date, and that the board be restrained from interfering with him in the discharge of his duties under any claim of right of dismissal by the board on its own motion.

The defence was that on June 25, 1903, the board, under the provisions of section 15 of the P.P. Act, appointed the plaintiff to be a rabbit inspector, and at the same time fixed his salary at £200 a year. The Minister was notified that the board had carried a resolution for the appointment of a rabbit inspector for the district, and that the plaintiff be appointed to the position, subject to the Minister's approval, which was subsequently given, and later on the board increased the salary to £250, which increase the Minister approved. Defendants further contended that plaintiff had never been appointed an inspector within the meaning of section 14 of the Act; that the Governor had no power to appoint him as a rabbit inspector, and that Munro was appointed—and his salary fixed—by the board under the provisions of section 15 of the Act, and not by the Governor under section 14. The defendants further submitted that the plaintiff had never held the position of inspector within the meaning of section 14 of the Act; and that the position from which he had been dismissed by the board was that of rabbit inspector.

After argument his Honor reserved judgment.

DIVORCE COURT.

(Before Mr. Justice Gordon.)

SALMON v SALMON.

In this case, which stood part heard, Elizabeth Bower Salmon sought a divorce from her husband, Arthur Salmon (otherwise Harry Salmon) on the grounds of misconduct with one Ida Chester. Mr. Davidson, instructed by Mr. Clegg, appeared for the petitioner.

His Honor granted a decree nisi, returnable in six months. Respondent to pay costs of suit.

HODGKINSON v HODGKINSON.

The petitioner, Janet Wills Hodgkinson, sought a divorce from her husband, Thomas James Thorpe Hodgkinson, on the grounds of desertion. The parties were married in 1899. Mr. J. M. Sanders, instructed by Mr. Percy Sanders, appeared for the petitioner.

His Honor granted a decree nisi, returnable in six months. Respondent to pay costs.

LOONEY v LOONEY.

Mr. Harper, instructed by Messrs. Sly and Russell, appeared for the petitioner, Daniel Albert Looney, who sought a divorce from his wife on the grounds of her misconduct with one Bryant. The petitioner, a shearer, said he was married in October, 1900, at Glen Innes, and there were three children of the marriage. Towards the end of 1909 when they were living at Tamworth, his suspicions were aroused, and he returned unexpectedly from Newcastle, where he had been spending a holiday, to find that his wife had left home. He afterwards saw her at Bryant's house.

At the conclusion of the evidence his Honor said that he was not satisfied, because the issue was that misconduct had occurred in 1910, whereas the evidence which had been brought referred chiefly to 1911. He therefore allowed the matter to stand over.

O'BRIEN v O'BRIEN.

The petitioner, Cornelius Joseph O'Brien, sought a divorce from his wife on the ground that she had misconducted herself with a man named Gibson. Mr. Boyce, instructed by Mr. E. R. Abigail, appeared for petitioner.

Evidence was that the parties were married in 1896. The eldest child was 14, and there was another 12 years of age. Some time after the marriage petitioner went to South Africa for business reasons. He sent his wife money regularly. Later on she joined him there, at his request. But after nine days she decided to return to Australia, saying that the climate did not agree with her. This was in 1904. The same year he went to India, where, after a while, she again joined him, but after nine days she left once more for Australia for the same reason. Before she left him this time there was something in the nature of a quarrel, and a deed was entered into. On his return to Sydney he communicated with his solicitors, and a visit was paid to a house in Moncur-street, where he saw his wife. He heard her, in answer to a question as to whether she was Mrs. Gibson, say "Yes." He then confronted her, and she told him she had been living with Gibson for five or six years.

His Honor granted a decree nisi, returnable in six months.

INDUSTRIAL COURT.

(Before Judge Scholes.)

IRON-SHIPBUILDING.

An application by the United Society of Boilermakers' and Iron-shipbuilders for the constitution of a special board, came before his Honor Judge Scholes in the Industrial Court yesterday.

Mr. Sinclair appeared for the United Society of Boilermakers.

Mention was made for the necessity for drawing a line of demarcation between the boilermakers and engineers employed in the iron-shipbuilding trade.

A little while ago trouble occurred in these trades in connection with this same matter, and action was taken by the Attorney-General in the direction of arranging a conference.

Mr. Sinclair asked for the constitution of a special board to deal with the whole matter, and inquire into the subject of interlocking. Apart from the Government department, he said, there was only one firm which did interlocking work.

His Honor adjourned the case till Friday to enable Mr. Sinclair to make an affidavit regarding interlocking.

RECOVERY OF SUBSCRIPTIONS.

An appeal from the decision of the industrial magistrate, Mr. Addison, was heard by his Honor, Judge Scholes, yesterday. The appeal was from Mr. Addison's decision in a case Crombie v Bell, a suit for the recovery of subscriptions amounting to £2 0s 4d, due to the Journeyman Tailors' Union.

Mr. Croft appeared to support the appeal.

The case for the defendant before the lower Court was that the subscription had accrued prior to the framing of the Industrial Arbitration Act of 1912. And it was submitted that there was nothing in the Act to make its provisions retrospective.

His Honor reserved his judgment.

POLICE COURTS.

STOLEN CAMERAS.

A young man named Reginald Clement Ward appeared before Mr. Smithers, S.M., at the Water Police Court yesterday, charged with stealing three cameras, valued at £22 10s, belonging to Kodak (Australasia), Ltd., between July 24 and 29.

Evidence showed that between these dates the accused was employed by the firm as lift attendant. He was found in the chemical-room, apparently removing the wrappers from cameras, and suspicions were aroused. When questioned by Detective O'Reilly he admitted that he had sold one camera to a pawnbroker.

Accused was committed for trial at the next Quarter Sessions. Bail was allowed.

MORE CADETS FINED.

At the Redfern Police Court yesterday, before Mr. Love, a senior cadet named Henry Cecil Whitfield, was charged with being guilty of conduct to the prejudice of good order and military discipline. Defendant, when spoken to in the ranks, used an insulting remark to the colour-sergeant, who reported the matter to the officer. Defendant pleaded guilty and was fined £1 and 6s costs.

Another cadet, named Andrew Hubert Garden was also charged with a similar offence. In his case evidence was given that the colour-sergeant heard a disturbance at the back of the ranks, and he told defendant that if he was not more careful his name would be taken. Defendant replied, "Step out of the ranks and I'll fight you now, and fill your eyes for you." Defendant, who pleaded not guilty, but called no witnesses, was, upon giving a promise to behave better in future, fined 10s and 6s costs, in default imprisonment for 48 hours.

At the same court six more cadets were fined £5 each and costs for not attending the statutory number of drills. Several others who were but a few hours short of the required service were ordered to pay the costs of the Court, and at the same time to be handed over to the authorities to complete the necessary service.

SEVENTY AT THE GLEBE COURT.

At the Glebe Police Court yesterday, before Mr. King, S.M., 70 cadets appeared to answer the charge of failing to render the military service required of them under the Compulsory Training Act. About 60 of the party were each fined £5 and costs 6s, in default imprisonment for one month, and at the same time they were ordered to complete the required service. A few others, however, escaped the fine, they being but a few hours short of the required service. They were ordered to be handed over to the officer to complete their training and to pay the costs of the summons. In one case a doctor gave evidence that a youth was not mentally fit to render the necessary service, and the magistrate accordingly dismissed the information.

MANUFACTURER FINED.

At the Glebe Police Court yesterday, before Mr. King, S.M., Inspector Kench, of the Board of Health, proceeded against James E. Wilcox, trading as "Nicholls' Dandelion Ale Company, of Camperdown, for having sold an article of food, to wit, a drink falsely described as "Kola." The inspector stated that the sample did not contain any of the extract of the kola nut; but, at the same time, the drink was not injurious to health. The defendant was in a large way of business, and sold these soft drinks wholesale. At the time of his visit he found a large quantity of this so-called kola on the premises. Defendant pleaded guilty and was fined £2 and costs.

NEWCASTLE HOSPITAL.

NEW BUILDING PROPOSAL.

The Public Works Committee, under Mr. John Storey, met on Monday to discuss the advisability of erecting a general hospital at Newcastle. Mr. W. J. Hanna, Under-Secretary of the Public Works Department, was the principal witness.

The estimated cost, said Mr. Hanna, would amount to £46,558, the site to be that now occupied by the Newcastle Hospital for the Insane. The scheme submitted provided for an entirely new building on the southern end of the site, in front of the present building, and occupying the entire plateau. It would be a four-story building with eight wards of 22 beds each, accommodating 176 patients and 30 nurses. A further sum of about £30,000 would be necessary for alterations and modifications of the present building. The advantages of the scheme would be that the present hospital for insane would be removed, and a new, centrally-situated, and up-to-date hospital erected in its place. On the other hand, it had been pointed out that the site was somewhat overshelterd and hot, while it was possible that the land might "creep" as in the case of the new cathedral.

An alternative scheme provided for a complete hospital on the present site, by erecting two hospital wards and administrative block, containing 10 wards and 140 beds. The present-building might afterwards be demolished and two smaller wards erected providing 280 beds. The estimated cost for this alternative scheme would be £50,870. In this case the site would be an excellent one, though somewhat circumscribed, necessitating the addition of an extra story. The present hospital buildings were far from being in accordance with present conditions, and no alterations would be effective.

A report was read before the committee from Dr. Eric Sinclair, Inspector-General of the Insane, in which he pointed out that opinion at Newcastle was not unanimous for the removal of the Hospital for the Insane, and the establishment of the general hospital on its site.

Mr. E. L. Drew, assistant-architect to the Public Works Department, said that he had visited the present site. In his opinion everything that could possibly be wrong was wrong with the existing hospital.

NO COMBINES.

PRESENTATION TO MR. J. D. WILLIAMS.

A number of suburban picture show proprietors assembled at the Crystal Palace yesterday to show their appreciation of Mr. J. D. Williams, and the advantages which they had derived from the International Pictures Co. Mr. Williams was presented with an illuminated address, similar presentations being made to Mr. W. H. Bell, general manager, and to Mr. G. Clements, assistant manager of the Film Exchange. Among those present were Messrs. J. D. Williams, W. H. Bell, G. Clements, M'Kinley (Marrickville), Mainsbridge (Parramatta), Teesdale, Clark, Sutton (Drummoyne), Earle (Lewisham), Green (Campsie), Waddington, and Lawler (Newtown). The chair was taken by Mr. Earle.

Mr. Williams, in reply, declared that it was absolutely necessary to any picture business, if it were to be successful, to get its own films. Never, under any circumstances, would he join a combine—(hear, hear)—nor have anything to do with any firm unless his own firm controlled at least 50 per cent. of the business.

EMPLOYMENT AGENCY.

AN ACCUSED HEAVILY FINED.

At the Central Police Court, before Mr. Wilkinson, D.S.M., Alfred Robert Miles, 26, was charged with having dispersed a printed paper that did not bear the name of the printer. It was alleged further that the accused falsely pretended to Maud Elizabeth Simmonds that he was able to obtain for her a position as stewardess if she paid him the sum of 2s.

The pamphlet in question was headed "Healthy Occupations Afloat," pointing out "that there was a demand for all hands in all departments, offering excellent opportunities to those wishing to start sea life without experience." It was also stated that in addition to the wages paid by the company, that there was a large sum collected by stewards as tips. The wages were said to be: Stewardesses £5 per month; junior officers, engineers, and pursers, £8 to £10 per month; cadets £1 10s; cooks, bakers, butchers, etc., at to £14 per month, and so on.

Mr. J. W. Abigail, who appeared for the accused, took the point that the dispersing related to the printing and that it should be shown the offence was one of printing and dispersing, not merely of dispersing. This was over-ruled by the Bench.

Mr. Abigail then submitted that the accused had dispersed articles in which he dealt, such articles being "the procuring of positions for people in the business of life." This was also over-ruled.

The evidence was to the effect that the accused had inserted advertisements in the papers and forwarded copies of these circulars to applicants. The circulars so sent contained a list of shipping companies and explained how an applicant for a position should apply. The circular stated: "We do not guarantee situations; we assist our clients by placing before them the only means of procuring a berth, and who, by following our instructions closely, should find no difficulty in so doing."

Mr. Abigail, after the points taken were over-ruled, gave notice of appeal, and asked the magistrate to state a case.

Elizabeth Simmons said she saw the accused after she had forwarded the postal note for 2s. Accused said she would have to go to the office of the shipping company and get the situation herself. She asked him then what was the 2s for. After further discussion he offered her back the 2s. She told him to keep it, and fulfil his promise to get her a situation as was stated on the pamphlet. He replied that he could not do anything for her. Later on she handed the 2s to the police.

Harold E. Mitchell, of Leichhardt, said he received a printed circular after an advertisement of his had appeared, and on the application form he wrote his name, and returned it to Miles, enclosing a postal note for a shilling.

Julia Ballinghoff, a waiter, of Forest Lodge, gave similar evidence.

The accused, Albert Robert Miles, said he had been a steward. He got the idea from a London firm to establish this line of business. He did not know that he was committing any offence under the printing law by issuing the circulars without an imprint. Altogether he collected 11s from correspondents who replied. The expenses incurred were a great deal more. He could not name anyone who had gained a situation through these means. He did not know that the Merchants Shipping Act prohibited this kind of business.

The magistrate said he would deal with one document only, and imposed a fine of £17, and £3 costs, or three months.

The police said that they had a large bundle of unopened letters, and the Bench agreed that these should be opened and any money returned to the senders.

"TWO-UP" RAID.

DARLINGHURST PREMISES.

24 MEN FINED.

A raid was made on Monday night by the police on premises at No. 3 Berwick-lane, Darlinghurst, where it was supposed that "two up" was indulged in, and, as a result, 24 men were arrested. Sub-Inspector Branston, with eight men, who entered the house, found that the windows were covered over with brown paper. Four oil lamps shed a flickering light over the scene and revealed a floor covered in the regulation fashion, with canvas. A "kip" was also picked up. The entry was made by the police most effectively and apparently not one of the inmates of the room got away.

The whole 24 were brought before Mr. Smithers, S.M., at the Water Police Court yesterday, and charged with being in a common gaming house. Their names were given as Michael Mockler, 53; Harry Jackson, 27; James Murray, 26; Henry Paul, 28; James Lowe, 38; John Bond, 38; Frank Hellebrand, 25; Henry J. Muller, 31; Frank Hare, 25; George Williams, 51; Oswald Chapman, 32; James Malone, 31; Frederick Sedgwick, 29; William Hill, 25; Henry Mooney, 30; James Jessup, 22; John Blackwood, 26; William Pawley, 27; Arthur Brook, 28; Arthur Butler, 28; William Thompson, 28; Herbert Haslen, 22; James Wilson, 30; and William Plumber, 32.

They all pleaded guilty, and fines of £5, in default imprisonment for two months, were imposed in each case. Fourteen days were allowed for payment.

POISONED.

A large number of lamentable deaths occur annually from poison taken either deliberately or accidentally. There are very many kinds of poisons, and some of the most inimical are constantly being manufactured within our bodies. It is as necessary to life that the tissues of the body should waste away as it is that they should be continuously renewed by an adequate supply of food, air, and water. The waste matter formed within us must be removed from the body as fast as it is formed, or we must suffer from ill-health—or self-poisoning—caused by its retention in the system. Most of the common ills from which we suffer, such as rheumatism, gout, neuralgia, lumbago, backache, sciatica, blood disorders, anaemia, indigestion, biliousness, jaundice, sick-headache, general debility, gravel, stone and bladder troubles, are due to the retention of uric and biliary waste poisons, which would be removed, through the natural channels, if the kidneys and liver were acting efficiently. It is, therefore, requisite, if we suffer from any of the ailments mentioned, that the kidneys and liver be restored to health and activity. The reason that Warner's Safe Cure has been so successfully employed in the cure of all these ailments is that the medicine acts specifically upon the kidneys and liver, exercising a restorative and stimulating influence upon those vital organs, thus ensuring the expulsion from the body of the uric and biliary poisons, the presence of which is the cause of the suffering. The action of Warner's Safe Cure is described in detail in a treatise which will be sent, post free, to anyone on application to H. H. Warner and Co., Limited, Australasian Branch, Melbourne. Warner's Safe Cure is sold by chemists and storekeepers everywhere, both in the original 5s bottles and in the cheaper (2s 6d) "Concentrated," non-alcoholic form, each containing the same number of doses.—Advt.

RECKLESS FINANCE.

CENSURE MOTION IN THE ASSEMBLY.

"GOVERNMENT'S HOUSE OF CARDS."

"That your advisers do not possess the confidence of this House."

The anticipated motion of want of confidence was moved in these simple terms in the Legislative Assembly by the leader of the Opposition (Mr. Wade) yesterday, and after a speech lasting about two hours the Premier (Mr. McGowen) made his reply. The principal subject taken was finance, which was dealt with by Mr. Wade on the point that the Government had unduly expanded their figures in forecasting the year's revenue and expenditure; had unduly imposed taxation; and had indulged in "an orgy of reckless expenditure."

The galleries were crowded in the evening. The debate, according to a remark let drop by the Premier, will last till Tuesday.

THE DEBATE.

"FRENZIED FINANCE."

The Leader of the Opposition, who was received with cheers by his party, intimated at the outset that he would apply himself to the larger and broader features of the Government programme, and leave the public to form their opinions as to the competency of the administration in respect to the minor details which crowded the thoroughfare in every passage of the Governor's Speech.

Foremost he placed finance. If the country was not ruled by the ordinary and prudent methods of finance, it was only a question of time when the usual penalty of frenzied finance would have to be paid, resulting in further taxation and general chaos. His appeal and condemnation were thrown on deaf ears.

"In the light of experience and proved effect we're enabled to show that their forecast was entirely wrong, and ours absolutely correct," he affirmed.

"The expectations we held out for increased revenue have been more than fulfilled.

"The Government have levied heavy taxation, and now can only show the barest of small surpluses.

"In the alternative they could have had a prosperous year, with a handsome surplus approaching £400,000, without one single penny of taxation.

"If I can establish these facts now, as proved by the figures of the Treasury at the end of the financial year, I have a fair ground for saying that the Government are not a body who can present themselves to the electors as being reliable to carry out the finances of New South Wales." (Opposition cheers.)

The Premier had taken to himself credit that employment had not fallen off, and that matters were extremely prosperous all round. "I'm glad to say that the country isn't ruined yet," he said, to the accompaniment of ironical cheers from the Ministerial benches. "I'm glad to say that our expenditure and bounding revenue have been more than sufficient to counteract reckless finance."

The outlook, however, was serious, he affirmed, and if they continued on the lines of the unrestrained prodigality that had disgraced New South Wales for the last twelve months they would have, before the present Parliament came to an end, a day of reckoning.

"The Government forecast of revenue last year was unduly and unfairly depressed. Their estimates of expenditure were unduly expanded. The figures of revenue and expenditure put forward by this party, both in respect to revenue and expenditure were very near the actual fact."

He then proceeded to give the figures of the revenue and expenditure estimated by the Premier at the beginning of the year. The actual forecast of revenue put forward by Mr. M'Gowen was as follows:—

Estimated revenue, 1911-12, apart from increased income tax	£14,871,085
Estimated expenditure, 1911-12	15,822,844
Estimated shortage, say	1,000,000

The Premier had, therefore, said that to make up the shortage it was imperative to impose further taxation to the tune of £975,000. If that revenue was realised there would have been a small surplus of £22,000 at the end of the year.

"I said this was an entirely untrue forecast. I said the revenue had been unduly expanded, and the expenditure was far more than was required for the year's performances. They made their revenue expectations £14,871,185, exclusive of any further increase from income tax and stamp duties.

"On the four months' figures then before us there was a regular and consistent growth of the various sources of revenue, on which I felt justified on building up an average on that basis for the whole of the year."

He then gave his (Mr. Wade's) forecast at the time:—

Government estimate	£14,871,085
Estimated increase	572,000
	£15,443,085
Stamp duty from late Walter Hall's estate	215,000

THE ACTUAL RESULT.

"Now what has happened?

"We have gone through twelve months, each succeeding month bearing out more improvements on its predecessor, and we find so far from my figures being overdrawn the actual revenue for the year is even in excess of the forecast made in November last.

"The actual revenue from all sources, excluding further income tax, and excluding the remains of Mr. Wade's surplus, was £15,761,000.

"The increase on the figures I forecasted is something like £110,000.

"I say there was a want of forethought, care, and prudence, of an unfair character to New South Wales, in estimating the revenue so much below the actual revenue."

He referred to the departures brought forward by the Government. One was to transfer the whole of the surplus from services, such as railways, tramways, Harbour Trust, and Water and Sewerage, to the Public Works fund—£440,965. It was also proposed to transfer from land sales revenue to the Closer Settlement fund £200,000. These two items totalled £640,000. He (Mr. Wade) had advised putting £220,000 to the Public Works fund, and nothing from revenue to the Closer Settlement fund, thus reducing the transfer to £420,000. The expenditure would, therefore, equal £15,822,000, and deducting the £420,000, £15,402,000 would be left. His (Mr. Wade's) estimate of revenue was £15,658,000, which, against the estimated expenditure, left a surplus of about £250,000.

The actual revenue, including income tax and the balance of the Wade surplus, was £15,761,000. The surplus should, therefore, have been as follows:—

Revenue	£15,761,000
Less net expenditure	15,402,000
Surplus	£359,000

The next proposal was the establishment of a system of renewals and sinking fund, appropriating from the ordinary revenue a large amount of money to be used more or less for bookkeeping purposes, which had the effect of reducing the revenue available for ordinary government purposes. The revenue and expenditure could have been reduced with perfect safety to the public services in paying over half the amount they proposed from business undertakings. It would have been quite sufficient to finance the Public Works fund for the year.

ORGIE OF RECKLESS FINANCE.

"I say the Government stands guilty of ineptitude, want of common foresight, and want of regard to the public interests. They have imposed taxation, not minding very much how it is brought about. Like all irresponsible people, once they have got the money it burns a hole in their pockets. They lose all self-control, and the result has been a nine months' orgy of financial recklessness, which was never equalled before in this State, and, need I hardly say, I hope will never be equalled again. (Opposition cheers.)

"In spite of increased revenue from ordinary sources, and increased taxation, the Government had spent something like £2,000,000 of a surplus left by the Wade Government. It was absolutely unavoidable that there must be heavy retrenchment or correspondingly increased taxation. The Government began the year with part of the Wade surplus, but that would be entirely gone next year. They drew from the Commonwealth two years' payment for transferred properties, £110,000, which would not be received next year. A windfall was £215,000 from the Hall estate. He estimated there would be a revenue shortage of £306,000 for the coming year. Payments to the works fund must be increased if the Government were going to provide for the needs of the State.

"The country had now the experience which many supporters of the Labour party had not at last election—they were able to contrast the party's performances with its promises. (Opposition cheers.) The Liberal party's programme was progress, prudent finance, a surplus every year they held office, and a handsome surplus for those who came after them. (Cheers.) We reduced the burden of taxation wherever possible when it pressed on the weaker classes. (Cheers.)

"The Government had more bounteous seasons than we ever enjoyed. But there are no more surpluses, and they are living by the skin of their teeth, and the certain prospect of drastic taxation. (Opposition cheers.) Before Federation the taxation of New South Wales was £2 7s 6d per head. To-day it is, as nearly as possible, £5, with a certainty of going higher still.

THE LOAN QUESTION.

"The Government was going to raise £6,000,000 during the next year. They had to redeem a loan in May next for £2,000,000. There were a number of other loans redeemable in the course of the current year, totalling in all nearly £10,000,000. He understood the 4 per cent. loan maturing this year was to be redeemed. Altogether about ten and a half millions of money had to be found if the present policy were carried out.

"The prospect of raising the money locally is poor indeed. During the last few months the Government was compelled to raise their rate of interest to attract money, and that scheme failed to achieve expectations. They will be compelled to go to the money markets across the seas, and if there is one class of people more resentful than another of careless finance it is those people whom we rely on to supply us with money to develop the country. (Opposition cheers.)

SHOULD DROUGHT COME.

"We want but adverse seasons as a check to progress, and this beautiful pack of cards will fall about their ears. The Government has failed in the most vital of governmental duties—the regulation of the State's finances on lines that are stable, and which bring prosperity.

The Government had laboured under the mistaken idea that it could impose taxation on one section of the community, who were not their followers, without it reacting on those who supported them. There was never a greater mistake, and soon they would realise it. Taxation was always passed on, and the man who felt it most bitterly was he who had a small income, and no margin to work upon.

TAXATION AND DEAR LIVING.

After the dinner adjournment, Mr. Wade, amid Liberal cheers, traced the connection between the increased taxation during the last two years and the high cost of living and house rents, which drew forth from the Ministerial benches the interjection "Bunkum," which the leader of the Opposition described as an unsatisfactory answer to the outcry of the people who were suffering from these household burdens. The only remedy that the Government had been able to think of was to appoint a Royal Commission. "What good was that," he asked, and observed that "all these so-called remedies are absolutely futile."

"The two causes," he declared, amid further expressions of the approval of his side of the House, "of this increased cost of living here are, first, imposing taxation when it is not required, and, secondly, curtailing the supply of labour in the open market."

"Let the Government increase the avenues for labour and supply labour where it is wanted, and the result will be that they will overtake the demand for house accommodation. Far from there being any foundation for the selfish fear that every tradesman brought out means starving the existing unionists, experience shows that the country can absorb thousands more than are arriving." He twitted the Government with being afraid, although they realised this scarcity of labour, to encourage immigration freely, lest they incurred the enmity of one section alone, on whose votes they depended at election times." (Liberal cheers.)

Speaking of immigration, Mr. Wade sounded a warning against introducing incompetent workmen, the trouble to-day being that many arriving were not up to the requisite standard. He recalled that the last annual report of the Department of Labour and Industry showed that, owing to the scarcity of adult labour, the factory employers were compelled to work their juveniles overtime, in order to carry out the urgent work of their business.

LAND NATIONALISATION.

The next count in the Opposition leader's indictment was "the failure of the Government's land policy." He said that lurid pictures had been drawn of the stagnation of land settlement under the Liberal regime, and Labour candidates had promised to remedy that state of things and had stated that they had discovered 29,000,000 acres of land. The land they had "discovered" really consisted of remnants of previous land sales which the public would not have. Since the Government had come into office not a single acre of private land had been resumed, because it involved giving what was dear to the heart of the people, but a nightmare to the Government—the freehold title. (Opposition cheering.) The policy of the Government announced within the last few weeks amounts to confiscation, the proposal being to increase the land tax year by year until, in the sixth year, it would amount to one shilling in the £.

"Time, too," interjected Mr. Thrower.

Mr. Wade characterised the land policy of the Government as the first step towards land nationalisation—(Opposition cheers)—leading the unsuspecting public along the road to confiscation, until they finally applied, "in all its drastic unfairness, the principle of land nationalisation, which is the confiscation of the fair value of the land. (Renewed Opposition cheering.) Land nationalisation is the objective of the Government."

The Premier: Do you really believe that? (Ministerial laughter.)

Mr. Wade: I am prepared to say that I will apologise in the most abject manner when I am proved to be wrong on the point if the Ministry will tell the public here to-night on the floor of the House, what they have never done yet, what land nationalisation really means. (Opposition cheers and laughter.)

PUBLIC WORKS ACT IGNORED.

The Opposition leader then charged the Government with giving the go-by to the provisions of the Public Works Act, requiring works of a value of £20,000 and over to be referred to the Works Committee for inquiry. He said that Mr. Griffith had signally flouted both the ruling of Mr. Cann, when Speaker of the House, and the Constitution of the State by establishing the State brickworks without the statutory preliminary inquiry, and now they found that something similar had been done in the case of State joinery works for the Railway Department. Although the cost of these was £50,000, the matter had not first of all been referred to the House or the Works Committee, notwithstanding that Ministers must have known that the figure exceeded £20,000. The Government in the most barefaced and flagrant manner came forward and asked for a vote of money, without having the common candour to tell the House what the real contract price was. (Loud Opposition cheering.) Only £18,000 for the purpose was shown in the Supply Bill, the object being to thus escape the provisions of the Public Works Act by not disclosing the real amount, the fact being that the total cost of the venture as a going concern was £51,000. The bounden duty of Mr. Griffith was to have acquainted the House with the real facts, it being only by chance that the total cost had come out in a statement made by Mr. Flowers, the Government representative in the Upper House, and it was no thanks to Mr. Griffith that the House was now in possession of the actual cost. If they were to have this disregard of the laws of procedure of Parliament, and of the Constitution, let the Government say so openly, and members of the House would know where they were, but such conduct as had occurred first in connection with the State brickworks and latterly with the joinery works was neither straightforward nor in accordance with the law.

Referring to the Parliamentary Privileges Bill, Mr. Wade said: "The House will have a responsibility very clear and very great when they come to deal with this bill. I hope the Government will stand by it, and carry it through."

Mr. Fitzpatrick: Then we will see some circus.

"I have no fear of the consequences," said Mr. Wade, "and it will not deter me from doing my duty in the least degree. If I see a wrong to be opposed or an abuse to be corrected I will do it, whether the bill is law or not." (Cheers.)

Mr. Wade wound up a speech which lasted about two hours by moving the amendment of the Address in Reply by the addition of the following words:—

"That your advisers do not possess the confidence of this country."

The Opposition cheered. A Government member said: "That's very tame."

MR. McGOWEN'S REPLY.

The Premier opened by congratulating Mr. Wade on his restoration to good health and the temper of his speech.

"I will deal with some of his exaggerated statements, in justice to the people of this State, and in justice to those people who have advanced us large sums of money that have to be redeemed in the course of four or five years. He said we were taxed in this State to the tune of £5 per head. The monthly statistical bulletin shows the State population at 1,700,000, and the taxation at £1,902,000, or about 22s 6d per head." (Government cheers.)

Mr. Wade: Include Customs taxation.

Time after time, continued the Premier, Mr. Wade had said the Government inflated its expenditure and suppressed its income figures to justify taxation. The Government which was in office in 1906-7 over-estimated its expenditure by £1,296,800, and in 1907-8 by £1,194,000, whereas the present Government was only out £336,326 this year, and in 1909-10 they were out £917,000. The previous Governments were four or five times more out in their calculations than were the present Government. (Cheers.)

"Mr. Wade has said we are spendthrift Ministers, and that people are shrinking with horror at the country's prospects. I believe he has said it so often he honestly believes it. (Laughter.) But he knows that in 1910-11 we received £1,314,766 less from the Commonwealth than he did the previous year, and £1,175,300 less in the last financial year than in the last year of the Wade Administration. And we had 50,000 more people to govern. This more than accounted for the £389,706 left by the Liberal party on June 30, 1910. Had the Commonwealth returns been the same as in past years no fresh taxation would have been necessary, and we would have done all we have done and had a surplus of nearly £2,000,000. (Government cheers.)

THE CHARGE OF EXTRAVAGANCE.

"He accuses us of extravagance. Certainly we plead guilty of trying to improve the condition of State employees, and to treat them a little more humanely and equitably than his Government did. But I ask him to say what items he designates as extravagant."

Mr. Thrower: The Bursaries Bill is what they are going to fight us on.

Mr. Wood: The Bursaries Bill may remove you, be careful.

The Premier said that last year the Government's revenue received from all sources, including new taxation, was only £113,000 more than Mr. Wade's Government received in its last year of office. They had accused the Government in one breath of not spending more money on duplication and in the next they accused it of extravagance. The present Government spent on closer settlement one and a quarter millions, or an average of £600,000 a year. The Wade Government only averaged £300,000 a year. Was that the extravagance complained of?

"HOLLOW SHAMS."

The Premier declared that he was answering the financial charges made, not so much on behalf of the Government as for the credit of the country. "We have," he added, to the accompaniment of Ministerial cheers, "exploded these charges, and shown the hollow shams these gentlemen are for traducing the administration of my colleagues during the whole of the last six months." In doing this the Opposition had played the same game as the Liberal party led by Mr. Joseph Carruthers, in attacking the late Mr. O'Sullivan's administration, charging him with extravagance.

Mr. Fitzpatrick interjected that there would be "the same result."

The Premier said the party now charging the Government with reckless expenditure were asking for millions to be spent on establishing underground connection between Sydney and North Sydney. "We believe," he went on, "in taxpayers paying for the services they receive, and we also believe in only taxing the people sufficiently to carry on the cost of government without building up surpluses. We believe we have a right to build railways into the interior, and we also believe that the adjoining land should be used to its fullest capacity."

A question by Mr. Wood: "How do you propose to make them use the land?" was put aside by Mr. M'Gowen for a more convenient time.

There was general interest manifested on all sides of the House as Mr. M'Gowen proceeded to deal with the question of increased cost of living. This was, he said, now general all over the world.

THE BRICKWORKS AND JOINERY.

The Government with the brickworks had given the combine an object-lesson. As to Mr. Wade's charge about the joinery works being gone on with in defiance of the Public Works Committee, he could tell of a Liberal Minister who, finding that he was putting up a building that would cost more than the Works Committee would allow, had spent £19,000 every year till he got it finished. "How about the railway to Chatswood? How about the Bexley to Arncliffe railway?" he asked. "These questions were not referred to the Works Committee."

In regard to the joinery works, the Premier said a leading accountant had shown that on the bargain the Minister had made a profit of 15 per cent. "Here's the position: The Railway Commissioners had to resume the property—I believe, for the Darling Harbour extension. The Minister for Works took it over from them. If you don't like to believe it—well, go and look for proof."

The House laughed at this unparliamentary form of argument.

Mr. M'Gowen touched gently on the immigration question, saying that the Director of the Immigration Bureau and another accredited man had been sent away to see that the labour coming out under the Government auspices would not displace labour here. The policy of the party opposite was being carried out.

"The Opposition leader termed the policy of the Minister for Lands a policy of confiscation. I think the people believe we have the courage to do things the other party was too timid to touch. We haven't been afraid. It's argued that the latest proposal with regard to that super-tax is a confiscation policy. Let me look at the bill Mr. Wade's Minister for Lands brought in."

"Yes, and which his party killed. Don't make any mistake," Mr. Fitzpatrick told the Premier while he was waiting for a document to be brought to him.

"Here it is," continued the Premier. "Mr. Moore's Closer Settlement Bill tied these lands up for five years. To read it its more like confiscation that anything we're doing. Our Minister gives an exemption of £5000 value, as a living area.

LIBERALS AND THE FARMER.

"The Opposition have been telling a number of fairy stories, some of them as utterly at variance with truth as to designate our policy a land nationalisation policy. The member of the Opposition who told the small farmers that the Government were going to take their land from them told a falsehood."

Mr. Wade: "What does land nationalisation mean?"

The question was dodged. "I'm only telling the hon. member that the story he has told the public is untrue," the Premier proceeded. "I think we can offer evidence that not only are we doing the very best with regard to our administration of the lands of the country, but as to these large business undertakings there is not a single item that they would have the temerity to say they would stop expenditure on or remove if they came back to office.

"We've got enough to do with the unoccupied lands and the land out of use," he declared.

Ministerialists regarded this as a hit, and cheered lustily.

"We've plenty of land to which we can build railways that will do our time and for the next 10 years," he went on, encouraged by the cheering.

Pointing a finger of scorn at the opposite benches, he shouted "You call yourselves Liberals! If you didn't call yourselves the Liberal party the people wouldn't believe you. Why you've got every hidebound Conservative in New South Wales behind you."

One side cheered exultantly, the other laughed derisively. The Speaker called the Premier back to his subject.

Mr. McGowen re-affirmed the party's faith in leasehold tenure, and he expressed the opinion that all the Murrumbidgee area blocks would be occupied. He finished with a short peroration, and again expressed his pleasure at the mild form of the motion of censure.

The debate was continued by Mr. M'Farlane, and Mr. Thrower. The House was still sitting when this edition went to press.

GREATER SYDNEY BILL.

Mr. Garland presented a petition from the Mayor and aldermen of the Municipality of Hunter's Hill, praying that the area of the municipality be excluded from any provision in the Greater Sydney Bill.

METROPOLITAN TRAFFIC, ETC.

The Vice-President of the Executive Council obtained leave to introduce a bill for the regulation of pedestrian traffic upon footpaths, to amend the Metropolitan Traffic Act, 1900, and the Sydney Abattoir and Nuisance Prevention Act, 1902, and to repeal the Sydney Stock-driving Act of 1906. The bill was brought in and read the first time.

AUSTRALIAN GASLIGHT COMPANY'S BILL.

On the motion of Mr. O'Conor this bill was passed through all the remaining stages through which it had passed during the previous session, and forwarded to the Assembly.

The House at 4.38 p.m. adjourned until Wednesday, August 14.

ROBERT BROWNING.

LECTURE BY PROFESSOR MACCALLUM.

The third of Professor MacCallum's lectures on Robert Browning was delivered in the King's Hall last night before a large audience. The lecturer began with an interesting discussion of Browning's experiments in the drama, in which he was encouraged by the partial success of "Stafford," and in which the influence of Shelley and London mingled with the adolescent character of Browning himself. His subsequent abandonment of the dramatic form was due to Browning's preference for analysis over action, and his inaptitude for plot and the evolution of situations. The poet's relations with Landor and Carlyle were interestingly described, and his introduction to and marriage with Miss Elizabeth Barrett.

The Marconi Company of America, which recently purchased 550 acres near Belmar, New York, announces that twin wireless telegraphy stations to communicate direct with London will be built on the New Jersey coast within a year. The second station will be erected near Barnegat, and will be tuned differently, so that two messages may be sent simultaneously.

MR. WILLIS'S TENANT.

THE SPEAKER DEFENDS HIS ACTION.

A STORY WITH TWO SIDES.

Mr. Willis, the Speaker of the Legislative Assembly, whose agents secured a writ of ejectment, at the Central Police Court last week, against a tenant, Miss Gormley, of Carlton-street, Kensington, offers his side of the case, thus:—

"My agents have not received any rent for many weeks past from the tenant referred to, but, wishing to gain possession in order to sell the property, they had to take the only course open to them, that of moving the Court. The house was let long ago at the nominal rental of 22s 6d per week as it would have to be vacated on short notice. But the tenant, wishing to retain the place at a ridiculously low rental, would not allow prospective buyers to look through the house, nor would she allow a sale notice to be put up. Without authority this woman sub-let the house for 50s a week, and shifted elsewhere. Subsequently she returned, and in order to gain possession of the property the agents raised the rent to its letting value, but the tenant would neither pay rent nor leave. There was another course which might have been taken, but the least objectionable one was followed—that of asking the Court for possession of the property."

MISS GORMLEY'S RESPONSE.

Miss Gormley yesterday replied as follows:—"The rent," she said last night, "I agreed to pay Mr. Willis was refused recently on several occasions by the agent, since he made a demand for the increase. Indeed he refused to compromise, for I actually offered 27s 6d per week. As to his statement about the nominal rental, let me say that the house when I first rented it, 4½ years ago, had been empty for some months, and was then in a very bad state of repair. As to the 'ridiculously low rental,' the price paid was the price asked and was the full value then, and for some time afterwards. At anyrate, Mr. Willis was not able to obtain the rate for some months previous to my occupancy. No demand was made on me for any increase till last May, when he notified that the rent had been raised from 22s 6d to 35s. Up to that time the rent had been paid regularly. I then offered to compromise, and wrote a letter to that effect, a copy of which I hold. This letter was never replied to by Mr. Willis. It is not true that prospective buyers were refused admission to inspect the place, as people came at different times during the past few weeks, and were shown over the house. I did refuse that a sale notice should be put up, which was my right. Regarding the subletting, I admit that the place was let for 50s per week while I was holidaying at Manly, but Mr. Willis forgot to say that the 50s covered the furniture, linen, and cutlery, which is not an unreasonable charge, as most people will admit. The rent due from the date of increase was offered, but refused by the agent, because I declined to make any advance. As soon as I got notice of the increase I made every attempt possible to get another suitable house, but, owing to the demand, none were available. A week before the issue of the summons I wrote to Mr. Willis' solicitors, pointing out the difficulty in securing a suitable house, and intimating my intention of vacating the premises at the earliest possible moment. In spite of that, the summons came. My endeavours to get a house have been going on for the past five weeks. I am glad to say, however, that a friend of mine has purchased a place for me, as a last resort, paying £1200 for it, so that I might get under a roof. Mr. Willis, therefore, may have his house on Friday next, if it is at all possible to get out in time. I leave the public to judge between myself and Mr. Willis. A good deal more may be added. Perhaps the public will not need any more of the details to assist them to a decision in the matter. I would like to point out that during my four and a half years' tenancy not one penny was spent by Mr. Willis on repairs, while every year I was obliged to spend some money on it, such as painting, etc."

CITY COUNCIL.

WILLIAM-STREET SCHEME.

There was a long discussion at the meeting of the City Council last evening on the recommendation of the Works Committee that, in view of the settlement arrived at by the ex-Lord Mayor (Sir Allen Taylor) with the Government in connection with the cattle saleyards at Flemington, the decision of the council to proceed with the construction of a new street parallel with William-street be adhered to.

Alderman Hagon said that he was convinced now that this scheme was a mistake. The improvement of Higgs' corner was all that was required for the present. His objection was that this new street was too close to William-street. He moved an amendment that the matter be deferred.

Alderman Lindsay Thompson seconded the amendment.

Alderman Sir Allen Taylor considered that the proposed new street, if carried out, would be a most desirable improvement. Instead of two lines of trams in William-street, there would only be one, the down traffic coming along the new street. He had made a compact with the Government under which an arrangement very satisfactory to the council had been made, part of the bargain in connection with the transfer of the saleyards.

Alderman Barlow asked why they mixed up this proposed new street with the transfer of the Flemington saleyards. He could see no reason in the scheme.

Alderman Griffin said that the scheme would, if carried out, remove the disabilities existing from congested traffic in William-street.

Alderman Hughes was satisfied that the only satisfactory solution was that recommended by the Royal Commission, a tunnel from Cathedral-street, emerging at the power-house at Rushcutter Bay. That would carry the through traffic, thus relieving the congestion in William-street. The estimated cost of the tunnel he had spoken of was £110,000.

Alderman Sir Allen Taylor: The estimate we got was £179,300.

The Lord Mayor said it would be unjust to the shopkeepers in William-street to make this new street only 100ft away, and divert the traffic. Alderman Sir Allen Taylor had estimated that the street would cost £90,000. His information was that it would cost a great deal more.

An alderman: More like £150,000.

The Lord Mayor: The estimates of the Oxford-street improvements had been exceeded to the extent of between £50,000 and £100,000. The new street would mainly benefit the Tramway Department. Why, then, should the Tramway Department not make the street themselves?

Alderman A. M'Elhone said that William-street, on the authority of the superintendent of traffic, was more dangerous than Circular Quay.

The amendment was carried by 9 votes to 8.

UNFORTUNATE LITIGATION.

In reply to Alderman Meagher, the Lord Mayor stated that in connection with the council's resumption policy 11 cases had been contested in court, of which only one had been won by the council. The amount paid up to date to the council's valuers for valuations in connection with the resumptions, including accountancy, up to June 30 had been £5771 18s 8d.

AN IMPROVEMENT SCHEME.

The recommendation of the finance committee that the Lord Mayor's minute suggesting the purchase of land at the intersection of Hay, Lackey, and Fraser streets, at a cost of £8000, for the purpose of effecting an improvement by taking off the acute projecting angle and rounding the corner, was approved.

TRIENNIAL ASSESSMENTS.

The Lord Mayor's minutes to the effect that triennial instead of quinquennial assessments be made was agreed to without discussion.

GRAND OPERA SEASON.

MELBOURNE ENTHUSIASTS' PROPOSAL.

EXCURSION TO SYDNEY.

MELBOURNE, Tuesday.

It having been found impossible to arrange for a return season in Melbourne of the Quinlan Opera Company, owing to the opening date and other arrangements having been fixed for the company's season in Manchester, on their return to England, the J. C. Williamson management has been considering a novel suggestion, made to them by a large number of grand opera enthusiasts. This is to run a special excursion to Sydney in connection with the season in that city.

The firm has approached the railway authorities with a view to running an excursion to Sydney during the last week of the season. Such an excursion would combine a special reduction in the fare, with admission to the opera, and including the special convenience of allowing the seats to be selected and booked in Melbourne prior to the departure for Sydney.

There is a possibility that the excursion will be a special one, or it may be combined with the one leaving Melbourne on August 13. This will be the first theatrical excursion that has yet been run between two Australian capitals.

ARE YOU TAKING

an everyday care of yourself? Prevention, you know, is ever so much better than cure. A little irregularity of the stomach seems such a trivial thing to-day, but next week it is a malady, ever getting more serious, little ailments soon become big complaints. Cure that little irregularity at once. Neglect it, and it leads swiftly to dyspepsia, indigestion, flatulence, constipation, biliousness, headache, and perhaps a train of greater evils. Even these will yield to

BEECHAM'S PILLS

But why run the risk of so much suffering? What folly to delay—waiting till one is ill. A dose of these famous pills, taken whenever the least weariness is experienced, will effectually prevent any unpleasant developments. Don't wait till you have to be cured. Take an everyday care of yourself; remember always if you keep the bowels regular and the liver in working order you will never be troubled with indigestion and its attendant miseries. "Taking care" of course means that the standard remedy must be always at hand. In many thousands of homes BEECHAM'S PILLS are regarded as the family medicine, and are kept in an appointed place always ready for use. When you notice a symptom you want to get rid of it at once; there is no time like the present. To be always prepared, you, too, must keep a box of these famous pills

The first thing is to find out what it has done and what it can do. That's what proves its worth, not showy appearance, although, of course, it should look smart.
The New Hudson Motor Cycle has been put to all kinds of tests—hill climbing, speed, and endurance—and has proved itself superior in every one.
Probably its best performance in Australia was a recent trip made by Errington Lewis, Esq., on

Though I knew that God knew best,
When He eased your pain and suffering,
And He laid you down to rest.

Inserted by her loving and lonely husband, John Gibbons.

GIBBONS.—In sad and loving memory of my dear mother, who passed away in her 59th year on July 31, 1905.

This is the grave where mother is laid,
Sweet is the memory that never will fade.
Hours will wither, eyes cease to see;
[illegible] you, never shall we.

Inserted by her loving daughter and son-in-law, [illegible] and William Mowll.

GIBBONS.—In sad and loving memory of my darling mother, who passed away in her 59th year, on July 31, 1905, after a long and painful illness.

I mourn you and miss you in silence unseen,
And dwell on the memories of days that have been,
To some [illegible] forgotten by some you may be,
The grave that contains you is sacred to me.

Inserted by her loving daughter, Tilly, and son-in-law, Edward, grandchildren, Eddie, Tilly, and [illegible].

WHAT MR. REID THINKS OF IRONITE PAVINGS.

Mr. John Reid, Martin-chambers, Moore and Pitt streets, Sydney, says:—"This composition has been used in works superintended by me for 6 or 7 years. The work on some of the floors laid under my supervision is Heavy Lorries and the heaviest class of work known. Compared with some of the usual classes of flooring, such as Hardwood Blocks, Ordinary Cement, or Ordinary Asphalt, IT IS EASILY FIRST FOR HEAVY WEAR." What better evidence could be adduced in favour of Ironite for ALL classes of work requiring strength and durability?

DANGEROUS FINANCE.

Any Government must be judged by its finance, and when the leader of the Opposition moved his motion of censure upon the Government in the Legislative Assembly yesterday afternoon, he took this for his first line of attack. So much has already been said against Labour finance that it is unnecessary to repeat all the arguments or to comment upon Mr. Wade's detailed statement. But something certainly remains to be said about the future. Everything depends upon whether the Government can carry on under present conditions, and whether the current financial year may be weathered without something like a crisis. The political crisis may, of course, come at any time. If resolved in favour of the Liberal party there would be little or no trouble, because confidence would quickly return, and not so much difficulty would be experienced in borrowing money to carry on. Should Mr. M'Gowen and his colleagues remain in office the outlook will probably change, and not even the undoubted stability of the State will save them from a desperate time. In the latter event Mr. Wade thinks it will mean further drastic taxation, if not retrenchment everywhere, and serious contraction of industry and enterprise. We are not inclined to take such a pessimistic view as he does, but we do believe that, unless the Government alters its whole method of management and administration, it will find money growing continually tighter, accommodation will only be obtained at greatly increased rates, and many much-needed works will have to be postponed or hung up indefinitely. The present pace cannot be maintained on what is, in effect, the edge of a precipice, and the figures given by the leader of the Opposition deserve the very closest attention on this account alone. All the cash balances left by the last Government have been expended, and two millions of money has been spent over and above what was received during the last financial year from ordinary revenue. If more money cannot be obtained in like volume there must be dislocation somewhere. Is increased taxation to fill the breach? It will be very interesting to see how the Treasurer meets the situation, but assuredly, whether he finds or borrows the money, he must pay heavily for the ability to keep going. So much is perfectly clear, and we believe Mr. Cann is feeling as anxious as anybody about the future.

That the country with these bountiful rains is bound to prosper is beyond controversy. Nothing can keep New South Wales back, and, although recent losses owing to the drought must be paid for, everybody will echo Mr. Wade's reassuring reminder that the country is not ruined yet. But the trouble will come with another bountiful season, because the financial brake may have to be put on suddenly. Crops must still be moved, and imperative work will have to be done; yet, instead of a widening and deepening prosperity, bred of glowing confidence, we may have to face restriction and dislocation if money is not forthcoming in ever-increasing volume, and without friction. How seriously public works are retarded even now may be seen from a statement made in another column. Particulars are given of public contracts in arrears, and we may well believe that what is true of those engaged in carrying out work for the Government is doubly true of contractors in all directions. Already it is impossible anywhere to be sure that a contract will be completed at any given date. Jobs are dragging on in both the city and suburbs, because contractors cannot get men, or keep them for any time when found. There is, however, nothing in the position to cause serious anxiety if only the principles of sound finance be accepted. Let confidence be restored, and all the wheels will continue to run. This is the foundation upon which the motion of censure is based, and it is right that the Government should be challenged at the beginning of a new session, and in the opening month of another financial year.

MR. NIELSEN'S REPORT.

If for no other reason Mr. Nielsen's report on his trip to America would be valuable, because it shows how travel and inquiry impress and educate the right sort of man. Mr. Nielsen's mission in itself may be open to criticism. It was entrusted to him after a political crisis which resulted in his retirement from the Ministry, and in the jettisoning of a prominent plank in the Labour platform. But we are not concerned now with the political aspect of his absence from the State, important as it is. The report itself is so interesting because it is evidence of what happens when a man of Mr. Nielsen's calibre can detach himself from politics and study a subject like irrigation, while otherwise investigating the possibilities of trade between the United States and Australia. We do not contend that there is any of that exhaustive discussion of a great question which made Mr. Deakin's report on irrigation a standard work. The details of the latest Commissioner's work in this regard are conspicuous by their absence, and probably Mr. Nielsen would be the first to point out that he was not sent abroad to discover whether irrigation was worth while, but to determine how far experts in irrigation could be induced to come to New South Wales and help forward what is practically a new movement in Australia. The movement is certainly new in scale, and the Murrumbidgee scheme undoubtedly represents the first step along the wider path of irrigation. With so much in view, Mr. Nielsen went to America and advertised his State, while receiving, and reacting upon, a multitude of new impressions. The trip must have done him a great deal of good in this respect, and he has apparently come back quite convinced that a policy of immigration is the right thing under the circumstances. In the States are a multitude of expert farmers, who are looking to Canada for new fields and a broader outlook, and here is the country which should be calling them with more insistent voice.

Mr. Nielsen is particularly interesting when he compares the American farmer with the Australian, and incidentally decides that the latter has hardly begun to cultivate the soil scientifically. Intense cultivation in a State like California is a very wonderful thing, but as much is true more or less of the whole of the agricultural area of the United States. Men go into farming there with an adequate knowledge of what the soil can do in a natural state, and of what it may be persuaded to do under proper conditions and with adequate appliances. Here we are satisfied to live practically from hand to mouth, and Mr. Nielsen would have a stream of American farmers pouring in to raise our standards and educate our best men to do better. But he has come back also tremendously impressed with the possibilities of trade with America. There is a market which would add millions of money to our resources if carefully nursed, largely because we are in opposite zones and have the pull of the seasons to help us. Canada has nothing like our advantages in this respect, and it only needs that Australia should be known and appreciated to draw in an ever-increasing number, not only of American farmers, but of business men eager to exploit our market and to serve their own. Just at present there appears to be little disposition to consider Australia in any light. Americans are satisfied there is no place like their own country, and the hub of the universe sticks out visibly from every little town and hamlet in the United States. But Mr. Nielsen was evidently able to do something to lighten this darkness, and he could have brought hundreds of people over instead of the score provided for had he been backed up by the State and the Commonwealth. It will be interesting now to see how Labour leaders will listen to this apostle of immigration and trade from their own ranks. Mr. Nielsen insists that the time is ripe to appoint a Commercial Commissioner for the Western States of America, and he asks for £5000 per annum to push his trade scheme along. But we are afraid he will become a voice crying in the wilderness, and that as he was sent away to save his party trouble, so will he be asked to keep quiet to avoid friction.

THE STRIKE MILITARY

So far it is probably an exaggeration to designate the frequent resignations among the senior military forces by the term strike; but it is plain that there is a good deal of dissatisfaction among these ranks. This is all the more to be regretted, in view of what we had to say yesterday in relation to cadet service. In the nature of the case cadets who are just coming under the compulsory service scheme will be only too ready to quote on their own behalf any disaffection in the ranks of their seniors who remain for the time being an integral part of the defence service on a purely voluntary basis. It goes without saying that if what almost may be called seasoned troops kick against the pricks the youngsters will be sure to do so. We keep hearing so many symptoms of this military unrest that it is hard to believe that there is not something radically wrong with our system in its present transitional stage. It may be said that in the nature of the case that must be so. We cannot have a change from one system to another without a good deal of dislocation, and this is bound to affect the senior men even more than it does the young recruits who are just passing into the service. The difference is that with those who have voluntarily served their country for many years it is particularly hard that vexatious regulations should be added to the natural process of extinction. After all we cannot for many years yet afford to do without our permanent or our well-trained forces, and there seems to be no need to subject them to harassing restrictions. When in the fulness of time the boy soldier has grown up under new conditions we may be able to insist on conditions different from those that have obtained in the past. But in the meantime we should not forget the claims of the old soldier.

The explanation of the whole position seems to be that we are in a state of transition, and it is naturally not easy to accommodate the new order of things to the old. In such a state of affairs it is only right that there should be a certain amount of give and take. Unluckily this is just what the average military officer at headquarters does not seem to be able to realise. He has an ideal scheme in his mind's eye, and he does not grip the fact that men trained all their lives under other conditions cannot at once be brought into line with his ideal. This would not matter very much except that for the time being we are absolutely dependent on the defence force as it stands. We can train our boys on any system we please, and no doubt in time they will respond automatically to any discipline we like to impose upon them. But meanwhile the trained soldier is our only standby, and we cannot afford to do without him. In taking over the business of defence the Commonwealth seems to have taken too little account of this factor in the matter. Men who have for years been accustomed to given conditions cannot easily be brought to a changed point of view. It may be true that discipline has been too lax in the past; but we cannot expect to remedy the defect straight away; and, to use a very unmilitary metaphor, we should temper the wind to the shorn lamb as far as we reasonably can. Especially as regards the artillery it is most important to give no sound cause of complaint, partly because the work of this arm is indispensable, and partly because the long training involved precludes any easy replacement of well-proved men. Those concerned should therefore think twice before they lay down any conditions that will be irksome to a service which is all we have until we can provide something better.

THE EMPEROR OF JAPAN.

The Emperor of Japan, whose death, anticipated for some days, was announced yesterday, occupied a position almost unique among monarchs of any age or race. It is given to few to witness such changes as Japan passed through while he occupied the throne, and while his rule lasted—forty-four years—the progress his country made represents what has been elsewhere the development of centuries. In that time Japan has with a single stride crossed the gulf between medievalism and the world of to-day. He found her a little isolated group of islands hidden away at the ends of the earth, scarcely known, far less considered, by the Western States. He left her a nation which has proved its title to be taken into account in the conferences of the Powers. He found her groaning under the burden of the most exclusive form of feudal oligarchy, and left her in the enjoyment of constitutional and representative government. He found her hugging her seclusion and shrinking from contact with the outside world; he left her with foreign shipping thronging her ports, and a commercial activity which puts to shame many an older community. When he ascended the throne the Imperial troops were hard put to it to suppress rebellions against the new ruler. Now the loyalty and patriotism of the Japanese are notable. Less than fifty years ago those troops were armed in full panoply of chain-mail, and for weapons of precision they possessed bows and arrows. Within the last twenty years they have waged two successful wars, one of them with a first-class Power. This is surely a record which few sovereigns have ever equalled.

How far the late Mikado was personally responsible for his nation's development is not easy to say. The rigid ceremonial and privacy of an Oriental court have prevented him from ever being a popular figure in the sense that most of the reigning monarchs of Europe are. But there is little doubt that he has always been in sympathy with the "foreign" party. At the very outset of his rule the whole of his influence was exercised in favour of increased intercourse with the outer world, and the success of Sir Harry Parkes's famous mission can be traced to his willingness to accept new ideas. The occidentalisation of Japan in the last quarter of the nineteenth century could never have been so rapid and so complete but for his support, for had he opposed it opposition would have found favour in the eyes of many of his countrymen. But, quite apart from his direct influence upon the destinies of Japan, he contributed to her progress by choosing advisers of the highest ability. Few monarchs have ever surrounded themselves with so distinguished and efficient a body. In administration, in diplomacy, in commerce, in military matters, in every department, he managed to secure and to retain the services of the best men, and, satisfied that the conduct of affairs was in safe hands, he was content to sink his individuality, and confine himself to the somewhat restricted sphere of a constitutional sovereign. Indeed, his reign is notable for this alone, that it is the first occasion upon which an Oriental despot has shorn himself of his own powers and introduced constitutional government. Regarded from every point of view, his record was a fine one, and he has set a high standard for future Emperors—a standard which his successor will need no ordinary ability worthily to maintain.

The Week in London.—Our special correspondent in London, writing on June 28 (page 10), deals with three addresses on on the social unrest and with the problem of class in England.

The "Sydney Mail."—Naval matters receive considerable attention in this week's issue of the "Mail," which has an appropriate cover bearing a portrait of Admiral Sir George King Hall. "The Making of an Australian Navy" explains the motive behind the policy of the Commonwealth, and describes the quality of the fleet now in process of formation and its value as a British naval unit. The article is accompanied by numerous portraits. There is an interesting review of a recently-published French book dealing with "the German Maritime Breach in the English Colonial Empire." According to the writers, French publicists regard Australia as "the promised land" for German commercial expansion. "If Germany did not take interest in her marine, she would ruin her economic future. If see sees all the issues closed, and, above all, if she is excluded from the English Empire, everyone knows that an armed conflict would be inevitable." An entertaining article is based on the recollections of Mr. William Campbell, of Katoomba, who served in the British Navy at the time of the Crimean War. An excellent drawing by Mr. Charles Bryant shows the cruiser Melbourne on the stocks; the picture is of especial interest, in view of the announcement that her sister-ship, the Sydney, is to be launched by Lady Henderson on August 29. This week's sporting budget is very attractive. There are several pictures from Stockholm; and Mr. Frank Iredale writes interestingly concerning the doings of the Australian cricketers. Referring to Kelleway, he says that player in a great measure resembles Noble, and in time may become even greater than the latter, "though," he adds, "one fancies that he lacks the knowledge, and the strokes of the older player." Breeders of thoroughbreds will welcome "Milroy's" carefully compiled list of winning stallions, which contains information that is not to be obtained elsewhere. Malster again heads the list, being represented by 77 winners, who succeeded in 90 races, the amount won being £34,835. Then follows Wallace, with £27,626, Flavus being third, with £18,072. The list includes all Australian sires whose stock has won £500 or over.

Delayed Work.—At a time when the Railway Department are being censured for not spending the whole of the money on railway duplication contemplated by the Minister for Works a return laid upon the table of the House yesterday is of special interest. The document in question gives a list of contracts in which the specified time for completion has been exceeded by three months and upwards. It is a formidable list, and, incidentally, makes some surprising disclosures. It shows that the Barren Jack weir was 12 months overdue, and there are jetties right along the coast the construction of which is in some cases 53 weeks overdue. Country water supplies figure largely in the departmental list of overdue works, and railways, of course, are a prominent feature. It appears that section 1 of the North Coast railway was already 66 weeks in excess of the stipulated contract time. A long list of overdue works, such as hospitals, police stations, fire stations, schools, works at experimental farms, and numerous others help to swell the report of belated contracts. The electrification of the Coast Hospital was estimated to take two weeks to complete, but the list shows that it is already 59 weeks in excess of that time, and is still incompleted. In addition to the overdue works enumerated in the official list, there is a note intimating that a number of small contracts in various parts of the country are still incompleted. Four reasons are given why the works have not been finished in time. Additional work is one of them, non-supply of pipes applies to some contracts, inability to obtain suitable labour and blue metal, and, finally, there is a note that some work, which does not appear to be specified, had ultimately to be finished by day labour. The list should make interesting reading for the Chief Railway Commissioner.

Warning to Parents.—The Department of Education is anxious that parents should know it has not authorised any person or persons to visit the various schools for the purpose of examining children's eyes. The announcement is made because it has been reported to the department that a number of people have represented that they have been designated by the Educational authorities to test the sight of scholars, and have sold glasses on these representations.

"Greatest Country on Earth."—Mr. Nielsen, M.L.A., in his report to the Government on his recent visit to America, states: "I may say here that I have found all through this country a dense ignorance about Australia, the principal causes of which seem to be: Firstly, that the American nation itself is not yet out of the pioneering stage, and the time of the people is fully occupied in making their own country more productive; and, secondly, the inherent idea in the minds of most of the American people that theirs is the greatest country on earth, making them indifferent to what is happening in other parts of the world. Each American seems to think that his State is the greatest State of the Union, and the United States, as a whole, the best on earth. We in Australia might copy some of this public spirit from the American, and, at any rate, some of our 'stinking-fish party' might take a lesson from the people in this country in loyalty to the country that puts butter on their bread."

The Ties of Empire.—Sir Wm. M'Millan, at the luncheon yesterday in honour of artists with the Quinlan Opera Company who claimed the Royal Academy or Royal College of Music, London, as their alma mater, expressed the pleasure of the Associated Board in welcoming their visitors to a great city of the Empire. The visits of so many distinguished artists from the old country to Australia as had characterised its musical life during the past decade could not but be beneficial to Imperial interests as a whole. In this, the intermediate period of their Empire evolution, he believed strongly in the thousand-and-one ties which lightly bound together widely separated States that boasted a common allegiance. The springs of activity in Church, art, and business circles on this side all originated in England, leading to a union for the purposes of citizenship and defence that could not be overestimated. They welcomed these fine operatic artists as missionaries of Empire, who would return with a good word for the Commonwealth, and would report that they recognised in it those principles of justice, honour, and courage which animated all who looked for inspiration to the enlightened Constitution of England, and for guidance to the British flag. (Cheers.)

City Council Motor Cars.—Questions relative to the City Council motor cars, their cost, mileage, repair, expenses, and other matters, were recently tabled by Alderman Cocks. The replies given at the council meeting a fortnight ago supplied certain data that caused considerable comment. Last night these replies were modified, but to some pertinent questions the answers given were declared by the questioner to be evasive. For example, it was asked: "Is any allowance calculated for depreciation?" And the illuminating reply given: "Yes; annual writing down;" the rate of such depreciation not being supplied. The rate of repairs for car "A" per mile is now stated to be 1/1½, irrespective of tyres, maintenance, driver's wages, etc. Alderman Cocks says that even this amount is excessive and further questions will be tabled by him for next meeting.

Cosmopolitan Women.—The bitterest enemy of woman suffrage cannot charge the sex with racial prejudice, if the constitution of the Women's National Council is to be taken as a criterion of their general attitude in this respect. Miss Michaelis, speaking at the Women's Congress yesterday, alluded to the fact that at the first quinquennial meeting held in Sydney, in 1893, Lady Denman was elected president by the representatives of no less than 30 different nations. The annual gatherings had been held in London, Berlin, and Toronto, while the president was an Englishwoman, the three vice-presidents were Scotch, Italian, and Austrian, the corresponding secretary was a German, the recording secretary a Swede, and the treasurer a Canadian. Scattered amongst the office-bearers were Dutch, French, Russian, and English women.

A Gilbertian Arrangement.—According to Miss Rose Scott, women would be far better municipal councillors than the men are. She told the National Council of Women how men managed things. "In my municipality," she said, "Jersey-road is controlled by two municipalities, and their combined wisdom is worthy of a Gilbert and Sullivan opera. Woollahra sweeps half the road one day in the week, and then Paddington sweeps the other side upon another day in the week, pavements not being in the contract, however dirty they may be. Imagine two women arranging to sweep a room in that way!"

OVERSEA CRIMINALS.

ENGLISHMEN HEAD LIST.

Some time ago the Attorney-General (Mr. Holman) asked for a return showing the number of persons convicted on indictment during the last three years who were new-comers to Australia.

According to the return which Mr. Holman has received, dated June 11, the total convictions were 71.

The list comprises 31 Englishmen, 8 Scotchmen, 5 Irishmen, 3 Americans, 4 Germans, 2 Russians, 3 Norwegians, 1 Japanese, 3 South Africans, 8 New Zealanders, 1 from Newfoundland, 1 Indian, and 1 Italian.

FEDERAL SESSION.

REDISTRIBUTING THE ELECTORATES.

SECURING LABOUR SEATS.

(FROM OUR SPECIAL REPORTER.)

MELBOURNE, Tuesday.

With the ever-shifting population of Australia, it is found necessary at regular intervals to redistribute the electorates represented in the Federal Parliament, so that some sense of proportion might be preserved. This year no less than four of the States are being dealt with in this respect, and the reception which the reports of the Commissioners who are in charge of the work, are receiving at the hands of the Parliament is interesting to watch. The matter of reviewing the work of the commissioners is supposed to be on strictly non-party lines, but, so far, the reverse has been the case in the House of Representatives. In all, three of the State redistributions have been placed before members—Victoria, Western Australia, and Queensland.

Victoria was the first to be dealt with. The members of the Labour party made practically no protests against the manner in which the work had been carried out, and the report was adopted without dissent. Perhaps this was because the Commissioners had done their work so well that no fault could be found with them, or, perhaps, the fact that two Liberal strongholds had been wiped out might have had something to do with the appreciation shown by the Ministerialists.

In the case of Queensland, however, such was not the case. An additional seat was put in here, but in the arranging of the electorates, the commissioners did not seem to pay sufficient regard to the welfare of sitting members, and the result was that one of them, Mr. Bamford, had his district so altered as to make it problematic as to whether he would return again. Such a thing could not be countenanced for a moment, and the member affected put in so pitiful an appeal to his fellow members to get him what he called a fair deal, that the members of the caucus deserted the Ministers and voted for the report being sent back to the commissioners. This was carried by a few votes, and probably by this time the said commissioners are worrying themselves as to how they can please sitting members of the Labour party as well as carry out the instructions laid down in the legislation.

Another redistribution which is not meeting with the approval of one of the members interested is that of Western Australia, which was before the House to-day. Here some alteration was deemed exceedingly necessary by reason of the fact that Sir John Forrest's electorate, Swan, carried nearly twice as many votes as those of Mr. Mahon and Mr. Frazer. Accordingly the commissioners appointed met and drew up what they thought was a fair scheme for the reallotment of electors. Their proposal, however, does not please Mr. Mahon at all. To begin with, some of his best mining supporters are sneaked off him, and handed over to Mr. Frazer, and, to make matters worse, he is given in exchange a large batch of farmers from Sir John Forrest's electorate. What does a Labour man want with farmers? They are only a menace to him, and Mr. Mahon has determined to get rid of them if he can. Accordingly he is moving heaven and earth to have the report returned to the commissioners for review. He has left no stone unturned to effect his purpose. He even went so far as to get counsel's opinion on the matter, and that was conveyed to members of the House in a neat circular. Up till now Mr Mahon has had practically a walk-over at the elections, and he does not intend to be put to the expense of a hard fight without doing his best to nip the offending scheme in the bud. Sir John Forrest, in speaking on the matter to-day, was very wrathful, and he accused the Labour party of stultifying itself to retain seats for members of their party. Mr. Fowler, another Western Australian member, spoke highly of the work of the commissioners, but numerous Labour members clearly showed by their remarks that they were preparing to jettison the report to save their comrade. It was left to Mr. Chanter to move that the report be referred back to the commissioners for further review.

As the debate proceeded it could be seen that Mr. Mahon would have his work cut out to get the report sent back to the commissioners. However, his party were confident, as a private count of the House showed that Mr. Mahon's supporters were just a trifle more numerous than the Opposition. When the bells rang for the division, however, it was seen that another "sure thing" had gone wrong, for Mr. Chanter's amendment was negatived by one vote, the tellers reporting 22 for for it and 23 against it. The original question was then put that the report be adopted. The bells were rang, and through the lobbies and corridors scampered supporters of Mr. Mahon, looking for their majority. The search was fruitless. The motion was carried by one vote, and Mr. Mahon was saddled with his farmer friends for the next election. This matter disposed of, the House settled down to try to follow Mr. Glynn on the second reading of the Navigation Bill.

PERSONAL.

VICE-REGAL.

Her Excellency Lady Denman presided at the afternoon session of the interstate congress of the National Council of Women at the King's Hall yesterday afternoon.

Lady Chelmsford, attended by Sir Thomas Lees, dined with their Excellencies the Governor-General and Lady Denman last evening. Their Excellencies subsequently held a reception, which was attended by the delegates to the congress of the National Council of Women.

In the Exhibition Hall, Brisbane, on Tuesday August 13 the Chancellor of the Queensland University (Sir William MacGregor) will perform the ceremony of conferring honorary degrees on Sir Samuel Griffith, Chief Justice of Australia, and Mr. James Bryce, British Ambassador at Washington.

At a meeting of the Federal Cabinet on Monday night, the Postmaster-General (Mr. Frazer) became suddenly ill, and had to be removed to a private hospital. His condition yesterday was reported to be improved. It will probably be a week before he will be able to resume duty, and, in the meantime, Senator Findley (Hon. Minister), will attend to the departmental work.

The Minister for Agriculture (Mr. Trefle) left last night for Condobolin, where he will open the local show. He expects to be back in Sydney on Friday.

Mr. Cyril Ward, eldest son of Sir Joseph Ward, ex-Prime Minister of New Zealand, was a passenger by the Maunganui, which arrived yesterday.

The health of Mr. H. Sparks, secretary of the Chamber of Manufacturers, has considerably improved. For the past three months he as been laid up, suffering from a nervous breakdown.

At the last meeting of the Labour party a motion of confidence was carried in Mr. Page, M.L.A. for Botany. Recently some of the Labour leagues in the Botany electorate selected another candidate, and the resolution was the outcome.

The Associated Board of the Royal Academy and Royal College of Music, London, as represented by Sir William M'Millan, K.C.M.G., who presided, and Mr. Arthur C. Hull, resident secretary for Australia, gave a luncheon at Paris House yesterday to mark the occasion of the visit to this city of various members of the two Royal colleges with the Quinlan Opera Company. Four members, Mme. Agnes Nicholls, R.C.M. (soprano), Chas. Magrath, R.C.M. (basso), Cecil Henderson, R.A.M. (horn), and M. Draper, R.C.M. (clarionet) were unavoidably absent, leaving in the following artists:—Hubert Bath, A.R.A.M. (conductor), O. Corjeag, R.A.M. (second leader), Arthur Wynn, R.C.M. (baritone), Sydney Russell, R.A.M. (tenor), Wm. Samuell, A.R.A.M. (baritone), Robert Veevers, R.A.M. (baritone), Mrs. O. Corjeag, R.A.M. (soprano), Miss Rosina Beynon, R.C.M. (contralto), Miss Elsie Williams, R.C.M. (contralto). Lady M'Millan, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Quinlan, Mr. and Mrs. John Coates, Mr. and Mrs. Spencer Thomas, Mrs. Arthur Hull, Miss Ida Thompson, A.R.A.M., Mr. Thomas Brentnall (representing the board in Victoria), Messrs. Erie, P. J. Nolan, and Gerald Marr Thompson completed the party. Congratulatory speeches were made by Mr. Bath, Mr. Hull, the chairman, Mr. Quinlan, and Mr. Coates upon the pleasant nature of such a reunion of students so far away, and humorous allusions to the wet weather formed the occasion of good-natured laughter.

"THE VALKYRIE."

QUINLAN OPERA COMPANY.

AN ORCHESTRAL TRIUMPH.

A crowded audience assembled in tense expectation of the Quinlan Opera Company's rendering of "The Valkyrie" at Her Majesty's Theatre last night, nor were they disappointed, for as soon as the curtain rose the orchestra raised them to an enchanted world of poetry and romance. Herr Ernest Knoch, the vigilant and warmly-inspiring conductor, had charge of the music, and as soon as he lifted his baton he conjured up the Wagnerian storm, which forms the introduction. It is briefer than most such, and remarkable also for the prolonged persistence of the rumbling, growling passages for bass-strings, with second violins tremolando, with teeming rain in the triplets for other violins, and a climax quickly over, with a subsidence to the opening once again. Then the curtain rose upon the new setting of Hunding's primitive house, with the mighty trunk of the ash-tree as before, but no peep of blue sky above the lofty roof covering the spacious room, with its glowing hearth, in which the whole action of the enthralling scene is carried on. As the music-drama proceeded the audience perceived that the greatest possible repose of movement and gesture was exercised by the characters on the stage. This was notably the case where black Hunding, the hunter and warrior who originally carried off Sieglinde in a raid, and forced her to an unwilling marriage, jealously commanded her retirement from the presence of the stranger. This scene was admirably carried out with more than "Macready-like pauses" (and the old-time tragedian was famous for them!), but every gesture was timed to the instrumentation, so that the action did not really slacken. Miss Gladys Ancrum, who has hitherto played secondary roles, was the new Sieglinde, a tall, slight woman, with long, fair hair, who looked the part, and exhibited a full-toned soprano of fine power; whilst Mr. John Harrison proved at his best as Siegmund, of which he gave a vigorous interpretation that was marked also by sentiment. Mr. Charles Magrath was that "war-beast well-bearded," Hunding, with spear and circular shield, a black bearskin over breast and shoulder, and eyes that glowered suspiciously at the romantic young intruder. Mr. Magrath assumed a weight and asperity of tone that was in character, and his bass voice told out well in the declamatory music of the savage warrior. As regards other principals, Miss Edna Thornton triumphed over the somewhat thankless music of Fricka in the second act, and in the one fine song of the part showed all the dramatic charm of her beautiful voice. This "Mrs. Grundy" of the mythological story is rarely lifted above the tedious as it was last night, and the feat was recognised with enthusiasm. There was a Wotan of tragic significance in Mr. Robert Parker, and Mme. Agnes Nicholls, though not vocally heavy enough for Brunnhilde, played with dignity; but over and above everything and everybody was Wagner's marvellous orchestration as exquisitely rendered by the English players.

Some allusion to the fringe of a colossal subject is necessary to enable opera-goers to grasp the point in Wagner's scheme at which "The Valkyrie" opens. The opera is really the second of the four works forming the "Ring of the Nibelungen," the first of the series being "Rhinegold," the third "Siegfried," and the fourth "Gotterdammerung" ("The Dusk of the Gods"). The god Wotan, threatened by the evil influences of the ring, takes human form to create an inspired hero for his own defence, and his earthly wife bears him twins, Siegmund and Sieglinde. Without following the prologue in all its intricacy, it may be said that the twins become separated in childhood, and are not reunited until the curtain rises on "The Valkyrie," when the hero, purposely deserted by Wotan, and flying from his foes, sinks exhausted in a lonely forest hut, where Sieglinde tends him.

Audiences nowadays thoroughly understand the frequency with which the composer partially transfers the dramatic interest to the instrumentation. The meeting between the lovers first creates it, and then at once the accompaniment begins to suggest the two love-motives soon to be combined in the great duet. This, no less than the expressive glances mutually interchanged as the woman held the horn of mead to the hero's lips, showed that the pair had "fallen in love at first sight," in the fine old irresponsible manner of those fine old irresponsible days! The great moments for the tenor were in the soliloquy in which Siegmund muses over his dire need for a sword, with which to fight with Hunding at dawn. Suddenly a moonbeam reveals the hilt of a sword buried high up in the trunk of the tree, and the hero's song of joyous surprise, as trumpet-calls are sounded in exultation, whilst the harp inspires an animated strain, was rendered so as to prove one of the events of the evening. Miss Ancrum declaimed with feeling the narrative of Sieglinde's loathed marriage, and of how the stranger (Wotan) plunged in the sword which only a hero could withdraw, solemn chords for brass emphasising the story; and both artists shared in the enchantment of the Spring music. "Spring that has chased the winter storms to wane," sings the hero, with the sound of birds and falling leaves in the orchestra; and "For thee I [illegible] ed, 'neath the frost-fettered winter's frown" passionately respond the woman in the strains of a duet that rises to rapturous heights as they rush away into the open forest, disappearing to a violent discord as the curtain falls. Altogether the opera was pleasingly opened, and the [illegible] were well won.

In the second act, wherein Wotan and his daughter, Brunnhilde, are the central characters, Mme. Agnes Nicholls opened the part effectively in the wild cries with which the semi-goddess hastens to do Wotan's bidding, her "Ho-jotoho" ringing out brilliantly on the high B natural. But the most poignantly touching situation of the tragedy is that in which the brass and drums sound the solemn death-theme, as Brunnhilde [illegible] from her rocky retreat to warn the hero that Hunding will slay him, and that she and her sister Valkyries will bear him to Valhalla, the halls of immortality. Here the soprano, in the chain-mail, winged helmet, and bearing her glittering shield, admirably looked the part as she leant upon her spear in a fine pose, but the music was too low for the crystal charm of the voice, breadth of tone was wanting, and the majesty of the message was missed. Mr. Robert Parker, a commanding and formidable figure in the god-like panoply of Wotan, had all the vocal power so essential to the role, and one of his most impressive efforts was in the anguished, heart-sick plaint after Fricka's departure. The horses and flying figures presented in the splendid performance in German five years ago were omitted from the opening of act three, but the "Ride of the Valkyries," the wild rushing passages for violins and wood-wind, the familiar galloping phrase, the whinny of the steeds, and the exhilarating theme of the ride itself were overwhelmingly executed by the orchestra, whilst the eight Valkyries from time to time interjected their wild cries amidst flashes of lightning and the roll of thunder. At the end of the act Mr. Robert Parker held the audience as Wotan by the depth of his pathos, and the tender solemnity of the last farewell, with the doom "in slumber thou shalt be locked;" and in this scene there was some fine singing by Mme. Nicholls, though, as a matter of opinion, we cannot consider Brunnhilde one of her parts. The magic of the leaping fire-music brought the whole to its appointed close.

"Rigoletto" will be staged at 2 p.m. to-day, with an attractive cast, headed by Miss Lalla Miranda as Gilda, and Mr. W. J. Samuell in the name-part. "Tales of Hoffmann," a favourite work, will be repeated in the evening.

The plans for the Symphony Orchestral concert, to be held at the Town Hall on August 15, will be available at Paling's at 11 a.m. to-day. The orchestra will be augmented to 65 players, and Mme. Agnes Nicholls will sing.

THE NAVIGATION BILL.

CLASSIFICATION OF ENGINEERS.

MELBOURNE, Monday.

A deputation, representative of the marine engineers, introduced by Senator Turley and other Labour members of Parliament to-day asked the Minister for Customs to amend the classification of engineers in the Navigation Bill, in the direction of better recognition of the training undergone. A schedule of the requirements of the deputation was handed to Mr. Tudor with the remark that it be treated as confidential. Mr. Tudor, in reply said that the Bill as drafted was not being treated by the Cabinet as a party measure, and he was considering the circulation of amendments. The request of the deputation would be considered.

SCIENCE CONGRESS.

FEDERAL GIFT OF £15,000.

In August, 1914, the British Science Congress will be held in Australia. This event was referred to yesterday at the meeting of the National Council of Women by Mrs. Dobson, of Tasmania, who said that the Commonwealth Government had promised to give £15,000 towards the expenses of the Congress. It would be an advantage, she said, if the National Council of Women could hold their quinquennial gathering at the same time.

THE DOCK STRIKE.

MEN SEEKING TO RESUME.

FIND PLACES FILLED.

LEADERS' RECRIMINATIONS.

LONDON, July 29.

Work is active at the docks, and the staff is continually increasing, but the want of lightermen is the real difficulty.

Many of the strikers on returning found their places filled. Only 500 out of those on strike secured employment at Tilbury and Surrey docks to-day.

Several newspapers comment on the inability of the leaders to control the strikers, and suggest that the determination of the men to continue the strike is due to the fact that there is no work for them to resume.

Eight thousand stevedores and 2000 sailing bargemen on the Lower Thames and the Medway have resumed work.

The sailors and firemen of Tower Hill, Poplar, and Canningtown have decided by overwhelming majorities in favour of the resumption of work.

STRIKE COMMITTEE.

ADHERE TO DECISION.

The strike committee met to-day, when recriminations were freely exchanged. Mr. Orbell, London secretary of the Dockers' Union, stated: "We dare not adhere to Saturday's decision. The men will have our blood if we advise them to surrender."

The committee sat for three hours, and eventually reaffirmed Saturday's decision to declare the strike off, and later ordered a resumption of work under the old conditions. In cases where these conditions are unobtainable the men are to remain out, and the committee will deal with individual firms singly.

The committee foresees the possibility of prolonged guerilla warfare.

Mr. J. Ramsay MacDonald and other Labour members attended the meeting after the decision had been arrived at, and concurred in the course taken, promising at the same time to ventilate in the House of Commons any breach of agreement by the masters.

BIRKENHEAD STRIKE.

In consequence of the strike at Birkenhead thousands of ironworkers on the Manchester Ship Canal have been rendered idle.

STRIKE VIOLENCE.

RIOTS IN AMERICA.

PORT ARTHUR (Ontario), July 30.

Trouble suddenly developed between the police and loitering strikers at the C.P.R. coal docks yesterday, and in the melee that ensued several police were wounded, including the chief, whose injuries are so serious that he may die. Only two of the strikers were injured.

The Mayor, Mr. Roy, and the Crown Attorney, Mr. James, issued a request for militia, in order to keep the strikers in check, and the 96th regiment has been assembled for immediate duty.

A STRIKERS' VICTORY.

BOSTON RAILWAYMEN WIN.

BOSTON, July 30.

The strike of conductors and motormen on the Boston Elevated Railroad ended last night, after having lasted 53 days. The strikers won every point. The struggle cost 1,028,000 dollars (£205,600).

YOUTHFUL CRIMINALS.

A SHOCKING OUTRAGE.

MEMPHIS (Tenn.), July 29.

Mitchell Cabinets, aged 19, and Clarence Shaw, aged 19, have confessed to having murdered Robert M. Ellis.

The boys poured some whisky and petrol over E... while he was sleeping in Forest Park, and applied a match.

They say they intended to throw Ellis into a pond, but he died before the blaze could be extinguished.

BARRY WINS.

SCULLING CHAMPIONSHIP.

RACE DESCRIBED.

ARNST'S GREAT EFFORT.

LONDON, July 29.

Despite successive heavy showers, the river banks were thronged with the largest crowds of recent years to witness the race between Arnst and Barry for the sculling championship of the world.

Arnst appeared in a dark blue jersey, emblazoned with a frond of New Zealand fern, and Barry wore white with a Union Jack upon his breast.

The Englishman looked as slim as a girl compared with his great rugged rival, who was evidently by far the more powerful sculler.

Odds of 3 to 1 on the New Zealander were freely offered, though experts unfavourably commented on his boat, which was two feet longer than Barry's.

The wind was blowing moderately strong from the south-west, and the water was fairly good in the Putney reach.

Mr. Phelps, from a cutter, steered Arnst, and Mr. Tom Green officiated similarly for Barry.

Arnst, who won the toss, chose the Surrey side, because of the southerly wind, as that side of the river would be likely to give shelter at Chiswick.

The men got away at the first attempt. Arnst pulled a quicker and shorter stroke, showing rare power, and was soon clear of Barry.

The latter, going quietly with long, sweeping, telling strokes, was biding his time. He steered the better course.

Arnst was still leading at Craven Steps, which were passed in 2m 50s. Both men were then rowing 24 strokes to the minute.

The mile point was reached in 4m 56s. Barry was sculling beautifully, but Arnst was apparently taking over much out of himself.

Arnst shot under Hammersmith Bridge in 8m 30s, and then, when the rougher water was reached, Barry drew level, and a great race to Chiswick, each answering spurt with spurt. The New Zealander had smoother water, but Barry's wonderful watermanship stood him in good stead, and he gave a fine exhibition of sculling in rough water. He almost managed to hold his opponent, but the latter had the advantage of a length at Chiswick steps which were reached in 14m 3s.

The winning of the toss had given Arnst all the best of the water for three miles, but now was Barry's opportunity. With a fine effort he closed up to the champion, and, amid tremendous excitement, drew away as he shot for the northern shore. About Thorneycrofts he led by a third of a length, and in less than a minute he was clear of his opponent.

The Englishman gained rapidly when he got into the sheltered water under the Middlesex bank, and Arnst was labouring out in the open.

Barry was sculling easily, and in a very clean fashion, 24 strokes to the minute. He was two lengths ahead at Bull's Head, where Arnst drew in behind him to get the shelter of the shore.

Barry, with excellent judgment, husbanded his strength, but Arnst was dipping his left scull very deeply, and seemed thoroughly tired.

Barnes' Bridge was reached by Barry in 19m 23s, with Arnst 13s behind. The latter set his teeth, and pulled doggedly at 25 to the minute, but the effort proved too great, and he stopped, completely rowed out.

Barry paddled to the finishing point, which he passed in 23m 8s.

BARRY INTERVIEWED.

Barry, in an interview after the race, stated that, finding he held Arnst after the first mile had been passed, he had no doubt of his ability to win.

COMMENTS ON THE RACE.

ARNST'S PLUCK PRAISED.

The general opinion is that the result of the race represents the triumph of science over strength.

Barry always had the measure of his opponent, and his long, easy, clean stroke was victorious over Arnst's remarkable armwork.

The "Times" states:—"Arnst sculled well and most courageously. Barry's style was very near perfection, while Arnst's was most unattractive. He does not utilise his great power to the full extent, because he bends his arms and shoots his slide, though his blade work is good, giving him much pace. The features of the race were Barry's admirable judgment and Arnst's wonderful last spurt."

The "Standard" says:—"Every sympathy is felt for Arnst, who is a magnificent specimen of manhood and a good sportsman, with the heart of a lion. Probably no man alive could have made such a fight with such methods."

Guy Nickalls, who watched Arnst on the Zambesi, declares that he lost much by his ill-advised consenting to race before September, for, owing to his too sudden reduction in weight, he was far from being fit to race for the championship. He adds that Arnst did not make sufficient use of his sheltered station during the race.

"REALLY FINE, PLUCKY FELLOW."

A great crowd witnessed the presentation of the cup to Barry, together with a cheque of £1000, of which £500 is to be returned to the subscribers of his stake.

Barry, after acknowledging the presentation, called for cheers for Arnst, whom he described as a "real fine, plucky fellow."

SIR GEORGE REID'S PRAISE.

Sir George Reid, High Commissioner for Australia, congratulated Barry on his magnificent victory.

OARSMEN INTERVIEWED.

Several prominent oarsmen were interviewed after the race. Pearce expressed the opinion that there must have been something radically wrong with Arnst, or he would never have given up 800 yards from the winning post. He was ready to row Barry at once if he got the backing. George Towns was surprised at the result, but he recognised that Arnst was not up to his usual form. "Fit and well, I believe now that the Australian is easily the better man of the two," added Towns. Mr. Albert Ray, one of Arnst's backers, said that there would be no difficulty in raising money for a second race. The money would be forthcoming immediately for another race. He was confident, in consequence of a cable he had received from Arnst, that the ex-champion was not in his best form. The cable did not say so, but it omitted something, which gave him that impression.

ENGLAND'S MAIDEN VICTORY.

Although the world's sculling championship has been competed for during the past 36 years, in which 41 contests took place, Ernest Barry is the first Englishman to achieve success. Therefore the victory gained in the forty-second race must have given great pleasure to Englishmen. Barry's win was well merited, as, according to the cables, he outrowed and outstayed Arnst over the difficult Putney to Mortlake course. On the day, therefore, he proved himself the better man.

In the past the world's professional sculling championship has been looked upon as belonging almost solely to Australians. Edward Trickett won the title in 1876 on the Thames from J. H. Sadler, and since then, with the exception of two short periods—when Edward Hanlan stood out pre-eminently, from 1880 to 1884, and in 1896 and 1897, when Jacob Gaudaur held sway—scullers from the southern hemisphere have held the title. Hanlan and Gaudaur were Canadians.

MIKADO DEAD.

END OF PAINFUL ILLNESS.

THE NEW EMPEROR.

TOKIO, July 30.

The death of the Mikado was announced this morning.

Successive bulletins indicated the approach of death. The extremities became purple, and convulsions of the whole body were frequent, death following heart failure at 43 minutes past midnight, Tokio time.

The Empress was unremitting in her attendance on the patient throughout the illness.

CROWN PRINCE'S ACCESSION.

The Crown Prince's accession to the Throne was announced this morning.

MESSAGES OF SYMPATHY.

Numerous messages of sympathy and condolence were received by the Consul-General for Japan yesterday, the senders including the Lord Mayor, the Consuls of the various nations, ex-Senator Pulsford, and all the Japanese merchants in the city. The official announcement of the Mikado's death was cabled by Viscount Uchida (Minister for Foreign Affairs), reaching the Consulate about noon. All the Japanese business houses were closed on receipt of the news, and flags were flown at half-mast from the Town Hall, the various Consulates, and some of the public buildings.

THE LATE EMPEROR,
HIS IMPERIAL MAJESTY MUTSU-HITO.

THE NEW MIKADO,
HIS IMPERIAL HIGHNESS, YOSHI-HITO, CROWN PRINCE OF JAPAN.

REFERENCE IN PARLIAMENT.

LOYAL, GALLANT PEOPLE.

MELBOURNE, Tuesday.

In the House of Representatives to-day the Prime Minister stated that he had asked the Governor-General to despatch to the Japanese Government an expression of sympathy with the Japanese people in the loss sustained by the death of their beloved Mikado.

Mr. Deakin said he felt sure the Australian people would countersign the Government cablegram, and that the sincerest sympathy would be felt for the loyal, gifted, and gallant people who had sustained the loss of their ruler.

VICTORIA'S SYMPATHY.

MELBOURNE, Tuesday.

At the request of the Premier, the Lieutenant-Governor sent a cablegram to-day to the Secretary of State for the Colonies, asking him to convey to the Government and people of Japan the condolences of the Government and people of Victoria.

A GREAT REIGN.

UNPARALLELED IN HISTORY.

Sixty years ago, on a cold, snowy November night, the old palace of Kyoto, outwardly dark and quiet as the empire of which it was the symbolical centre, evinced within its fast-closed shoji an atmosphere of suppressed excitement and expectation. Early in the grey of the winter morning the news spread through the city that the ancient line of the Imperial House was the richer by an heir, who shortly received the name of Mutsuhito.

It is safe to assert that few, if any, human beings have been born to a more striking destiny than the child who was not long afterwards to become Emperor of Japan. Elisabeth of England and the present Emperor of Germany alone may be quoted as in some degree affording a parallel. Augustus, first Emperor of Rome, is said to have boasted that he found Rome a city of brick and left it a city of marble; the late Emperor of Japan acceded to the throne of a medieval country, where feudal nobles made private war and torture was in common use as an engine of justice or despotism, and in 40 years turned Japan into a first-rate modern Power so completely that it is becoming increasingly difficult, especially in the large seaport towns, to recognise any traces of the old order. He found himself at his accession called upon to play the part of a puppet Emperor, ostensibly all-powerful, but ruled in reality by the will of the Shogun; by 1868 he had risen to supreme power on the ruins of the Shogunate, and become de facto and not alone de jure the Autocrat of Japan, hedged about with a divinity which the Occidental mind finds it difficult to comprehend. And yet practically the first use which he made of his authority was to lay it aside, and of his own free will to adopt the attitude of a constitutional monarch.

RED-HAIRED BARBARIANS.

Facts such as these would of themselves stamp the character of any man. The circumstances, however, which surrounded the earlier years of the young Emperor make his career still more astonishing. Born in 1852, he was but one year old when the advent of Commander Perry's squadron to the Gulf of Yedo foreshadowed the invasion by Western influences and ideas which could no longer be stemmed. His father, the Emperor Komei Tenno, shared the popular hatred of the "red-haired barbarians," and strove with the fiercest animosity to eradicate every trace of their contact with Japanese soil, and the boyhood of Mutsuhito was passed amid an atmosphere of attempted assassination, occasional murder, and at times even open warfare upon the persons and the ships of the foreigners, despite the concessions granted by the Shogunate in the treaty of 1854. So strong became the feeling that at his coronation at Osaka in 1868 the young Mikado seized the opportunity to place himself at the head of a movement against the Shogunate itself. The plan was crowned with complete success; the reigning Shogun quietly resigned, and his recalcitrant followers were utterly crushed after a brief struggle.

But the Emperor was aiming at other and wider ends than those of his supporters; and to the surprise and disgust of many of the revolutionaries, who had wished merely to restore the country to its state of insularity and absolutism, he abruptly declared himself in full sympathy with the daimios of Satsuma and Choshu, who were in favour of opening Japan to foreign intercourse, and of introducing various and far-reaching reforms. Of his own accord he invited the foreign representatives to an audience on March 23, 1868, transferred the capital to Tokio, and in conjunction with his Ministers began to pave the way to a constitutional monarchy on European lines.

FEUDALISM ABOLISHED.

For such a purpose a free hand was absolutely necessary, and this was gained by the patriotism of the daimios or feudal nobles, who freely surrendered their privileges and estates to their sovereign, thus at one stroke snapping the chains of feudalism which had for so many centuries impeded all progress in Japan.

In 1869 the Emperor took a solemn oath to institute a number of reforms, the first of which was the establishment of a deliberative assembly, and, according to a competent authority, "There can be no doubt that the success of legislative government in Japan has been in large measure due to the wise and firm, but gracious, conduct of the Emperor himself." An extraordinary vogue for the manners and customs of the West set in with increasing vehemence.

Torture was abolished in 1873; a judicial code was authorised; railways were opened; the European calendar adopted; English introduced into the curriculum of the common schools; and everywhere was evident the guiding hand of Mutsuhito. Amid all these reforms he had to crush three serious rebellions in the provinces, between 1876 and 1884, to inflict a check upon China in 1874, and after prolonged negotiations to conclude a revised and far more satisfactory treaty with Great Britain in 1894. In the same year the war with China, long simmering, broke out at last. The overwhelming victory of Japan opened the eyes alike of Europe and of Japan to the astounding progress the latter had made under the auspices of Mutsuhito. How vast that progress really was the world realised later, and with something of a shock, during the Russo-Japanese War of 1904-5.

Save that he married in 1868 the Princess Haruko, and has had many children, of whom Yoshihito Harunomiya will succeed to the throne, practically nothing of the private life of the late Emperor was ever known to the outside world. He moved in an atmosphere of semi-divinity, which made approach difficult, and to the average European impossible, and which invested his private actions with a sanctity which, to a Japanese, it would be almost impious to violate by revealing. Those few foreigners who have had opportunities of judging have borne witness to his unfailing courtesy, consideration, and wisdom, and his magnificent donation to the Sai-sei-kai last year is only one instance of his sympathy for his poorer subjects. Curiously enough, the title of "Mikado" by which he is so widely known, is seldom used in Japan, that of "Tenno" being substituted. The word Mikado signifies literally "Honourable Entrance," and as an Imperial title may aptly be compared with those of "Pharaoh" and "Sublime Porte."

THE NEW MIKADO.

H.I.H. Prince Yoshihito, who succeeds his late father as Emperor of Japan, is the 122nd Emperor in direct descent from Jimmu Tenno, who founded the dynasty in 660 B.C. He was the third son of the late Emperor, and was born on August 31, 1879, when the Europeanisation of his country was rapidly progressing, and is thus thoroughly acquainted with western ideas. He is said to be of a genial and courteous nature, but up to the present his life has been, on the whole, somewhat devoid of incident. He was proclaimed Heir Apparent in 1887, and elected Crown Prince two years later. On May 10, 1900, he married Princess Sadako, a daughter of the late Prince Kujo. He was appointed a Major-general in the army and a Rear-Admiral in the navy in 1905, and received the order of the 3rd class Golden Kite. He has three sons, Hirohito, known as Michi no Miya, or Prince Michi; Yasuhito, known as Yasu no Miya, or Prince Yasu; and Nobuhito, known as Teru no Miya, or Prince Teru. It may be added that his Imperial Highness himself is usually designated Haru no Miya or Prince Haru.

GLIMPSES AT THE MIKADO.

BY AN AUSTRALIAN.

In October, 1903, just before the Japanese-Russian war, some travellers from Australia arrived in Kobe, Japan. The troops from Shikoku, the most easterly island of the Japanese group, were landing to take part in the manoeuvres at Himeji, near Kobe. The air was full of rumours of war; and it was said in Japan at this time that these manoeuvres were in anticipation of an invasion of Corea, or to repel an expected invasion from Siberia, via Dalny (Port Arthur). Forty thousand Shikokans marched to Himeji, about 22 miles from Kobe, where the military operations were proceeding.

The rumour further said that the Mikado was coming to take command of the operations, in anticipation of his commanding in the field if necessary. The railway from Tokio, where the Imperial residence is, to Kobe, was lined with police and gendarmes, who stood within signalling distance of each other. The dwellings within visual distance of the imperial train had their shutters closed, as no subject is permitted to overlook the Mikado. There is a special divinity that doth hedge a Mikado; for, like the "Divus Julius" Caesar, he is supposed to have had a celestial parentage, and to trace his descent direct for 25 centuries, and having also a number of relations in the constellation and stellar groups. So, guarded over every half-mile of the 500, the Mikado's special passed to Kobe.

At Himeji the manoeuvres were proceeding over a large territory. The arrival of the Mikado at each station on the route from Tokio to Kobe was the signal for the trooping of the school children at the roadside, and these prostrated themselves as the special swept past. The soldiers received the Mikado with transports of joy. A rickshaw from Kobe, with guides and a relief coolie, took us out in four hours. The roads were bad and the country much trampled, as if in actual warfare, from the passing of light and heavy artillery, the horses of the officers, and the cavalry. Doubtless there were cavalry, though we did not see them in the manoeuvres. Without directly interfering with our freedom, we were, nevertheless, manoeuvred away from the field movements, which, in any case, we did not understand; and, indeed, could not realise, as they were extended over so large an extent of territory.

A TIRED APPEARANCE.

But we saw the Mikado one day when, surrounded by his staff, he was presented with a basket of "snapping turtles" by his officers, and, as a reward for the excellence of the tactics, he presented some of the troops with £20 (200 yen). With him was Kodama, who was said by the guide to be the supreme tactician of the Japanese army, a small, wizened man, with an inscrutable Japanese face. The Mikado was then about 50 years of age, a very short, heavy-bodied man, with small legs. He wore a general's uniform, with a peaked cap. My impression of him is of a tired and extremely sleepy-looking man of the best cast of countenance of the Japanese type.

At this time the Taira Doshi Kwai ((War-with-Russia Society), was extremely active, and had a press throughout Japan which thundered constantly for war, clamouring that the Russian menace should be removed before it swallowed Japan up. The situation was something like that of England and Germany to-day. Russia was fortifying at Port Arthur; she had her spur of the Chinese-Eastern Railway running down to Dalny, and she was increasing her fleet as quickly as she could. The war correspondents had just begun to arrive in Tokio; and in all the East there was the thrill which precedes Armageddon.

In Tokio everything appeared peaceful when we got there. The Imperial palace, surrounded by its picturesque moat, approached by the beautiful modern bridge, which has probably superseded the mediaeval drawbridge and portcullis, was again inhabited by the Mikado. One day we saw a crowd of people running towards the bridge from the surrounding open space, which is one of the biggest parks in Tokio. We hastened with the others, and arrived in time to see the guard salute, and the Mikado drive out in an open carriage. Again Kodama was with him. There were cheers, which were acknowledged by a slow inclination of the head and a very charming smile. It was at this spot some weeks later that the Imperial carriage was stopped by a deputation of the Taira Doshi Kwai, who attempted to present a petition to Mutsuhito, demanding a war with Russia. At this outrage all Japan was shocked. The miscreants were clubbed by the police, and their papers summarily quieted. The worst of them, which had been hinting even then, at the assassination of the Marquis Ito, the grand old man of Japan, were suppressed.

A POPULAR RULER.

On a later occasion, when a royal special train was again progressing through Japan with the same precautions, the train in which tourists were proceeding was shunted at a small station to allow the special to pass. In spite of the shutters of the train being scrupulously closed, we managed to get a glimpse into the royal carriages; of which there were about four. Their windows were thrown up; and we saw that the interior of the cars had no seats, tables, or chairs; as is the fashion in the Japanese houses—for the Japanese, like many other Eastern people, are a squatting people, and though they do not, in their homes, squat on their haunches, as the Chinese and the Indians do, they sit cross-legged tailor wise on cushions on the floor. This they do, even in the trains in Japan. The Mikado was observed in the cushioned carriage in the popular attitude of his subjects; and if it be not lese majeste to say it, his attitude can only be described as squatting, while he smoked cigarettes with great rapidity.

No sovereign in Europe was ever as popular as the Mikado in Japan. The shops were filled with attempted modern and really atrocious prints of the monarch surrounded by his family, he always in military uniform, and they in European dress. There were photographs in the temples. He was spoken of with awe and veneration. From a quiet priestly life he was called to play the part of an absolute sovereign in a country ambitious of a military reputation—a country which had emerged in a few years from a stage of evolution which had reached that of our middle ages.

SIXTH TEST.

AUSTRALIA v. ENGLAND.

WET WICKET.

HOME TEAM BATTING.

MANCHESTER, July 29.

Play in the test match was commenced at a quarter to 3 o'clock. The weather was boisterous, and the wicket was very soft.

The attendance numbered 5000.

The teams are as follow:—

Australia: S. E. Gregory (capt.), C. B. Jennings, C. G. Macartney, W. Bardsley, C. Kelleway, S. H. Emery, W. J. Whitty, W. Carkeek, T. J. Matthews, G. R. Hazlitt, and E. R. Mayne.

England: C. B. Fry (capt.), R. H. Spooner, F. R. Foster, E. J. Smith, J. B. Hobbs, J. W. Hitch, W. Rhodes, S. Haigh, F. E. Woolley, J. W. Hearne, and S. F. Barnes.

Fry again won the toss and decided to bat.

Hobbs and Rhodes opened the innings, being opposed to Hazlitt and Whitty.

Sawdust was requisitioned, and only eight runs were scored in the first six overs, the fielding being smart.

At the end of 25 minutes' play, however, 20 runs were on the board.

When the total had reached 37, of which Hobbs had made 19, the Surrey batsman was bowled with a break-back by Whitty. He had played skilful cricket. Rhodes was then 12, but he was uneasy and mistimed the bowling. Before he had scored he gave a chance at point to Hazlitt off Whitty. One for 37.

Spooner joined Rhodes, but in the next over, when he had only made a single, he played Whitty on to his wicket. Rhodes was then 13, and two wickets were down for 39.

Macartney left the field and M'Laren went out as substitute.

Fry was the next batsman, and made 2 in 20 minutes, which, together with a leg-bye, brought up the half-century in 65 minutes.

The batsmen could do nothing with Whitty and only small hits were made off Hazlitt, but Kelleway relieved the Cumberland bowler when 60 runs had been scored.

Fry went to eight with a four, but he was nearly caught at short-leg by Whitty off Kelleway's first ball.

Rhodes, whose batting had improved, had compiled 27 when the total had reached 68.

Matthews relieved Whitty at 72. By getting Kelleway away for two fours in one over Fry reached double figures, after being at the wickets 50 minutes. At 83, however, he was caught at long-off by M'Laren (substitute) off Matthews. Fry had scored 19. Three for 83.

Rhodes, who was now 31, was joined by J. W. Hearne, who, after scoring one, was badly missed in the next over at mid-on by Whitty off Matthews.

THE FIRST CENTURY.

Hazlitt relieved Kelleway at 89. The first century appeared after 2 hours 5 minutes' batting. Rhodes reached 53 in 130 minutes, and was batting more freely.

Emery relieved Matthews at 110. When Rhodes was 58 he was nearly run out on two occasions, Bardsley and Matthews returning the ball.

The total was raised to 140; then Hazlitt yorked Hearne, who was batting 50 minutes for 9, made out of 57 whilst he was in. Four for 140.

Rhodes had increased his score to 76. His batting was now more enterprising, and he was late-cutting well.

With Woolley in, 150 appeared after 2 hours 45 minutes' play. Four runs later Whitty relieved Emery, and the change at once proved successful, as Kelleway caught Woolley at fine-leg off the left-hander at 155. Woolley made 13, and the record at his dismissal was five for 155.

Foster joined Rhodes, and at 173 Matthews relieved Whitty. After making 13 the Warwickshire captain was caught and bowled off a skier by Matthews. Before he had scored he was nearly caught at mid-on by Whitty off Hazlitt.

Rhodes, who had scored 88, and was playing cautiously, was joined by Smith, but after the Yorkshireman had added four runs stumps were drawn, the total being 185 for six wickets.

RHODES 92 NOT OUT.

Rhodes finished with 92 not out. He played an admirable innings of 3 hours 40 minutes' duration. The only blemish was the chance he gave at point to Hazlitt off Whitty before he had scored.

During the day 4407 persons paid for admission to the ground.

Macartney is suffering from a chill.

THE SECOND DAY.

RAIN INTERVENES.

MANCHESTER, July 30.

Rain fell during the night and again this morning, and the prospects of any play to-day seem slight.

4.45 p.m.

The sun is now shining, though the weather is still boisterous, and it has been decided to commence play at 5 o'clock.

THE SOUTH AFRICANS.

MINOR COUNTIES MATCH.

LONDON, July 30.

Owing to rain the opening of play has been delayed in connection with the match South Africa v Minor Counties.

BELFAST POSITION.

HOME RULE AND THE WORKERS.

3000 MEN IDLE.

LONDON, July 30.

Nearly 3000 men have now been thrown out of work at Harland and Wolff's shipbuilding yards, Belfast, in consequence of the closing of certain sections, because of the assaults on Nationalist workers.

The "Daily News" states that a large Belfast firm has dismissed all the Roman Catholics in their employ, numbering 30, in retaliation for the action of Messrs. Harland and Wolff in dismissing Orangemen from their works.

Mr. J. Devlin, M.P., in sending £50 for the relief of the Nationalist workers compulsorily idled at Belfast, attributes the situation to "anti-Home Rule incitements to violence and appeals to the worst passions of bigotry."

In the House of Common last night, Mr. A. Birrell, Chief Secretary for Ireland, in reply to a question from Mr. Devlin, promised to make a statement regarding the measures taken to protect freedom of labour in Belfast.

MIXED MARRIAGES.

CANADIAN LEGISLATION.

PRIVY COUNCIL DECISION.

LONDON, July 30.

The Privy Council has decided that the Dominion Bill, legalising all Canadian marriages performed by clergymen authorised to solemnise marriage under the laws of the province, is ultra vires.

The contention of the Quebec Government—that such a Federal bill was not applicable to that province, inasmuch as the marriage laws were exclusively under provincial jurisdiction—has thus been sustained.

TITANIC DISASTER.

LORD MERSEY'S FINDINGS.

DUE TO EXCESSIVE SPEED.

LONDON, July 30.

Lord Mersey's report in regard to the loss of the Titanic has just been issued.

In it he states that the disaster was due to excessive speed.

The boat arrangements, the report states, were improper and insufficient.

Captain Smith, of the Titanic, was grievously mistaken, but not negligent.

There was no moral duty on Mr. Bruce Ismay to await the sinking of the vessel.

The report concludes that the steamer Californian saw the lights of the Titanic, and could have saved many of those on the sinking steamer had an effort been made.

THE ICE TERROR.

STEAMER STRIKES BERG.

FORE-COMPARTMENTS PIERCED.

ST. JOHN'S (Newfoundland), July 29.

The steamer Manchester Inventor (4217 tons), owned by the Manchester Liners, Ltd., bound from Montreal to Manchester, arrived here to-day in a badly damaged condition.

It appears that she collided with a submerged iceberg during a dense fog on July 24, and, as a consequence, her fore-compartments were pierced, and her frame was racked.

All her deck cargo had to be jettisoned to allow the vessel to reach port.

DOMINIONS AND EMPIRE.

DANGER OF CLOSER UNION.

SIR GEORGE REID'S VIEW.

LONDON, July 30.

Sir George Reid, High Commissioner for Australia, in an interview in regard to Imperial defence yesterday, stated:—

"The call of the sea is in the blood, and all the Dominions would do well to respond thereto. Larger sacrifices are more likely that way than by cash contributions. But each self-governing Dominion must be left free to make its own response."

Referring to the co-ordination of the Empire's efforts, he remarked:—"During my life visions of a really Imperial Parliament, with a truly Imperial executive, have crossed my imagination, but a calm investigation of facts has led me to only two practical results—first, unbounded wonder that an Imperial system so loose and disjointed should work so marvellously; and, second, the stubborn fear that closer bonds might lead to greater friction. For as things are the Dominions can, whenever they chose, take a share in the Imperial Councils more powerful, perhaps, than any they would be entitled to in an Imperial Parliament founded on a basis of population.

ARCTIC HARDSHIPS.

RESCUE OF MIKKELSEN.

A COMPANION'S DEVOTION.

COPENHAGEN, July 29.

The captain of the Sjoeblomsten, the vessel which rescued Captain Mikkelsen, the Arctic explorer and his companion Iversen (not Sversen, as originally cabled), says that when he reached Bass Rock Island, he noticed a wooden post inscribed "1912." He followed the direction it indicated and reached a hut. He knocked at the door, and Captain Mikkelsen and his companion emerged, nearly naked, carrying guns.

Captain Mikkelsen had been previously ill, and Iversen had dragged him on a sledge 100 miles.

They had an ample supply of ammunition, and were always able to procure food.

PANAMA CANAL.

BRITAIN'S PROTEST.

DEBATE IN THE SENATE.

WASHINGTON, July 30.

The right of Britain to participate in an understanding for the control of the Panama Canal was denied in the Senate yesterday by two advocates of the bill giving American coastwise shipping preference in the matter of canal tolls.

Senators Bradley and Massey contended that the United States had treaty rights to regulate the affairs of the canal, and that the purchase of the canal zone had removed it from international control.

Senator M'Gumber claimed that if the canal were closed against foreign warships in war time all the Powers would become enemies of the United States, and the surreptitious bombardment of the canal would take place.

AMERICAN CORRUPTION.

MURDER OF ROSENTHAL.

POLICE OFFICER ARRESTED.

NEW YORK, July 30.

Police-Lieutenant Charles Becker, who was named by Rosenthal as his silent partner in connection with his gambling house, has been arrested on a charge of extortion.

Later.

Becker has been charged with murder, in the first degree, of Rosenthal.

He pleads not guilty.

TO ELECT A SPEAKER.

PROPOSED STANDING ORDER.

In the Legislative Assembly yesterday the Attorney-General gave notice of his intention to move for the enactment of a new Standing Order governing the election of Speaker.

The new Standing Order to be submitted to the House will provide for the gag being applied to any individual member of the House at any period of his speech.

Debate on motions for the election of Speaker will be controlled by the Clerk of the House, as heretofore.

It is to be provided that the "question" may be put after twelve members have spoken, thus shortening the process of electing a Speaker, and rendering impossible, the Attorney-General hopes, protracted debates.

The proposed rule governing the application of the gag is that at least 30 members must vote for it, and that there must of course be a majority of the House in favour of it.

SHED HANDS STRIKE.

WANT BUTTER FOR MEALS.

BROKEN HILL, Tuesday.

A peculiar dispute has arisen on Corona station, where shearing is now in progress. The shed hands have struck work, because the rations supplied do not include butter. The shearers' hut is provided with butter, and the shed hands consider that they should also be provided with it.

RACEHORSE FALLS.

JOCKEY BADLY HURT.

MELBOURNE, Tuesday.

Whilst being schooled over the fences at Moonee Valley to-day, Quiiatchil fell, and his rider (R. Koops) was badly injured. His jaw was fractured, his lip badly lacerated, and he also sustained a shock.

GENEROUS DONORS.

WELLINGTON (N.Z.), Tuesday.

A Nelson lady has given £6000 towards the endowment of the Nelson Bishopric. A Nelson gentleman has given £2000 towards providing stone approach steps to Nelson Cathedral.

MOUNTAIN OF COPPER

A GREAT FIND.

LOST HORSES LEAD TO DISCOVERY.

BIG BLOW AND RICH CAVES.

BRISBANE, Tuesday.

In connection with the recent reported discovery of what is termed a mountain of copper, a party has recently visited the locality. After travelling 18 miles from Cloncurry, a halt was made. After proceeding a distance of about 18 miles up a blind gully, the mouth of an extensive gorge, formed by a large desert rock formation, standing fully 250ft above the level of the watercourse, was reached. The western side of the formation stands about 200ft above the gully. This formation is composed of various kinds of black rocks.

At a distance of 150 yards from the gorge entrance the first sign of copper catches the eye, in the shape of a great blow of copper-stained ore. The stain is 3ft by 3ft.

Ascending the western hills for a distance of 100ft, the bottom portion of a huge copper outcrop was reached. It takes the form of a large knob of ferruginous ore situated between two ranges. Its width at the bottom is 132ft, and across the centre 127ft, while at the extreme top, or cap, the width is 98ft. From the spot where the outcrop first appears, at the bottom, to the top of the cap is a distance of 88ft.

THE THREE CAVES.

There are three caves showing in the outcrop. No. 1 cave is 9ft wide at the entrance, at the centre 13ft, and the height 7ft 2in. This cavity is very picturesque, showing large copper stains all through the roof, while the floor shows large deposits of copper. At a distance of 19ft to the north another cave occurs, the aperture being in length 16ft, height 3ft 3in, and width 5ft 6in. This cave is also very richly impregnated with copper, stains going up the outcrop for some 19ft.

No. 3 cave is next seen. Its length is 19ft, height 5ft 6in, and width the same. This cave is carrying a large body of oxidised ore, and the copper stain seems to disappear as the formation from this point goes up to the top of the outcrop.

33 PER CENT.

The cap is carrying copper ore to the value of 33 per cent., 5dwt 13gr of gold, and 2oz of silver. Further towards the saddle of the range another big bluff occurs. This blow would at present appear to be the richest spot yet opened up.

Taking the outcrop generally, it is said that a general assay gives a return of 30 per cent. copper from the whole of his huge blow. If these assays can be relied upon, the find should become one of the biggest propositions yet discovered in the Cloncurry district.

It would be extremely difficult to find a more promising lease. It has been said times out of number that the discoverer of Mount Elliott, which was then known as Green Gap—the late Mr. Elliott—had stated he knew of a richer blow than Green Gap (Mount Elliott); but Mr Elliott passed away without divulging its whereabouts. It is thought that this new find is the one mentioned by him.

DISCOVERER'S STORY.

It seems extraordinary that this outcrop has not been "placed" before now. Asked how he discovered the outcrop, Mr. Smith, one of the finders, replied: "I had just come over from Winton in April, 1908, and had camped 12 miles from the Cloncurry township on the railway line. The following morning I had lost three of my horses, and thinking that they would make their way back towards Winton, I went in that direction in search of them. After travelling 10 miles south I came across horse tracks, which I followed. These led me into the gorge. Shortly after I had picked up the tracks my eye caught sight of a great green-stained stone. I dismounted, and looked the outcrop over. Early this year I persuaded Charles, my mate, to have a look at the outcrop, and we then pegged it out."

The owners, Messrs. Smith and Charles, of Cloncurry, intend putting in a tunnel right from No. 2 cave, and work is to be commenced right away.

FACTORY FIRE.

£20,000 DAMAGE.

LOCKUP GATE IGNITES.

MELBOURNE, Tuesday.

A fire occurred shortly before 4 o'clock this morning in the sash factory of J. Stone, Napier-street, Fitzroy. The premises and stock were practically destroyed. Both were insured for a total sum of £12,000 in the Victoria Insurance Company.

The origin of the fire is not known. The outbreak was discovered by James Bassenhassett, night-watchman. The fire was then near a boiler, and he applied the hose, but practically no water was obtainable. The sprinklers commenced working, and in a few minutes there was a sudden blaze in all parts of the yard. The watchman was nearly suffocated, and escaped with difficulty. The yard was well alight when the brigade arrived.

The yard comprises a block of nearly an acre and a quarter, bounded by Napier, Charles, Young, and Condell streets. The buildings in several of the streets opposite were scorched by the heat, and a telegraph pole caught alight. The gate of the Fitzroy watchhouse in the Town Hall building, Condell-street, ignited with the intense heat. The prisoners were taken from their cells, and placed in the corridor to facilitate their escape if the fire was not subdued. All the windows in the Town Hall facing Condell-street were shattered, and some beds in the top story, occupied by the constables, caught alight. One of a row of three dwellings facing Condell-street, built on the timber yard area, and also owned by Mr. Stone, was broken in, through a brick wall falling through the roof.

It is estimated that the loss is upwards of £20,000. The fire is still burning, but is thoroughly under control. The business was established in 1858 by John Stone, and is now carried on by G. and W. Stone.

SHEEP-STEALING.

TRACES OF SHEARING AND DROVING.

A MOB OF 5000.

MELBOURNE, Tuesday.

A month ago William and Donald McMillan, well known graziers of Broughton, missed 5000 sheep, when mustering on their mallee property, north of Broughton. They found traces of sheep having been yarded in the mallee block, and the tracks of sheep that had been driven away. The police were informed, and black-trackers picked up the tracks of the sheep that had been driven in a mob through the fence on the 36th parallel, the wire of which was lowered to the ground. They also discovered the tracks of the drovers waggonette at a disused woolshed in the mallee, and also traces where the sheep had been shorn for some years past, and the marks of a camp. They followed the tracks of the caravan and the mob of sheep towards Lake Albacutya, but the marks were indistinct, on account of heavy rains. It is supposed that the men who had stolen the sheep were warned; but it is hoped to trace the sheep to the saleyards, in Victoria or some other State. The McMillans and other graziers had been losing sheep for the past four years, and it was thought they had strayed away. It is believed that large robberies of sheep have been going on in Broughton and Kaniva districts.

THE GREAT HENLEY.

TWO RACES.

DEFEAT OF CANADA AND NEW COLLEGE.

(FROM OUR SPECIAL REPRESENTATIVE.)

(BY WIRE FROM FREMANTLE.)

HENLEY, July 5.

Yesterday the Australian crew, racing for their first time in history on the famous Henley course, beat the Canadians. To-day we have just watched them beat New College. To-morrow, in the presence of the King and Queen and the biggest gathering that Henley has ever seen, they are to meet Leander in the finals.

Before leaving their old training quarters at Bourne End, which, by the bye, is one of the prettiest parts of the famous Thames, the Australian crew had been visited by many of the best of judges and critics of rowing in England, amongst them Lord Desborough, A. Wedgate, R. C. Lesmann, Guy Nickalls, besides George Upward, Q. L. Deloitte, and many others. The impressions which the English judges entertained of the crew were not altogether favourable. They admired them for their fine physique, and also their neatness, but their comparatively short swing was not altogether appreciated. When the crew finally rowed their boat up the 12 miles from Bourne End to Henley their appearance on the first afternoon there created much comment. Henley was full by this time of enthusiastic oarsmen, and many of them were quite puzzled by the Australian style. Some of those who did not admire our style described it as "toy-like," and our short oars were described as "tooth-picks."

The crew made a fine picture as they paddled down the course in the blue jerseys of the Sydney Rowing Club. The eyes of all the critics were upon them, and many were perplexed. One great authority gave it as his opinion "that to win the Grand with the Australian style, the crew would have to row over all the course at the rate of 40 strokes to the minute." Unfortunately, when the heats were drawn on Saturday the two colonial crews were drawn in the same heat, which meant that one of them must be knocked out of the running, and have no chance of meeting an English crew. There had been some unfavourable comment in England on the methods of drawing which allows this to occur, and probably they will arrange another year so that all colonial crews shall meet an English crew in the first heat.

We thought from the beginning that we had a good chance of beating the Toronto Argonauts. In trials we always recorded faster times. Last Saturday the Australians rowed the course in 7 minutes 7 seconds, which was considered here to be a very fair time. It is not expected that the record time of 6 minutes 51 seconds can possibly be lowered, because at present the river is very full of water, and so the weirs on it are open and a current flowing. At times when the river is low and the weirs shut there is practically no current, and swifter times are possible.

THE RACE AGAINST CANADA.

Our first race for the Grand took place on the second afternoon of the regatta. We had the Berks. side and Canada the Bucks. side. Local people consider that the Bucks. side gives a slight advantage, when the wind blows up stream, as it did that day, because the stream boathouses on that side give some shelter. The start was exactly punctual. It was an anxious few moments just before. Sydney waited with their light blue colours, with the Canadians in light blue and dark blue stripes beside them. The Canadians were much admired as they rowed to the start—four of their men had been to England and rowed in this race before. The two crews were lined up to moored punts. Behind them was the umpire's launch, carrying besides the officials, Sir George Reid, Sir John McCall, W. J. Middleton, C. L. Cunningham, and several others. The starter called, "Are you ready?" and then came the word "Go."

Both crews struck the water together, but if anything Sydney had the better start. The Argonauts started with forty-six strokes to the minute. Sydney kept for the first half-minute at forty, and then dropped to thirty-eight or thirty-six. At this point, the end of the first half-minute, Sydney had a slight lead; but the Argonauts kept up their high rate of stroke, and after the quarter mile they led the Sydney crew by about half a length. Sydney, finding they were getting behind, spurted and gradually caught up. At three-quarters of a mile they were nearly level. At half-way they led by a quarter of a length. They gradually increased their lead, and won by one and a quarter length in 7 minutes 7 seconds.

In this race against Canada, which created intense excitement amongst the spectators, the Australians were stretched up to half way, but they were really not greatly stretched after that. The stroke, on being interviewed after the race, said: "At the three-quarter mile I knew the race was in our holding, and I only wanted to get just the necessary amount of pace out of the men."

The Sydney men maintained a splendid swing throughout the race, and had their blades in and out of the water as one man. Canada, on the other hand, have changed their style since their last visit, and adopted what seems to be an attempt to combine the short Belgium stroke with the long Oxford stroke, and a good many of the best points in both have evidently been missed.

If more closely pressed the Australians could have improved the time by some seconds. They were never in the Canadians' wash, and had a fair row all the way. At the finish the Sydney crew paddled alongside their opponents, and gave three hearty cheers, which were answered by the Canadians. This is a new proceeding for Henley, and the spectators showed themselves pleased by it, and the crew showed pleasure in applauding the race with New College.

THE SECOND RACE.

To-day, in the semi-final, Australia has had to meet New College, Oxford. This crew, which is stroked by the Oxford 'Varsity stroke, Bourne, and contains three other blues, is going to Sweden to race in the Olympic games. Curiously enough in the New College crew as it rowed against us to-day there were three Australians, Burkenden, Littlejohn, and Ward. The two crews have been exceedingly friendly all through, and as they waited for the start they chatted as the best of friends.

New College had drawn a bye in the first heat, and so this was the first race they had. The race was in the morning, which did not allow the Sydney men much time after their hard row of the previous day.

The start, as before, was exactly punctual. Sydney this time had any advantage that there might be on the course obtaining. Both crews struck almost together, Sydney, if anything, making the best start. Sydney started at about 38, and so soon settled down to a nice long swing. At the first post Sydney led by a quarter of a length, rowing comfortably, with good style and swing and even blades. At the half-mile they had increased to half a length, and from here it was seen they had the race pretty well in hand. They kept their form, rowing well within themselves, and finished one and a quarter lengths ahead in 7m 18s. The time was rather slower than yesterday, but it was on the whole an easier race, and Sydney wanted to keep all possible energy for the final to-morrow.

THE DIAMOND SCULLS DASH.

M'VILLY'S DEFEAT.

The race for the Diamond is very simply told. M'Villy (Tas.) was unfortunate in being drawn against the strongest sculler, M'Culloch, in the first heat. M'Culloch has been partly trained by Arnst, who thinks a good deal of him. M'Villy's idea was to go away very fast at the start, and try and break M'Culloch over the first part. Accordingly he started at 40 to the minute, and led M'Culloch by a length in the early part of the race. M'Culloch, however, refused to be flustered, and, sculling along at even stroke, he quickly held M'Villy. As soon as the Tasmanian saw that M'Culloch, although rowing a much slower stroke, was going the same pace as he, the race was practically over. M'Villy was so intent on watching his rival that he steered a very bad course, and at one point he pulled into M'Culloch's water so much that a foul would have resulted had not M'Culloch slightly slackened. M'Culloch said afterwards that he knew he had the race in hand at this point, and so he could afford to slacken and avoid M'Villy. He shortly afterwards passed M'Villy, and finished easily. A muscle in M'Villy's right arm was giving him trouble, and during the whole race he had to be fighting it in order to keep him from continually veering in towards his opponent.

Notwithstanding that the space in the umpire's launch is very limited, the authorities invited the whole of the Australian crew to follow M'Villy's race in it, and this compliment was much appreciated. The Australian crew have also been elected to the Leander Club.

VICTORIAN MINERS' STRIKE.

MELBOURNE, Tuesday.

The general feeling in the district is that the strike of miners at Daylesford will be soon settled. North Nuggety Ajax Company resumed work to-day, having conceded the men's demands pending the directors' meeting a fortnight hence.

COLLAPSE OF A PIER.

GREAT LOSS OF LIFE.

DISASTER IN GERMANY.

BERLIN, July 29.

Further details regarding the collapse of a portion of the pier at Ruegen while crowded with holiday-makers show that the people were watching the battleship fleet. They made a rush towards an incoming steamer, and this caused a landing stage at the end of the pier to collapse, 120 being precipitated into the water.

A number of bluejackets and officers jumped into the sea and rescued many.

Twenty-one bodies have been recovered, but it is feared that there are others among the submerged ruins of the landing stage.

RUBBER SCANDALS.

PERUVIAN GOVERNMENT ACTION.

LIMA, July 30.

The President, in a message to Congress, has announced that the Government has sent a commission to investigate the outrages on natives in connection with the Putumayo rubber industry, to punish the offenders, and to prepare a scheme of reforms.

MEXICAN REBELLION.

FLIGHT OF AMERICANS.

EL PASO (Texas), July 30.

Six hundred American women and children have reached here by special train from the Mormon colony in the Casas Grandes district, Mexico, and the train has returned for more.

Over 3650 Mormons are reported to be in grave danger.

The Mormon leader says that the rebels are drinking heavily, and are threatening the Americans.

MEDICAL ASSOCIATION.

CONSTITUTION FOR AUSTRALIA.

LONDON, July 30.

The British Medical Association has agreed to grant Australia a constitution similar to that granted to South Africa, which will secure for the Australian doctors all the reforms required.

Dr. J. W. Barrett (Melb.), speaking before the Ophthalmic section of the Medical Congress yesterday, explained the methods of testing vision adopted by the Marine Board of Victoria, and these attracted great interest.

FRENCH CHARITY TAX.

REVENUE FROM GAMBLING CASINOS.

PARIS, July 29.

A charity tax of 15 per cent. imposed on small public gambling casinos in watering places yielded a revenue of £290,000 last year.

BOXING CHAMPIONSHIP.

JOHNSON RETIRES.

CHICAGO, July 30.

Jack Johnson has announced that he has finished boxing, as the promoters will not give him the price he wants.

He has not retired in favour of anyone.

Johnson says he is worth 200,000 dollars (£40,000), the greater part of which is invested. He says nearly all this money has been made since he boxed Burns in Sydney.

ENGLISH SWIMMING.

MISS FANNY DURACK'S SUCCESS.

LONDON, July 30.

At the swimming carnival which is being held in Manchester Miss Fanny Durack, of Sydney, won the 100yds invitation ladies' scratch race in 1m 11 4-5s, which is a British ladies' record.

The previous record, 1m 13 3-5s, was held by Miss I. Steer and Miss J. Fletcher.

GENERAL CABLE NEWS.

LONDON, July 30.

The Australian cadets have arrived. All are in good health.

Following upon the representations of Dr. J. W. Barrett (Melbourne), Professor H. D. Naylor (Adelaide), and Mr. H. E. Barff (Sydney), the Orient and the Peninsular and Oriental Companies have agreed to reduce by 10 per cent. the price of return passages for professors exchanging between British and Australian universities, and by 15 per cent. the price of single fares.

During the manoeuvres at East Marted yesterday, 40 Territorials were sheltering behind a wall, when lightning struck a tree near by. The discharge threw all the men to the ground, tore their bayonets from their scabbards, and smashed several of their rifles. One man was killed and several others had to be admitted to hospital.

Jack Donaldson (Victoria) defeated Charles E. Holway (America) in a race for the world's 130 yards championship, £100 a side and a purse of £125, at Manchester yesterday. Donaldson's time was 14 secs. Holway, who was not well, retired at 60 yards.

MANASSES (Va.), July 30.

The balloon Uncle Sam, piloted by Mr. H. E. Honeywell, of St. Louis, has won the elimination race to decide the American representative in the international race for the Gordon Bennett Cup. He landed at dawn near the Bull Run battlefield, after having been 35 hours in the air, and covering 925 miles. A storm forced Mr. Honeywell to descend when he did.

PARIS, July 30.

A protocol has been signed entitling Britain to terminate the additional articles of the Anglo-French Convention of Commerce and Navigation, in respect of Australia, New Zealand, South Africa, and Newfoundland, on 12 months' notice. Should the articles cease to be applicable to Australia they will also cease to be applicable to Papua and Norfolk Island if Britain so desires.

NEW BISHOP.

AN ATHLETIC CHURCHMAN.

WORK IN THE ISLANDS.

Tall and muscular, the new Bishop of Melanesia (Rev. Cecil John Wood) may be described as belonging to that type of athletic churchman who inspire confidence and arouse enthusiasm. He has youth on his side, being well under 40, is unmarried, clean-shaven, and his personality strikes one as that of a vigorous man, who will throw himself heart and soul into the work for which he has been so happily chosen. He arrived in Sydney by the Maunganui yesterday from New Zealand, where the consecration ceremony took place.

Asked whether he intended to reside at Norfolk Island, as his predecessors had done, he said, "No. I am going to live in the Solomon Islands, but just whereabouts I can only decide when I go there and see the various suggested sites for myself. It will be more convenient, and better for the work in every way, to have our headquarters there. The work at Norfolk Island will, however, go on just the same."

One of the great difficulties in the Christianising of the natives is that of language, for the curse of Babel lies heavy in the islands. The Bishop said that he was firmly convinced that the native mind must receive its impressions and teachings in the language with which was associated the common things of everyday life. To teach Christianity to a native in the English language was like creating a separate compartment in the native's mind, dissociated from his everyday existence. It was all very well to teach natives English as a classic, but the Gospels should come to them in their own language.

"I have been a student of missionary problems for many years," he went on, "and part of my work at Wimbledon was to train junior clergy, and mission studies formed a primary part of that. One thing I am persuaded of is this, that mission problems in one part of the world are practically the same as those in other parts, just changing with local conditions. We have been in the habit of studying missions from the point of view of ethnology, the grade of civilisation of a particular people, and their own heathenish beliefs, and the way those beliefs can be built upon in the application of Christianity.

"Please bear in mind that I haven't been on the spot yet, and that there are a lot of difficulties that I won't understand till I have lived in the islands for some time, and got the native way of looking at things. One thing I am very definite about, however, is the development of a native ministry, so that the church shall become the church of the country itself, and not the church of the foreigner. That, it seems to me, is very important. It is far better that the native instead of relying on the white man and his control should look to his own people to supply the ministers of the future. There are a great many other problems connected with our mission, but you can't expect me to discuss them till I understand them better."

The Bishop, who is the guest of the State Governor, will leave for Norfolk Island on Thursday, remaining there till about the middle of September, when the Southern Cross will convey him to the Solomon Islands.

"I AM RESPONSIBLE."

SPEAKER EXPLAINS.

PARLIAMENTARY CLERKS.

"We have officers of this House appointed by the Executive for fulfilling certain duties in this House, and the understanding and practice has been that the Ministry of the day should be the final arbitrators in regard to their removals, or their replacement by somebody else," said Mr. Wade in the Legislative Assembly last evening.

Following up these remarks, Mr. Wade said there should be no halfway house in such a matter. There should be no faltering on the question. "It is common knowledge," continued Mr. Wade, "that two or three officers who were in the service of this House have been removed. How do they now stand?"

Mr. Speaker: Order. Order.

Mr. Wade resumed his seat.

Mr. Speaker: I have heard the member for Gordon for at least a minute upon the question of the clerks. I would like to point out definitely that the clerks are appointed by the Speaker. The Speaker is responsible to the House. The House, quite apart from parties in the House, has full control, through the Speaker, of the clerks in this House. The Government of the day under the Constitution Act must authorise the payment of salaries. In that regard they recommend to the Governor in Council the appointment of clerks. They also recommend the dismissal of clerks should they not behave. I hope that will make clear to the member for Gordon that the Government cannot be held responsible for anything done by the Speaker with regard to the clerks as to whether they have been dismissed from the service or whether others have been appointed to their service. The clerks then are appointed by the House, through the Speaker. The House determines this question apart from the advisers to the Government. I would ask the hon. member for Gordon to draw his remarks on this question to a close.

"I was endeavouring to point out that the Ministry is the outward authority with regard to officers of this House," said Mr. Wade. "I don't for a moment question the control exercised over officers, or the recommendations that you, sir, may make. But it is for the Government to say 'Yes' or 'No.' We are entitled to an explanation from the Ministry for recent happenings, and as to whether they are cognisant of them or a party to them. (Opposition cheers.)

Mr. Speaker: Order. Order. The hon. member will resume his seat.

"The Government have no responsibilities in the matter," said the Speaker. "The Speaker must be responsible to Parliament for what he does. The Government cannot be held responsible for what the Speaker does. The Speaker, if necessary, most likely would be able to give a specific explanation. (Laughter.)

"I must profess that is to me a new meaning of the law of Parliament," said Mr. Wade, "and I do claim that the Ministry should take full responsibility for the protection of its officers." (Cheers.)

In the course of his speech later on the Premier (Mr. M'Gowen) said the Government would take its full responsibility. The Speaker to-day was taking up the position that Mr. Speaker Abbott had taken with regard to the appointment of the steward of the House. To the best of their ability they would try to see that the services of the men in the employment of Parliament were made the fullest use of. After all, the members of the Opposition stood condemned, because they had forgotten the time-honoured custom with regard to every Speaker that had occupied the chair—they had lost sight of the Speaker in their opposition to the member for the Upper Hunter.

FEDERAL PARLIAMENT.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

MELBOURNE, Tuesday.

The Speaker took the chair at 3 p.m.

Mr. Cann (N.S.W.) asked the Minister for Home Affairs whether it was the intention of the Government to establish stores along the route of the transcontinental railway.

The Minister for Home Affairs: After we get away from Kalgoorlie and Port Augusta we do intend to do that.

Mr. Thomson (N.S.W.) urged the Minister, before coming to such a decision, to communicate with the Minister for Works in New South Wales, who had conducted business on similar lines, but had discontinued to do so.

The Minister for Home Affairs said he would.

MILITARY MATTERS.

Mr. West (N.S.W.) inquired of the Minister representing the Minister for Defence whether he had noticed paragraphs in the press to the effect that lately there had been excessive resignations from the Australian Garrison Artillery in New South Wales.

The Hon. Minister said the Minister for Defence had been informed by the military authorities in Sydney that there had not been any excessive number of resignations as was alleged. A report was being called for, and would be submitted as soon as possible.

In reply to Mr. Maloney (Vic.), the Minister representing the Minister for Defence stated that there were 73 officers in the Defence Department in receipt of £300 to £400 per annum, 49 £400 to £500, 46 £500 to £700, 19 £700 to £1000, and five £1000 and over.

COMPULSORY ENROLMENT.

The Minister for Home Affairs, in reply to several questions, stated that less than 4½ per cent. of the compulsory electoral enrolment cards were outstanding. Electors would be entitled to vote unless their names were removed from the rolls, as a result of the investigation of the electoral officer, which was now proceeding. When the postal authorities were unable from any cause to deliver communications notifying the enrolment they were returned to the electoral officer for the State. It was not considered necessary to record the number of notices returned through the dead letter offices, as no action in respect of enrolment was required to be taken.

VICTORIA BARRACKS SITE.

Mr. Kelly (N.S.W.) was informed by the Minister representing the Minister for Defence that the whole question of resuming the Federal and other properties at Double Bay, Sydney, as a site for a military barracks was originated by Senator Pearce as one for inquiry. This was done in view of the representations of the New South Wales Government, put forward to the Minister personally by Mr. Flowers, of their desire that the Defence Department should vacate Victoria Barracks if a suitable site could be obtained elsewhere.

FEDERAL REDISTRIBUTION.

The consideration was resumed of the report of the commissioners appointed to redistribute the Western Australian electorates.

Sir John Forrest (W.A.) supported the proposal put forward by the commissioners. He thought that this system of redistribution should be swept away. The members of the Ministerial party were using the redistribution for party purposes. The Labour members the other week fell in behind one member to help in retaining his seat in Queensland, and now it looked as if the same thing were going to be done in regard to Western Australia. What an exhibition it was to see members of the Caucus vote against their Ministers. Then they would say they were moved by some high impulse. It was considered highly immoral to speak to the Judges with regard to cases they were trying, yet here the members of the House of Representatives who were to act as judges in this matter were sent circulars with the object of influencing their judgment.

Mr. Fowler (W.A.) said that he did not think that the alteration would affect the chances of sitting members, and the commissioners had seized upon the only way of properly distributing the electorates. It would be a grave scandal if the proposal were rejected. The commissioners had done their work thoroughly and well, and the House should look carefully into the matter before it sent the report back to them.

Mr. Chanter (N.S.W.) moved that the report be returned to the commissioners, with a request that they should make the redistribution on the basis of existing enrolment, and not on anticipated enrolment.

Mr. Cook (N.S.W.) urged that the House should be guided by the commissioners, who had no other object in view than to do their duty faithfully.

Mr. Gregory (Queensland) held that what Ministerialists were preparing to do was not in accord with the spirit of the Act. There should be no direction to the commissioners. A report had been presented, and it was for the House to accept or reject it.

Mr. Bamford (Q.) thought that the best way to redistribute the electorates would be to let members of the State meet and discuss the position.

On a division, Mr. Chanter's amendment was defeated by 23 votes to 22.

The voting was as follows:—

Ayes (22): Anstey, F. Foster, Cann, Carr, Archibald, Charlton, Riley, Fenton, Wise, L. Smith, Moloney, Howe, P. Maloney, Brown, Brennan, West, Bamford, Webster, Scullin, Mahon, Catts, M'Dougal.

The report of the Commissioners was adopted by 23 votes to 22.

NAVIGATION BILL.

The debate on the second reading of the Navigation Bill was resumed by Mr. Glynn (S.A.). He said that the bill was objected to by some people on the ground that by some of its provisions, shipowners were unnecessarily hampered. In dealing with the question of navigation it should always be remembered that Great Britain as a world power depended upon her mercantile marine. The powers of the Commonwealth to deal with navigation must be derived from the Merchant Shipping Act of 1894, from the Commonwealth Constitution, or from both. They were told by the Ministers of Great Britain that without Imperial uniformity they could not do much to extend international reciprocity. It was doubtful whether, under the Merchant Shipping Act, the Commonwealth was a British possession. Undoubtedly the matter was in a bit of a fix, and the only way out of it was by coming out with some arrangement with the Imperial authorities. The Australian power seemed to be divided between the Commonwealth and the States. The Commonwealth Government should consult the Imperial Government as to uniformity, and the whole of its maritime powers.

ADJOURNMENT.

The debate was adjourned, and the House rose at 10.20 p.m.

ROYAL COMMISSIONS.

BILL IN PARLIAMENT.

COMMITTEE'S REPORT ADOPTED.

MELBOURNE, Tuesday.

The consideration of the committee's report on the Royal Commission Bill was resumed.

Mr. Glynn (S.A.) said that greater powers were to be given to a non-expert than were given to the High Court. No provision was made to give a witness financial assistance to attend a commission, and yet, if a man could not afford to get to the place where the commission was sitting, he could be arrested. Anybody's house could be broken into, in order that the witness might be arrested. He did not think that a witness should be expected to report himself from day to day, like a ticket-of-leave man. Not even the chairman could excuse him from attending. The clause dealing with contempt of court was a very drastic one. Still, it did not say whether a member of the commission could proceed against a witness or a writer for maligning his character, after the fine and imprisonment provided for had been inflicted. This class of legislation was becoming too common in the Commonwealth.

Mr. Carr (N.S.W.) said that the circumstances justified the use of the provisions of the bill as an experiment.

Mr. Groom (Q.) pointed out that several important amendments had been put into the bill at the request of the Opposition. The measure was still open to considerable improvement. He asked the Attorney-General to give witnesses before a commission exactly the same rights and privileges as a witness would have before the High Court.

The Attorney-General: He has the protection under this bill.

Mr. Groom: This bill was really a perversion. A Royal Commission ought to be a body formed to guide and assist legislative bodies by the proper investigation of facts, matters, and policies. Here it seemed, from remarks let drop by the Ministerialists, that the commission was to be built up for the purpose of prosecution.

The Attorney-General said that he was prepared to make those amendments he spoke of where a question asked of a witness must be relevant to the inquiry.

The report was adopted.

WOMEN'S WRONGS.

DEMAND FOR REFORM.

Miss Rose Scott, at yesterday's meeting of the National Council of Women, particularised the laws which women needed in New South Wales in order to redress their grievances.

Women required political, municipal, industrial, and social reforms. Firstly, political: They wanted the removal of the restrictions against women entering the State Parliament, as in Finland and Colorado. Then all women could work for peace and arbitration, and the abolition of party politics. Then municipal: They greatly needed a more liberal franchise for municipal councils and shires, and the removal of the restrictions upon women as councillors. Women, who for generations had managed households should be the very people to help manage the cities and towns. Again, there was industrial reform. They should abolish the restriction upon women practising law. In many parts of the world women made brilliant success of their profession. It was lamentable to think that women were not represented upon the Senate of the University, and on the Public Service Board. Every hospital and charitable board should have one or more women on the committee of management. She protested against the bad example of the Governments not paying equal pay for equal work. Another wrong was that there were no women inspectors in the schools. Then there was the question of women on juries. It was inexpedient and unfair that women should be tried by men alone.

Lastly, there was the need for social reform. An important matter was equal guardianship of children. England was better than New South Wales in this respect, for here the children were entirely owned by the father, who could fix their domicile, religion, education, and occupation without any reference to the mother. Another law needed was "the Testator's Family Maintenance Act," on the lines of the New Zealand Act, so that a man could not will his property away without making a suitable provision for his wife and family. A law was also needed to compel husbands in other States to support their deserted wives. Women, whose husbands were in gaol, should be partly supported by the work of their husbands while in gaol. Also they needed a law to protect wives from drunken husbands. They also needed a law to establish the economic independence of married women. The present dependence degraded women, removed their liberty of action, and gave them the position of a minor compelled to ask for every sixpence unless the husbands were kind and thoughtful. Womens' legal right to a part of their husbands' income should be established.

ARTILLERY CRISIS.

"THE THUNDERCLAP."

"These wholesale defections from the ranks of the Australian Garrison Artillery are due in my opinion to the Minister for Defence being wrongly advised by his responsible officers."

In these words Major Chaseling, late Commanding Officer of the A.G.A. Regiment in New South Wales, explains the present crisis. He strongly urged on those responsible to stay their hand, as he foresaw what the result would be. Not only was his advice in the matter disregarded, but the responsible officers advised the Minister against his representations.

Yesterday there were further defections from the ranks, and at present the old Australian Garrison Artillery has ceased to exist. Last night Major Chaseling outlined the events which led to the debacle.

"In Victoria," he said, "the batteries of the A.G.A. were so far apart that a regimental staff did not apply under the conditions obtaining in New South Wales, and they were dispensed with some time ago. Here in New South Wales the conditions are different entirely, since all but one and a half companies are centred in Sydney, and the regiment as organised nine or ten years ago evidently gave satisfactory results in every way. But some months ago I was directed by the District Commandant to increase the establishment from 105 to 125 per company, and decrease the non-commissioned officers by three per company. This in itself to my mind was inexplicable, considering that the work of administering each company was considerably increased, while the help that the officers commanding companies could get from the non-commissioned officers was considerably less. This was further apparent when the Sydney companies were further increased from 125 to 150 without any corresponding increase in the N.C.O.'s. One company at Newcastle was 200 strong, where it was previously only 162, and it has 16 N.C.O.'s instead of 19, as heretofore. This threw more work on the company officers in administration, particularly as each company commander is directly responsible to the ordinance for all arms, accoutrements, and clothing.

Then came the thunderclap—the abolition of the regimental staff, and consequently the entire elimination of the previous organisation. The A.G.A. regiment is the only regiment that has been deprived of the regimental staff in the Commonwealth. No interference has been made with the staffs of any infantry battalions or brigades to their detriment, and this gave rise to a feeling of strong resentment by the members of the regiment who felt that they were victimised. I want to state that the influx of the new compulsory trained cadets have had nothing whatever to do with the crisis. This is solely due to the alteration of the conditions.

MINISTER INTERVIEWED.

Senator Pearce (Minister for Defence) to-day said, "I have been in telephonic communication with Sydney this morning, and find that so far no resignations have been received at the barracks. As regards the alleged discontent, I am calling for a complete report. I am informed also that the only delay that has occurred in admitting militiamen to the forts was at Middle Head, where the master gunner was unable to find the key, and the companies were delayed a few minutes before they were admitted. I am prepared to go into the matter fully as soon as the report comes to hand."

CONSTABLE AND FARMER.

ALLEGED FISTICUFFS.

DISPUTE SETTLED AT LAW.

MELBOURNE, Tuesday.

Judgment on the findings of a Bendigo jury was given by Judge Wasley in the County Court to-day. The case was one in which James Jordan, of Merone, farmer and contractor, sought to recover £250 damages from Constable Weibye, of Boort, for alleged illegal arrest, assault, false imprisonment, and malicious prosecution.

At the hearing of the case it was stated by Jordan that on January 8, 1911, he was driving home, and a man named Skilbeck made an offensive remark. He got out and gave Skilbeck a slap. Defendant said Skilbeck came to the police station in a battered condition, bleeding from the cheek and nose. The constable pursued Jordan, overtook and arrested him, and brought him back, handcuffed, to the gig which Jordan had been driving. Jordan said that the constable caught him two or three miles on his way home, bailed him up, and threatened to shoot him and his horse. When he pulled up the constable rushed at him, severely assaulted him, handcuffed him, and afterwards would not allow two persons to bail him out.

Constable Weibye stated that Jordan had made his horse gallop when pursued, had struck at Weibye with his whip, and when Weibye threatened to shoot the horse replied, "Shoot him." When two miles from Boort Weibye stopped the horse. He asserted that Jordan said, "There is no one about, it's you and me for it," and after that blows were struck. He had not refused Jordan bail.

Judge Wasley said the verdict would be for plaintiff for £10, as that amount had been paid into Court by Weibye. Costs up to that payment, as fixed by the Registrar, would be given to the plaintiff, and all costs subsequent to the defendant, the amount paid into Court to be held in satisfaction of defendant's costs.

SENATE VACANCY.

ADELAIDE, Tuesday.

At a meeting of the Liberal party in Parliament House to-day, Mr. J. W. Shannon was chosen unanimously, and nominated to fill the vacancy in the Senate. Both Houses will meet to-morrow to make the appointment, and Mr. Shannon's election is certain. He unsuccessfully contested the Senate seat at the last campaign, and formerly sat in the House of Assembly for Wallaroo.

Tomsitt, M'Lachlan, Hunt, Minter, Greenwood, Henry, and Waddel, Miss M'Lean, Mrs. Learmouth. For Sydney: Messrs. Cane, Hills, Lafreya, Rallis, Wilson, Humfrey, Hordens, Trew, South, M'Kenzie, Weddnall, Nall, Cay, Beatho, Robinson, Lanbbon, Bett, Mount, Stings, Lidiard, Minter, Exton, Linderman, Holmes, Centner, Martel, Samuels, Tarmin, Chanleur, Brierley, Paton, Till, Reynell, Friend, and Eldridge, Misses Mayfield, Humphrey, Payne, Brierley, Evans, Evans, and Stuart, Mesdames Cane, Lafreya, Rallis, Cook, Harvey, Hill, Pickering and child, Macemic, Mall, Duguid and child, Rosen and child, Langdon and child, Bee and child, Mount, Stings, Lidiard, Till, and Friend.

MEDINA AT FREMANTLE.

The P. and O. Company's steamer Medina, the latest development of the "M" class, which was the King's yacht for the Coronation Durbar, arrived at Fremantle yesterday, on her maiden voyage to Australia. This vessel and her sister ship, the Maloja, which was recently in Sydney, are the largest steamers yet built for the company, and the largest of their class in the Australian trade, where, owing to the limitations of the Suez Canal and other causes, tonnages rule much below the Atlantic standard. Both vessels are fitted with powerful wireless installations, bedstead cabins, electric laundries, and other electrical devices, while their passenger accommodation is of the most luxurious character. The Medina is 570ft long, displacement, 18,700 tons, gross tonnage, 12,500, and her twin-screw reciprocating engines develop 15,000-horse power and a speed of 19 knots.

COASTAL VESSELS DELAYED.

Rough seas and shallow bars were responsible for delay to a number of coasting craft yesterday. The tug Phoenix, which was off the bar at Nambucca, has had to return to Trial Bay, as there was too much sea to cross in. The steamers Astral and Dumaresq sailed from Newcastle, but found the seas too heavy, and put back again. Later, however, they got away. The steamer City of Grafton was bar-bound at Richmond River Heads, and the ketch Alfred Fenning was still held up at Manning Heads. At South-west Rocks the steamers Nerong and Duranbah, the ketches Sarah Hunter and Forbes Bros., and the schooners Alpha and Alma Doepel were anchored. The steamer Duroby, which had been sheltering at the same place, ventured out, but was forced to return. There was also a number of vessels barbound at Cape Hawke, including the steamers Tuncurry and Commonwealth, the schooners Shannon and Aleda, and the ketch Phil Forbes.

MATARAM DELAYED.

The steamer Mataram, for Singapore, via ports, has, owing to coal-loading delays, had her departure postponed from to-morrow till Friday.

R.M.S. OSTERLEY.

The Orient Company's R.M.S. Osterley, due to-morrow, left Gravesend on June 29. She had rough weather for days before reaching Colombo, and again in the Australian Bight. Commander D. R. W. Parsons, R.N.R., has associated with him the following: J. R. O'Sullivan, R.N.R., chief officer; L. V. James, 2nd officer; C. J. R. Webb, R.N.R., third officer; [illegible] John Webb, R.N.R., fourth officer; J. C. Henderson, R.N.R., fifth officer; L. Trevor Davies, surgeon; J. H. Sparks, purser; A. B. Campbell, R.N.R., assistant purser; John Murray, chief engineer; R. Snaddon, second engineer; H. F. Penrose, Marconi operator.

GUTHRIE FOR MELBOURNE.

Although she has been in the Australian trade for many years, first as an E. and A. liner, then on behalf of Burns, Philp, and Co., Ltd., and now on account of the Australian-Oriental Line, the steamer Guthrie has not been in Victorian waters since her connection with the first-named service was severed. She will, however, renew her acquaintance with Port Phillip in the course of a few days. She is timed to leave Melbourne on August 7, Geelong a day later, and Sydney on August 14, on her return East.

THE NEW KATOA.

The Union Company's new steamer Katoa, 2700 tons, which arrived at Fremantle on 21st, brought a full load of railway iron. After unloading she goes to load timber for New Zealand. The captain reported meeting with exceptionally rough weather after leaving the Cape, but notwithstanding the dangerous nature of the cargo, which occasionally moved, nothing of a serious nature occurred. The Katoa was built at Hylton, Sunderland, and sailed on her maiden voyage from Middlesborough for Australia, via Las Palmas (Canary Islands). The trip from the latter port to Fremantle occupied 43 days 7 hours, and the average hourly speed was 9 knots.

MADE FOR THE NEAREST PORT.

The British steamer Elvaston, which left Antofagasta last month for Sydney for docking, but put into Auckland on the 19th inst. for coal, will not come on to Sydney, as arrangements were made to dock the vessel at Auckland, after which she was to proceed to Newcastle to load coal back to the West Coast. Captain Bloomfield, in describing the voyage from Antofagasta to Sydney, says that the Elvaston got within 900 miles of Sydney Heads, but owing to strong northerly gales and the coal running short he decided to make for the nearest port, and after obtaining further supplies to continue the voyage to Sydney. However, through the vessel putting into Auckland the owners decided to dock her there, and then proceed to Newcastle.

ELECTRIC POWER FOR SHIPS.

According to American papers tests have just been made at Schenectady of two electric motors building by the General Electric Company for the U.S. collier Jupiter of 20,000 tons displacement, which is to be the first large vessel to be driven by electricity. The Jupiter is one of three sister vessels, one of the others being fitted with turbine engines and the other by reciprocating engines. The Jupiter is being built at the Mare Island Navy Yard, and is to attain a speed of 14 knots.

MOLDAVIA IN HEAVY WEATHER.

The P. and O. Royal Mail liner Moldavia, from the Eastern States, had two days' severe weather in the Bight. The ship laboured very heavily under pressure of the gale, but no damage was done.

TWO NEW STEAMERS.

FOR THE P. and O. BRANCH SERVICE.

Word was received in Sydney yesterday by Gilchrist, Watt, and Sanderson, Ltd., agents for the P. and O. Branch Service, from the head office in England, that it had been decided to order two new steamers for the Australian trade. They will be named Berrima and Borda respectively, and will be of exactly the same type as the company's steamer Ballarat (11,122 tons), which has already paid Sydney a couple of visits. Like the Ballarat, they will embody the most up-to-date appliances to fit them for both trade and passenger accommodation.

NEW STEAMER BLAXLAND.

VOYAGE OF 105 DAYS.

The Blaxland, the twin-screw steamer specially constructed by Mackie and Thomson, Ltd., Govan, and engined by Messrs. Ritchie and Company, Glenalvon, W[illegible] Partrick, to the order of Allen Taylor and Company, Limited, arrived in Port Jackson late last night. The vessel is intended for the coastal trade of the State. She is of shallow draught, high speed, and besides being a fine cargo carrier, is fitted for the accommodation of a number of passengers. She left the Clyde on April 16, and was, therefore, 105 days on the voyage. Calls were made at Port Said on May 9, Perim on May 20, Batavia on June 28, Thursday Island on July 17, and Townsville on July 28. She is a vessel of 399 tons, and is under the command of Captain Cunningham.

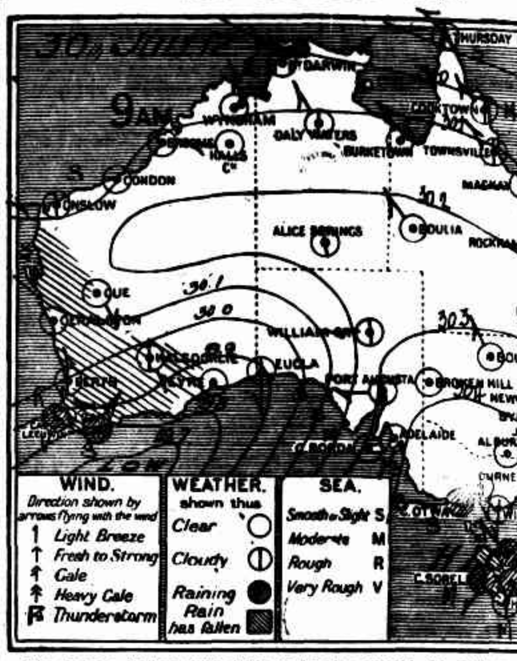
AUSTRALIAN WEATHER.

THE "HERALD" MAP.



The immense high pressure which on Monday covered the greater part of the continent and extended across the Tasman Sea to New Zealand has lost a little in pressure values. The centre has also worked slightly northward. This northerly movement should be the means of clearing the rainy conditions from our coast.

The new Antarctic disturbance over the south-west corner of Australia has advanced about 500 miles eastward, and still retains its energy.

The centre at 9 a.m. was situated to the south-east of Albany. A slight weakening in the isobars is noticeable in the south-east of Queensland, which is probably the cause of the heavy rain with thunder on our north coast.

Ocean Forecasts.—Squalls and rough weather on the east coast, more especially between Sydney and Rockhampton. Squally westerly winds to gales between the Leeuwin to the Bight extending later.

WATER STILL PREDOMINANT.

BRISBANE, Tuesday.

Mr. Wareham, the Queensland inspector for the Adelaide Co., to-day received a telegram from Captain Garden, of the Urilla, stating that the pumps and the diver had arrived by the steamer Wodonga. One pump had reduced the water in No. [illegible] holds by 4ft [illegible] [illegible]. Mr. Wareham expects that by Friday additional appliances will have reduced the water sufficiently in No. 1 and 2 holds to enable repairs to be effected.

BILLIARDS.

INMAN v. REECE.

REECE SCORES 740 TO 82.

Reece was in very [illegible] form yesterday afternoon in the match of 18,000 for £200 against England's champion. Starting with a lead of 708, he finished up with an advantage of 1431. This result was brought about by the close-cannon champion scoring 740 to Inman's 82 in nine innings.

Reece's unfinished run of 11 was developed into 21, followed by 10, 0, 2, and 5; then came 124, 0, 0, and the climax—490 unfinished. Meantime Inman made points in the following visits to the table—0, 4, 78, 0, 0, 0, 0—82 in all.

Reece's great performance occupied exactly [illegible] minutes, and during making most strokes of his repertoire were brought into use. Some close-cannon play took place here and there, but, as a general thing, no particular series of strokes were indulged in, except that the big majority of points came from the top of the table. Several masses, the beautiful [illegible] in which the cue ball is brought twice around the table to its object, the "postman's knock," winning and losing hazards, found their place in the [illegible]. Naturally Reece received an ovation when he completed the schedule, and the large number of spectators were delighted with the exhibition. Reece's average was [illegible] and Inman 8.2. Scores:—

T. Reece .... [illegible]
M. Inman .... [illegible]

There was a large attendance when Reece resumed his unfinished 490, but after adding five he just failed to connect on a cannon. On the second hit he came in with 191, and Reece added [illegible] to his total, then had a bad run, his highest figures [illegible] being 20.

Inman grasped the opportunity to make up leeway with a series of small, but useful, breaks of 50, 45, 41, and 137. A double century then came from the champion, put together by [illegible], in which he made no error until the [illegible]. At the twentieth visit Inman had scored 511 to 177—a marked contrast to the afternoon's scoring.

Play ceased with the scores—

Reece .... [illegible]
Inman .... [illegible]

Play will be continued to-day at 3 and 8 o'clock.

THE INTERNATIONAL TOURNAMENT.

SMITH, JUNIOR, DEFEATS DIGGLE.

Frank Smith, junior, played at the top of his form in the third session of the fourth heat of the International Tournament, at Heizon and Smith's rooms yesterday afternoon. Starting with a lead of [illegible] 524 to the English visitor's [illegible], in less than [illegible] minutes, by bright, sparkling billiards, in which he evidenced skill which, with a certain amount of restraint in controlling his forcing strokes, should give him a high position in his profession. Diggle's play was mediocre. While the youth ran up breaks of 153, 44, and 72, with the excellent average of [illegible], the best figures from the Manchester player's cue were 50, 63, 43, and 35, and an average of 17.8. Diggle was in the practically hopeless position of 800 behind [illegible] points when Smith reached his quota with the [illegible].

F. Smith, jun. (900) .... [illegible]
E. Diggle (scratch) .... [illegible]

Smith again did better than his opponent in the evening session, scoring 525 to 414. Diggle [illegible] more on the red loser for points than his opponent, which is at the top end, and tailed in consequence. Neither cueist made a century break during the evening, Smith's best being 91, 78, 51, and 66 (unfinished), with an average of 18.24. Diggle only put up three breaks over 40, with 89, 52, and 45, and an average of [illegible].

Final scores:

F. Smith, junior (900) .... [illegible]
E. Diggle (scratch) .... [illegible]

The fifth heat, between F. Smith, senior, and Weiss, commences this afternoon at [illegible].

WILLIAMS v. REECE.

Albert E. Williams writes that the date fixed by Reece—September 16—for a proposed match [illegible] up level, is suitable to him, but he objects to the condition demanded by Reece that he (Reece) should take three-quarters of the gate money, and [illegible] Reece a champion of champions. [illegible] Williams, "does he forget that I have defeated him three out of four matches which we have played? I am prepared to play Reece for the whole of the gate after expenses are paid, or will agree to the winner taking three-fourths. As I will be leaving Sydney shortly I should like a reply from Reece and a deposit to bind the match."

TATTERSALL'S CLUB TOURNAMENT.

Last night's play resulted:—

J. Logan (rec. 135) beat A. Kimber (rec. [illegible]).
J. Sharpe (rec. 160) beat P. Nolin (rec. [illegible]).

To-night's games at 7.30:—

A DISAPPEARING BEACH.

Camp Cove Beach, Watson's Bay, is disappearing. This is a result of the dredging operations which have been carried out for some time past in the channel, and hastened by the recent heavy seas. The matter was brought up before the last meeting of the Vaucluse Council, when the Mayor pointed out that during the recent gales the waves had washed away parts of the concrete walls. Property owners in the locality had spent considerable sums of money in protecting their foreshores by retaining walls, but these were all more or less damaged. Alderman Johnston further explained that the little beach, which was such an attraction there, was rapidly disappearing by erosion. His contention was that through the dredging of the channel the waves got freer play. The Government was spending considerable sums of money on surfing beaches, and as this beach was one of great popularity, and was not so risky as the ocean beaches, it was a case for special consideration. It was decided to ask the Minister for Works to receive a deputation.

LAUDANUM POISONING.

A man whose identity is at present unknown was found by the police in King-street, Newtown last night in an unconscious condition. He was taken to the Royal Prince Alfred Hospital suffering from laudanum poisoning, and a bottle containing the drug was found in his pocket.

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY.

The House adjourned at 12.20 o'clock this morning.

MONETARY AND COMMERCIAL.

STOCKS AND SHARES.

There were more sales on 'Change yesterday, though there was a weakening of prices. New South Wales funded stock appreciated, and so did Commercial Bank of Sydney. Generally speaking quotations of steam shares were easier, and sales of both Port Jackson and Sydney Ferries were on a lower scale. In insurance stock I.O.A. sold at the same rate as the previous day. Tooth's Brewery fell. Sales of Australian Gas were made at late rates, £17, and quotations were close. Aerated Bread went up. Allen Taylor rose. Brennan's was better. A sale of Colonial Sugar was made at £42/12/6, then at £42/15/, and again at £42/12/6. Goodlet and Smith was reduced 3d. Sales of other stocks were at unchanged rates. Variations on late rates were:—

FINANCIAL.

SIX MONTHS' TRADE.

COMMONWEALTH STATISTICS.

The returns of Commonwealth trade for June, published by the Customs Department, enable us to present the total trade returns for Australia for the first six months of the year. The total exports (specie and bullion included) amounted to £34,830,624, and the total imports to £37,689,560, there being thus a difference of £2,858,956 in favour of exports, as compared with an excess of imports for the five months of £2,747,914. The totals may be given thus, distinguishing merchandise from specie and bullion:—

IMPORTS.
(Six months.)

	1911. £	1912. £	Movement. £
Merchandise	30,475,987	36,905,764	+6,429,777
Specie and bullion	948,907	783,816	−165,091

EXPORTS.
(Six months.)

	1911. £	1912. £	Movement. £
Merchandise	28,960,110	28,138,880	−821,230
Specie and bullion	3,769,109	6,691,744	+2,922,365
Total	32,729,219	34,830,624	+2,101,405

If we compare the ratio of imports to exports we find that reckoning imports as 100 the total exports for the six months would be represented by 92.20, while for five months the total exports would be 91.45. Thus it will be seen that the exports have gained in ratio to the imports on the month. If we compare the merchandise during the month, as regards the proportion they bear to exports, at 100, we find that exports of merchandise for the six months would be represented by 76.24, while the exports for the five months would be represented by 76.78. Hence imports of merchandise during the month have, as regards the proportion they have been to exports, have gained slightly. So as in the totals of merchandise and specie and bullion, the exports in proportion to the imports have gained, the gain must all be on account of proportionately larger exports of gold. The actual amount of net export of specie and bullion for June was £1,230,520, compared with a monthly average for five months of £915,481.

Comparing the totals of the six months' trade of 1911 and 1912 we find that in imports of merchandise there has been an increase of £6,429,777, and including specie and bullion an increase of £6,264,686. Coming to exports, the decline in exports of merchandise is not so great on the six months as it was on the five months, the decline at the end of June being £821,230, and at the end of May £1,254,528. The export of gold brings up the increase in exports to £2,101,405 for the six months, compared with an increase of £843,322 at the end of May. As showing a tendency to increased exports the exports for June in 1911 and 1912 may be given thus:—

EXPORTS.—JUNE.

	1911. £	1912. £	Movement. £
Merchandise	3,526,160	3,912,898	−386,738
Specie and bullion	682,511	1,507,286	−824,775
Total	4,208,671	5,420,184	+1,211,513

It should, however, be remembered that a difference in the seasons of the two years may have accounted for much of the increase this June.

NEWCASTLE AND HUNTER RIVER STEAM COMPANY.

The half-yearly meeting of the Newcastle and Hunter River Steamship Company, Limited, was held yesterday. Mr. S. Clift, chairman of directors, presided. The report and balance-sheet, particulars of which have already appeared, were adopted.

GOLD PRODUCTION AND PRICES.

On the above subject Mr. J. M. Pearse, of Jerry's Plains, writes:—

Sir,—Notwithstanding the emphatic condemnation of the quantitative theory (by the editor of the "Statist," as contained in the words you quote in the commencement of his article, entitled "Gold Production and the Quantitative Theory," which have for their texts Mr. Roberts's report on the production and distribution of gold), it will be found on examination that he fails to maintain the attitude so strongly taken up, and I should be glad if you will allow me to point out his inconsistency. The editor's condemnation is expressed in these words:—

> "As the mistaken quantitative theory, like all errors, springs up again as often as it is killed, it may be worth while once more to show how utterly untenable it is."

Compare this with the following passage occurring in another article of the same series:—

> "We say all this not to deny that the increasing production of gold continued for so long a time has helped powerfully to bring about that great activity in trade which we see everywhere, but to show other causes have been at work."

He proves that the increasing production of gold has helped to bring about activity in trade. Now, activity in trade, I take it, is synonymous with rise in prices. Yet he, with recurring inconsistency, condemns the quantitative theory.

The following extract from a third article in the "Statist" on the same subject might also be taken in support of Mr. Pearse's argument:—

There has resulted from all this (i.e., invention and transport facilities) a multiplication of production greater than ever has been witnessed in any similar period in the history of the world, a multiplication which tended to send down the prices of commodities so seriously that were it not for the discovery of gold, first in California and Australia, shortly afterwards in Russia, and lastly in South Africa, the level of prices would have been driven so low as possibly to take away from the husbandman and the manufacturer the principal motives for energetic industry. The discoveries just referred to prevented prices from being made unremunerative, and thus continued the growth of all forms of products which had been stimulated by great inventions.

It seems to us that, admitting the influence of the production of gold on prices, the endeavour of the "Statist" is to prove that while the increased production of gold has been responsible for preventing a fall in values, whatever increase in values has taken place above the normal has not been due to that increase of production, but to other causes, of which one is the influence of credit, and another the decreasing production of food stuffs in proportion to population. Though here again it should be remembered there are authorities who deny this decrease as far as cereals are concerned.

NOTES AND COMMENTS.

The first series of wool sales of the season 1912-13 commence to-day.

The directors notify that the Wentworth Hotel Company, Ltd., has purchased the freehold of the hotel and a portion of the adjoining land. A long lease, with the option of purchase of the remainder of the vacant land, has been secured.

COMMERCIAL.

THE MARKETS.

SCARCITY OF CREAM OF TARTAR.

Nothing further of interest occurred in regard to woolpacks. That is to say, the only orders booked were for legitimate country requirements. Holders of spot stocks and June shipment were firm at 3/6 delivered. July shipment was offering at from 3/4½ to 3/5. Cornsacks were quiet at from 5/10 to 5/11, both for immediate and season's deliveries. Advices to hand by mail from Calcutta showed that during the week previous to date of writing the demand had been slow, very little business of any importance being transacted. Hessians for July and August continued to be inquired for in moderate quantities, and some lines were also put through for October-December and January-March, but the total number of orders secured was comparatively small. Mills had almost withdrawn for the nearer months on account of the labour troubles under the new Factory Act. Three or four mills were out of operation on account of strikes, and in many others a great deal of trouble was being experienced. This made the question of delivery of existing contracts rather a doubtful one, and sellers were therefore disinclined to trade forward, even at an advance. Under such conditions the market had naturally stiffened. In addition, heavy goods had moved up a shade. Fair inquiries were made for Australian cornsacks.

There was a strong inquiry for tea, and heavy clearances were reported. Ceylon was the most favoured variety of leaf, contracts being signed for upwords of 500 packages on spot and to arrive, at prices ranging to 9¾d per lb. Sales of Indians in the same positions amounted to about 300 packages, the rates accepted being in the vicinity of 9½d. This business was all done privately, but in addition a public auction was held, at which another 400 packages of Ceylons changed hands to 10d. Samples by the mail were said to be attractive. Information from Colombo, dated July 11, indicated that at the previous day's sale one or two invoices showed improvement, but the quality generally was much the same. Commonest undesirable kinds were neglected, only the cleanest of them being in request for Australia. Good common and low medium kinds were steady, but thick liquoring broken orange pekoes with "tip" were in demand from Russia, and advanced smartly. High-grown teas were steady at late rates, excepting where quality was markedly improved, when long prices were realised. In conclusion, the writer stated that in his opinion the market had seen bottom, and that as the standard of the tea was steadily improving a sharp rise was shortly to be looked for. Much the same conditions apparently prevail in Calcutta, news of the auction held on July 2 indicating that the quality of the tea catalogued was rather poor, there being a larger proportion of coarse and stalky leaf than was usual so early in the season. The demand for commonest kinds was weak, and values declined. It had to be borne in mind, however, that the decline was to a great extent accounted for by the inferior description of the lower grades. Good common brokens were unchanged. All good liquoring and tippy kinds met with a strong inquiry at late rates.

The cabled quotation for rosin again exhibited a drop. "G" grade was offered at £14 2/6 per ton, c.i.f. and e., and "N" grade at £15/1/ per ton c.i.f. and e. From these figures it would appear that the local market is now well above American parity, as holders of spot stocks of "G" grade were asking from £15/10/ to £15/15/, and "N" grade from £16/10/ to £17 per ton. But the position of rosin did not excite much comment. Cream of tartar was the line on which attention focussed. Supplies were exceedingly limited, and as there have been no shipments despatched from Marseilles since May last it certainly looks as though present holders are going to reap a rich profit. Up till the latter end of last week Melbourne had been buying heavily, but as merchants are rapidly becoming alive to the fact that the commodity they were letting go at /9½ for 95 per cent. and /10 for 99 per cent. is good property, and in all probability likely to prove even more valuable in the near future, they have advanced their rates. Yesterday found it well nigh impossible to obtain a parcel of 95 per cent. under /9¾ and of 99 per cent. under /10½ per lb. An all-round increase was noticeable in the rates wanted for sodas. Brunner Mond's bicarbonate was not to be had under £7/17/6 in 3's, while the same brand of mineral water strength was in strong hands at from £7/5/ to £7/10/. Caustic soda, 70 per cent to 72 per cent., in parcels, was worth £14/10/, and 76 per cent. to 77 per cent. £16 10/. Stocks of soda ash were practically depleted.

Eastern produce was dull. Pepper was said to be clearing satisfactorily at Friday's amended valuations. Pure white whole commanded 1/1½, and ground 1/2 per lb. For 7lb bags 1/2½ was asked. There was a steady demand for cloves. Rice was unchanged at previous levels. Intelligence from Constantinople mentioned that continuous drought, accompanied by hot southerly winds, had seriously damaged the sowing. Estimates from the growing districts pointed to an output of not over 65,000 bags, thus implying that the damage done exceeded 50 per cent. The confirmation of a short yield had brought about a sharp rise of over 20 per cent. in forward deliveries, and of 10 per cent. in prompt. The available stock in Rodosto and Gallipoli, the two principal centres, did not exceed 10,000 sacks. It was estimated that the uncovered new crop sales amounted to from 20,000 to 25,000 bags. Dealers and speculators in Turkey who were bare of stock to a degree never before known would absorb another 10,000 or 12,000 bags, leaving but a probable 30,000 or 35,000 sacks to meet the world's requirements in the coming year.

The market for oils was featureless, the inclement weather no doubt having a depressing effect upon trade. Whitelead was the only line for which there was any inquiry, but as stocks on the spot were light, and sellers firm, few orders were put through.

CUSTOMS DECISIONS.

The following customs decisions have been issued:—

(Order 1581, as amended by order 1551).—G.O. 1226 is amended by omitting from the heading thereof the words "or under transit permit," and inserting in 1228 (1), after the word "interstate" the words "or to a port within the State."

COMMERCE ACT.

Trade Description Applied to Jewellery.—Where leather watch guards are imported attached (up to one dozen) to a show card, and where the metal portion of each guard is marked as required by regulation 8 (1), the application of the prescribed trade description to the show card may be accepted as sufficient.

Machine Tools and Parts.—The bylaw relating to the exemption of certain machine tools, and published in the "Gazette" of September 19, 1908, is amended, as from July 12, by the omission of the following item:—Metalworking—Lathes, dental.

Manganesite shall in future be charged with the duty chargeable on paints ground in liquid. The notice concerning this article appearing in the "Gazette" of December 31, 1902, is cancelled.

STATUTORY RULES.

Paragraphs (4) and (5) of regulation No. 195 of the Customs regulations 1909 (statutory rules 1909, No. 126) are repealed and the following paragraphs substituted in their stead:—

(4) The goods shall be sold subject to duty and free of all charges up to the date of sale, but with all faults, and should there be any discrepancy between the quantity stated in the sale list and the actual quantity available for delivery, the collector shall not be bound to deliver more than the quantity available for delivery.

(5) The goods shall be removed from the warehouse within seven days after the sale, and if not so removed the purchaser shall be liable for rent and charges thereon from the date of sale up to the date of delivery at the rates prescribed in the regulations under the Customs Act in respect of goods warehoused in the King's warehouse.

Bacteriological Products.—Extract (alcoholic, (R. Maertens Berlin), item 288, free.

Bags, Sacks, etc.—Oil cake sacks, item 113, free, as compressed fodder sacks.

British Preference.—In the case of United Kingdom bracelets imported for attachment to Swiss watches, the bracelets, if invoiced and packed separately, may be treated as a separate importation, and, if complying with the preferential conditions, may be admitted at the United Kingdom rate.

Lentils.—Husked, but not split, item 65(D), ½d per lb: whole, item 64(B), 2s 6d per cental; husked and split, item 65(D), ½d per lb.

Musical Instruments.—Strung backs for pianos (the strung back consists of the iron frame attached to the wooden back, with wrest-plank, sounding-board, and wires strung in proper position), item 284 (A or B), 60 per cent. of fixed rate, or ad valorem rate, 25 per cent. or 20 per cent., whichever higher. (Ministerial direction, under section 160(2) of the Customs Act.)

BREADSTUFFS.

WHEAT STEADY.

Yesterday's cables from London indicated that the market was steady but idle, buyers and sellers alike waiting for a lead. This should shortly be forthcoming. Up to the present it looks as though the start when made will be in the downward direction, although, when dealing with wheat, it is utterly impossible to anticipate developments. Operators are continually backing their opinions, but after all, it is pure guesswork. Take the present position. To all intents and purposes, the future of the world's markets is in the balance. In the United Kingdom harvesting will be started early next month, and if favourable weather is encountered a satisfactory result is assured. But on the other hand, if Great Britain has a taste of the weather we are at present experiencing in New South Wales there will be a very different tale to tell. Canada and the United States are certainly having too much moisture, although so far no material damage has been done. Elaborate tables have recently been compiled showing that the shipments from exporting countries during the season commencing on August 1 will be some millions of quarters above actual requirements. These figures have taken time and care to compile, but when we remember that the great Argentine and Indian crops have hardly yet been sown; that here in Australia the grain is little above the ground; and that much time must yet elapse before the United States and Canadian crops are assured, the unsubstantial character of the compilations is at once borne in upon us. They have been worked up on probabilities and possibilities, none of which may come to pass. As to actual price at which wheat could have been bought in Sydney yesterday, we are of opinion that from 4/1½ to 4/2 alongside is not far wide of the mark.

The Millers' Association continued to quote £10 per ton for flour.

At Darling Harbour yesterday 589 tons of wheat and 184 tons of flour were manifested to arrive.

PRICE OF CHEESE REDUCED.

EGGS FROM QUEENSLAND.

Prime loaf cheese was reduced to /9½ per lb yesterday morning by the Sussex-street merchants, who were previously asking /9¾ and /10. The market has of late been dull, and the selling of local cheese has been somewhat marred by stocks of Queensland cheese being offered on the Sydney market. It was the general opinion that cheese would not rest on a /9½ market, and that it would not be long before the price would be further reduced.

The egg market was steady. River eggs were easier at 1/4 to 1/5, but both railways and new-laid were selling at the same price as on the previous day. The Burringbar arrived with 30 cases from the Richmond River.

Last week Queensland eggs were offered to Sussex-street merchants at 1/2 f.o.b., Brisbane. A few days later a merchant wanted 1000 dozen, but could not get them at the same price. Yesterday morning they were quoted at 1/3½ delivered in Sydney. A Sussex-street firm received a small consignment at the end of last week. The eggs met with a good sale at 1/5 to 1/6 per dozen. Another shipment was expected during the morning, and it was believed that the eggs would be placed on the market to-day.

The surplus of eggs in Brisbane is not large. As soon as a certain number of orders was received, the market became firmer. At any rate, the Brisbane eggs will have but little effect in weakening the local market. Mention has also been made about Adelaide eggs. None are expected for fully three or four weeks, and some doubt exists as to whether any will then be sent here. Adelaide generally has a large surplus, and at certain times of the year sends supplies to other States, principally Western Australia. About the end of last August Adelaide eggs were received in Sydney.

Butter was selling well at 144/. The supplies were sufficient to cover the demands. Grades other than of the best quality were selling at a wide margin. Seconds stood at 120/ to 136/. Cold-stored butter has been sold wherever possible of late. The best qualities have been disposed of at prices as high as 140/, whilst other grades were being sold from 120/ per cwt.

Current quotations were:—

FORAGE AND GRAIN.

ANOTHER RISE IN ONIONS.

HIGH PRICES FOR FIREWOOD.

Yet another rise in onions. The market for Victorian onions yesterday morning was from £14 to £15, whilst Japanese onions were selling at £14 to £14/10/. The advanced price for the Victorian onions was attributed to their scarcity on the southern market, and also the gradual firming of that market. Japanese onions rose in sympathy. The Melbourne market was on Monday firm at £14 per ton.

Prime chaff was selling well, but merchants experienced difficulty in disposing of off-qualities. This week's shipments from the other States amounted to 10,000 bags. Other lines of produce were steady at late values.

Merchants reported improved business for maize. The prices remained unaltered. Of the 4000 bags of South African maize that arrived on Monday very little has so far been offered in "the street," but it is expected that more will be placed on the market today.

Very high prices were obtained at the firewood auction sale. Many of those present at the sale mentioned that they could not remember the time when prices were so high. Both the best qualities of box and stringy realised 26/, whilst ironbark brought 24/6, and bakers' wood 17/6. The last sale was held on Thursday, when the top price was 23/. The scarcity was attributed to the wet weather.

At a meeting of the Flour Millers' Association yesterday it was decided to raise the price of pollard by 5/, making the market £5/5/ per ton. Bran was not changed from £5 per ton.

RAILWAY MARKETS.

PRODUCE VERY SCARCE.

Supplies will soon be a minus quantity, if things continue as they are at present. Yesterday morning only found 19 consignments placed in position for sale at the railway market. The manifest included an equally small number. Of the eleven consignments disposed of, nine consisted of wheaten chaff. The top price was 7/6 for a truckload from Derrain. Five of the consignments were from Ganmain, these fetching 6/5, 6/6, 6/7, and 7/. The rest varied from 5/7 to 6/6 per cwt. Lucerne hay and oaten chaff numbered one consignment each, fetching 4/1, and 7/ per cwt respectively. This made up the whole morning's business. Surprised looks were to be seen on the faces of many buyers who are in the habit of coming up to the yard about 10 o'clock, by which time everything had been disposed of.

Trucks of produce placed in position for sale totalled 19, and consisted of:—Hay 1, chaff 15, wheat 2, oats 1.

The manifest included:—Chaff 7, hay 5, potatoes 4.

Sales effected were:—

Wheaten Chaff.—Ex Albury, (13144) 6/1; Hamblin, Ganmain, (12140) 6/6, (1005) 7/, (14256) 6/5, (1712) 6/6, (15166) 6/7; Farrar, Namboot, (876) 5/7; Ceeley, Derrain, (13094) 7/6; Patterson, Harefield, (13488) 6/6 per cwt.

Lucerne Hay.—Cater, Coledale, (14239) 4/1 per cwt.

Oaten Chaff.—Rowlands, Wangoola, (7995) 7/ per cwt.

FRUIT MARKET.

Citrus fruits were again short supplied to the Bathurst-street fruit markets yesterday morning. As soon as the weather clears, and growers are able to pull the citrus fruits, the market will no doubt become over-supplied. If mandarins are not pulled within a few days after rain they swell. Consequently growers hasten to send in their supplies.

Interstate fruit was attracting a fair amount of attention from buyers. This week's shipment from Tasmania amounted to 20,000 cases. Some of the merchants had good cause to complain about the manner and condition in which they received their fruit. In one instance a carter arrived with his load at 6.30 a.m. and could not return with his load till 11 a.m. By 4 o'clock he had conveyed two more loads from the wharf to the market. Many of the cases had been wet by the rain, and had to be repacked. When the cases have been unloaded from the steamer they are covered with tarpaulins, as there is no other convenient covering. Very often the tarpaulins are removed, and the fruit left exposed to the rain. For some considerable time the selling agents of Tasmanian fruit in the Bathurst-street markets have been dissatisfied with the delay in unloading certain shipments and the inconveniences the carters have to contend with, as well as the lack of shelter for the fruit when it is unloaded in wet weather.

Current quotations were:—

Apples.—Local: Dessert, extra choice 8/ to 9/, choice 7/, medium 5/ to 6/, small 3/6 to 4/; cooking, choice 7/ to 7/6, good 6/ to 6/6; jam, 3/6 per gin-case. PRESS CRITICISM.

MR. BAMFORD'S PROPOSAL.

MELBOURNE, Tuesday.

In the House of Representatives to-day, Mr. Bamford (Q.) gave notice that on August 29, he would move, "That, in the opinion of this House the Government take immediate action to protect members of this Parliament from the aspersions and misrepresentations of the newspaper press, by making an order that when any article or paragraph appears in a newspaper reflecting upon the good conduct or integrity of a member, which, in the opinion of the said member is calculated to prejudice him in the eyes of the community, and the member affected by personal explanation or otherwise declares that the statements so made in regard to himself are erroneous, misleading, and injurious, and the House in good faith accepts such statement, no representative or representatives of the newspaper implicated be allowed within the precincts of Parliament, unless, or until, the explanation or contradiction made by the aggrieved member be given equal prominence in the aforesaid newspaper, as was given to the offending article or paragraph."

THE KADINA MISHAP.

BRISBANE, Tuesday.

The Marine Board have decided that the Kadina must be docked at Brisbane. The 800 tons of cargo which she has on board for Sydney will be unloaded here and transhipped.

ACTORS' ASSOCIATION.

The first annual dinner of the Australasian Actors' Association was a success from every point of view, and showed how strong the movement had been among Australian theatrical folk. Mr. Fred Niblow was welcomed and, in replying, said that he was in full sympathy with the association. He was a member of the White Rats, the American Actors' Association, which was the pattern of the Australasian one, and which was the largest theatrical organisation in the world, with a membership of 15,000 and a financial strength of £250,000. He strongly urged the Australasian actors to do all in their power to maintain the standard of Australian art.

TRADES AND LABOUR.

TRAMWAY CLERICAL BOARD.

The conference which was arranged in connection with the Tramway Clerical Board sat on Monday and Tuesday in camera. It is an interum conference, and at its commencement it was understood that an attempt would be made to clear up several matters which had cropped up during the hearing of the evidence, and subsequently continue the taking of evidence on any remaining points.

TRAMWAY CLERICAL BOARD.

The parties before the Tramway Clerical Board met yesterday in an interim conference for the purpose of considering matters which had been mentiond last week when evidence was being taken.

CITY COUNCIL AND PLUMBERS.

At last night's meeting of the City Council it was decided to increase the wages of the plumbers employed by the council to 12s per day, although it was pointed out by the finance committee that the Public Works Department, the Railway Commissioners, the Tramway Department, and the Water and Sewerage Board paid 11s per day, similar to the council.

MINING.

A STEADIER NOTE SOUNDED.

SPECULATION NOT SO LISTLESS.

LEAD AND TIN UP—COPPER SHADE EASIER.

The appearance of the market yesterday morning was a little more cheerful than on the opening day of the week. This did not show itself so much in regard to the amount of business transacted—though that was an improvement—as it did in the steadier prices ruling, especially for silver and copper stocks.

There were some slight variations in the quotations of the London Stock Exchange on Monday, and they were not in favour of scrip-holders, but, taken generally, the tone of the London market was a fairly solid one. For instance, improved offers were made for British (old), Zinc Corporation (ord. and preference), whilst North Broken Hill were quoted steady at £6/8/9. As against this, Broken Hill Proprietary and Broken Hill Block 10 were quoted a shade easier. The fact that lead was 2/6 better, and that spelter was steady at £25/15/, helped to make things more cheerful.

Despite a decline of 10/ in the price of copper, improved offers were made in London for Great Cobars, Mount Lyells, and Hampdens, whilst Mount Elliotts held a steady position. On the other hand, Mount Morgans were quoted a fraction easier. Taken altogether, therefore, London indicated a fairly steady market on leading lines.

Both these circumstances were the cause of the steadier tone sounded locally. In the silver division, transactions on slightly steadier lines were booked in Broken Hill Proprietary, Broken Hill Junctions (ord.), Broken Hill Junction North, and British Broken Hill (old), whilst Zinc Corporation (ord.) made another good advance, said to be due to the exceptionally good mill work done during the past month. The buying offers made for Broken Hill Souths (contg) improved sympathetically with the better feeling ruling, whilst holders of the paid scrip declined to quote near the last sale. Solid offers were made for Sulphide Corporation, Amalgamated Zincs were firmly held, whilst improved offers for Zinc Corporation (pref.) failed to draw sellers. On the other hand, weak London quotations for B.H. Block 10 caused weak local offers.

Copper propositions were rather quiet, but transactions on steady lines were booked in Hampdens, M'Gregors, and Budgery. Both Mount Elliotts and Mount Morgans were held firmly, with inquiries for St. Mungo. The Chillagoe group was quiet, likewise Mount Oxides.

Gold shares were dull, whilst tin was represented by steady sales in Tongkah Harbour, and easier ones in Vegetable Creek. There were inquiries for Tongkah Compound, but sellers quoted wide.

Extreme quietness ruled during the afternoon, hence the amount of business transacted was small. Values, however, were well maintained in the silver section. In copper stocks Hampdens finished up firm, whilst Mount Oxide Options firmed a little on the previous day's weak sales.

The smelting operations of the Wallaroo and Moonta Co. during the fortnight ended July 29 are officially recorded as follows:—"Ore received from Wallaroo mines, 2691 tons of 9 per cent; ore received from Moonta mines, 371 tons of 11 per cent; and precipitate, 38 tons of 78 per cent; ore smelted, 3274 tons; copper placed to store, 200 tons; sulphuric acid delivered, 228 tons."

The Araluen Valley Gold Dredging Co. reports a yield of 43oz 15dwt for the past week.

At the New Burragorang silver mine (Yerranderie), the Clark shaft was last week deepened 12ft to 234ft. The lode in the face 8 to 9 inches. Heavy rains have fallen since last report, and hampered the erection of the air compressor.

The five dredges of the Tewksbury Amalgamated Co. in the past fortnight handled 59,408 cubic yards of material for 167oz of gold. The value of the ground was 2.732d per cubic yard. During the same period the dredge of the Ovens Valley Co. treated 10,361 cubic yards of material for 22½oz gold, the value of the ground being 2.887d per cubic yard.

ASSAYER AND ANALYST, Reasonable fees, Scale on application. C. [illegible], A.I.M.M., 98 Pitt-st.—Advt.

The Chillagoe Company reports:—Muldiva, Eclipse: Lower tunnel, west drive, stopped at 100ft in barren formation. Winze No. 3 stopped at 22ft. At 22ft, underhand stoping rich copper ore; west stope breaking ore. Started winze No. 4; down 9ft in good lead ore. Good copper ore now coming in bottom east shaft. 100ft level: West drive extended 14ft; face in gossan copper; copper ore underfoot, from 6ft to 12ft. At 10ft this ore 3ft, up face 2ft wide. Samples from here assay 10 per cent. copper and 3oz silver. Gully shaft: Water out; starting men in face. Paisley: Lindon shaft stopped at 31ft. Short of men. George mine: Clearing out cut. Shipped 10 tons lead ore. Ore shipments, 82 tons for week.

The Stanthorpe Tin Dredging Company, in a run of 204 hours, obtained 4 tons 17cwt of tin oxide.

The manager of the Associated Gold Dredging Company reports that No. 2 dredge won 52oz of gold for 201 hours work. A little time was lost, owing to a slight flood in the river. This did no damage, and has replenished the water supply. The wash, which is still tight, is showing signs of getting easier, and the value of the ground is improving as work progresses.

The output of ore from the Hercules Mine (Tasmania) for the week ended July 19 was:—550 tons of sulphide ore to Zeehan, leaving on hand 40 tons of sulphides, and 40 tons of zinc ore.

MINING IN THE STATE.

BATHURST, Tuesday.

During the sitting of the Mining Warden's Court at Hill End a large number of tenements which had not been used for some considerable time were declared forfeited. Owing, no doubt, to the price of copper, mining in the Cow Flat part of the district is making a move. Several men are now employed at the Sugar Loaf mine, it having recently changed hands. Prospecting operations have commenced on a new lease recently taken up. Machinery and material are being carted to the Little Limestone Flat marble quarry, which is near the Sugar Loaf mine. The recent rains have stimulated the mining industry throughout the district generally. The outlook at Hill End is now regarded as highly favourable. At the Locksley copper mine satisfactory returns have been obtained. The ore, which has a width of 17ft, will, it is figured, average from 5 to 10 per cent. as broken. The shaft is now down 95ft, and the management is considering the advisableness of putting in the plant required.

BROKEN HILL MINES.

BROKEN HILL, Tuesday.

On the South mine last week two winzes from 970ft level were deepened in ore, that in section E1 showing sulphides assaying 16.6 per cent. lead, 8oz silver, and 18.2 per cent. zinc. The south drive on this level is still in ore going 16 per cent. lead, 5oz silver, and 12.2 per cent. zinc, with the footwall showing on the eastern side. The south drive (1170 feet level) was extended to 190½ feet, also in good sulphides, with the footwall showing.

At the Zinc Corporation, which includes the South Blocks, the main south drive (No. 5 level) ore body averaged 3.2 per cent. lead, 1.2oz silver, and 2.9 per cent. zinc. The ore cut out at 514 feet, and after going through 5ft of mineralised country, the drive was turned easterly. A winze started 65ft north of crosscut was sunk 11ft through ore going 17 per cent. lead, 2.7oz silver, and 13.1 per cent. zinc. The winze from No. 4 level on the zinc lode was deepened to 35ft in ore going 2.2 per cent. lead, 2.7 oz silver, and 23.5 per cent. zinc.

The mill of the B.H. Junction mine is acting so well that a third shift was started last night. Only two shifts are underground, however, and will be carried on for the present until the plant gets into fuller swing. The mill is making a high grade lead concentrate, and a first shipment under contract to the B.H. Proprietary Company will be made this week. The tonnage treated is naturally low at present, but less time than is usually the case has been lost for stoppages and adjustments. A middlings elevator has been put in commission, and a start been made for the erection of new electrical power plant. When this is up the completion of flotation plant will be proceeded with. Meantime, tailings from the lead mill are being stacked for retreatment. With regard to development work underground, the crosscut on 150ft level, section A.C., was carried to 38ft in high grade ore, and the winze being sunk about half-way along the crosscut is down 8ft, also in good ore. The 675ft level is also opening up excellently. Stoping is proceeding at the 700, 550, 675, and 775 feet levels. The B.H. Block 14 Company last week raised and despatched 500 tons of the usual grade carbonates to Port Pirie. There still seems to be plenty of carbonates in the mine. A parcel of sulphides will be sent to the B.H. Junction North plant this week for trial treatment.

The B.H. Block 10 Company, during the fortnight ended July 24, despatched 575 tons of concentrates, 624 tons of new mill by-products, and 121 tons of old mill by-products. During the four weeks ended July 24, 7671 tons of crude ore were treated, producing 1039 tons concentrates, assaying 38.3 silver, 61.7 lead, and 6.9 zinc.

CHILLAGOE COMPANY.

MELBOURNE, Tuesday.

The Chillagoe Company reports that the quantity of ore treated for the four weeks ended July 19 was 3867 tons, and the metals recovered 189 tons of copper, 5100oz of silver, and 798oz of gold.

BRITISH BROKEN HILL COMPANY.

NEW ISSUE UNDERWRITTEN.

ADELAIDE, Tuesday.

The Adelaide office of the British Broken Hill Company advised to-day that the formal resolutions regarding the increased capital were carried at Monday's meeting held in London, when it was announced that Messrs. Lionel Robinson, Clarke, and Co., and Baillieau, had underwritten 60,000 shares at 50/, for a commission of 5 per cent. The shares will be offered pro rata to shareholders on a date to be fixed. A confirmatory meeting has been arranged for August 14.

A GREAT MARKET FOR AUSTRALIA.

"OPEN UP AMERICA."

MR. NIELSEN'S REPORT.

BRIGHT PROSPECTS.

The Premier tabled in the Assembly yesterday Mr. Nielsen's report on his mission to America, which is full of important and interesting matter:—

"The conclusions that I have come to as a result of my eight months' work here are," says Mr. Nielsen:—

(1) That an almost unlimited market exists here for all pastoral primary products, and a considerable number of our agricultural primary products; for hardwood timber, for coal, for cocoanut oil, for some fruits in all seasons, and for all fruits in the off season here; for many of the vegetables that will stand carriage, such as potatoes and onions.

The United States has arrived at the stage when it cannot supply all its own needs in this respect, and each year that passes will accentuate this state of affairs, and although it continues to export to some extent this only again emphasises the scarcity of food products in its home markets. For some of the agricultural products that it has to buy it depends on Canada, but Canada will never be seriously regarded as a pastoral country, and its agricultural products only cover a very few lines. I feel it is for us in Australia to supply the food products required here, and our doing so will not only benefit this country largely by bringing down prices to the consumer to a reasonable figure, but in the transaction we will get the benefit of the millions of dollars that will be spent for these products, of which we have such a full supply.

When the Panama Canal is cut we will be in a much better position as far as the Eastern States are concerned, as by shipping to New Orleans we will be able to get into direct touch with the great Mississippi Valley, where most of the manufactured articles which we buy from America are made.

IRRIGATION.

(1) That the eastern coast of Australia, comprising the States of New South Wales, Queensland, and Victoria, can be made quite as productive as any similar area in any part of the United States of America or Canada.

(2) That irrigation and the storage of water will amply repay the cost thereof, not only in dry country, but also to supplement the rainfall of all except the wettest portions of our country.

(3) That a more extensive use should be made of our artesian water supply in the direction of applying it to irrigation, and that a proper system of regulating the artesian water-bearing basins be devised and carried out to secure an organised control of this valuable underground supply, so that it may not be depleted while being fully used.

(4) That in a country such as Australia every available river, especially the western-flowing ones, should be used as a central line of a continuous series of irrigation settlements, and that the necessary locks and weirs should be constructed as quickly as possible, so that the supply of water for irrigation purposes may be assured.

5. That navigation of our western rivers should in every instance be made secondary to irrigation, as other means of transport can be found in railways, while the water that is allowed to flow to the sea is forever lost to the use of the producing industries along the courses of these rivers, and reduces enormously the producing and population carrying capacity of our country, and in a dry country cannot be replaced. The country in America that carries the densest agricultural population has drained its rivers dry, used the water on its lands, and built railways to take to its market the enormous production resulting.

6. That the State should give special encouragement to those practising intensive cultivation, based upon the smallness of the area occupied, in the proportion to the results obtained therefrom.

IMMIGRATION.

1. That a general scheme of immigration be organised to secure a drift of population from the United States and Canada to Australia, the inducements to be offered being the payment by the Government of half the second-class fare to Australia of any white immigrant from the United States or Canada who can show that he can land in Australia with a capital of five hundred dollars, is of good character, and approved for such concession, and that anyone so approved showing 1000 dollars capital be granted half a first-class fare or two-thirds of a second.

2. That the concessions now being offered to expert irrigators be extended to at least one hundred families.

In regard to the above, I wish to say that I have found that the class of American or Canadian who will make the most desirable addition to our population will not travel third-class; he prefers to spend some of his own money to travel in greater comfort, hence it is useless to offer a concession consisting of a part of a third-class fare. I feel sure that the shipping companies now running to Australia will be prepared to make a reduction in their rates to these classes of selected immigrants.

The farmer here is a much more finished product than any of the farmers or farm labourers that we may secure from Great Britain and the continent of Europe. He is used to working under similar conditions of climate, and is here producing exactly the same commodities as he will produce on settling in Australia, with this advantage, that, owing to the denser population here, and the dearness of land, he is used to being compelled to get the last grain possible off his farm, and so he works his land in a manner that only a very few of our very best farmers have so far adopted in Australia. He will bring this experience with him to our country, and so from our point of view he is to us the most valuable class of immigrant that we could possibly get, and when we know, as I have found out since I have been here, that this class of farmer is obtainable for our country in thousands, I feel that it will be a great loss to Australia if we allow him to go to the frozen country North instead of securing him for the genial climate and responsive acres that are waiting for him in Australia.

The time is here now when the rising generation of farmers in this country, as well as the most progressive of the older men, are forced to look for an outlet for their energies that is not available for them in their own country. Canada holds out a constant invitation to them, and many of them accept it for want of a better opportunity. We can offer them much better prospects, and I am sure, that as soon as we offer some such terms as I suggest herein, and advertise the facts that we are doing so, we will get for both dry and irrigated areas, good farmers in thousands for many years to come, with enough capital to start on in Australia.

RECOMMENDATIONS.

(1) Taking all these things into consideration, and in view of the striking possibilities of trade increase between Australia and America, I heartily recommend the establishment of a permanent commercial commissioner's office on the West Coast of America, with headquarters at San Francisco. My opinion is that this office should properly be a Federal one, representing Australia as a whole; but until the Commonwealth Government realises the advantage of this, the State of New South Wales has everything to gain and nothing to lose by taking up this burden for itself and the rest of the States of Australia.

A little way down the street where my office is, there is an office "boosting" Californian land, and this window is constantly surrounded by eager, prospective settlers, owing to the fine display that is contains. We could easily show a finer, as New South Wales is in every way a better country than California, but the people here have brought advertising the land in their State up to a fine art, and we must do the same.

Mr. Nielsen states that the cost of a permanent agency would be £5000 a year. He also recommends the establishment of a branch office at Vancouver.

Continuing his recommendations he then states:—

(2) That the Federal Government be urged to appoint someone to see the Governing authorities at Washington, and Ottawa, with a view to securing reciprocity arrangements with the United States and Canada, so that our shippers may be able to compete on equal terms with other countries exporting similar products to these countries.

(3) That for the purpose of initiating and establishing the trade in meat and other frozen products, the State Government provide the necessary cold storage at this end, charging the shippers a merely nominal rate for its use, and that, with this end in view, a contract be entered into with one or more of the cold storage companies here for a term of two years, so that shippers will be protected from any attempt to corner the cold storage space.

(4) That arrangements be made to have the inspection of all frozen products carried out in the manner which the laws of this country demand, so that no hitch will occur in getting the products landed and admitted to the markets here.

(5) That a display of our furniture woods be obtained and sent here for exhibition (in the office of your representative).

(6) That a sample shipment of our hardwood blocks, for street-paving be sent to be laid down in the chief cities of this coast, and that samples of railway sleepers be also sent, so that the railway companies here may be able to test the superiority of our woods for this purpose.

(7) That a good display of the products of New South Wales be supplied, and that they be added to monthly so that the display be always kept fully up-to-date.

(8) That arrangements be at once made to secure the necessary space at the coming Panama-Pacific exposition, so that an effective display of our primary and manufactured products may be made at this important world's fair.

OBSTACLES TO TRADE.

In another part of his report Mr. Nielsen states:—"I found that the principal obstacles to trade between Australia and America were:—Firstly, the coastal shipping laws of the United States, which bar any foreign ship from trading between one port of United States territory and any other port. This would prevent an Australian ship loading, say, frozen meat for Honolulu, and then getting other loading there for San Francisco, or any other American port. Secondly, the tariff of the United States, which acts against the importation of all primary products, and which is especially severe on wool; and, thirdly, the reciprocity arrangement which the New Zealand Government has with Canada, which gives that country an advantage of ½d per lb on all frozen products over Australia.

"There are many other smaller matters which seem designed to hamper trade, such as stringent food inspection laws, which can be, and sometimes are, used to keep out even the best and most wholesome products of any other country, where such compete with local productions; and then there are interested rings, trusts, and corporations, the officers of which are constantly on the watch to try to prevent the competition of any outsider in the lines of business that they are exploiting. However, these can all be got over, or beaten, by careful work, and judicious diplomacy, but authority is necessary from the Federal Government to secure the removal of the big restrictions. The minor ones can be overcome by the State Government giving the shippers the necessary assistance to enable them to get their products in.

"A market exists, and an eager market, for many of our primary products, such as meat, butter, leather, hides, hardwood timber, coal, fruit, vegetables (such as potatoes and onions), cocoa-nut oil, etc., and all these markets can be exploited by our producers, bringing millions of pounds to our country annually.

IRRIGATION SETTLERS.

"Wherever I went I found that I could secure a much larger number of expert irrigators than the number I was limited to, and my greatest difficulty lay in reducing the number of applicants to the few I thought advisable to accept from each State or locality. As I was only allowed to give special concessions to twenty, I thought it best to get these twenty from as widely diversified classes of irrigation country and irrigation work as possible. The conditions I made were very stringent, so that none but the best available could comply with them, and I satisfied myself in each instance as to the capabilities of each individual sent."

MELANESIAN MISSION.

WELCOME TO THE BISHOP.

His Excellency the Governor, Lord Chelmsford, presided at the annual festival of the Melanesian Mission, and welcome to the new Bishop of Melanesia, Dr. Cecil Wood, held last night at Concordia Hall, Elizabeth-street.

THE NEW BISHOP OF MELANESIA.

Lord Chelmsford said it must be a great encouragement to the Bishop of Melanesia to see such a large gathering present to welcome him. A great responsibility was upon Australia as to how she would attempt to deal with the work, and responsibility which she could not possibly shirk if she were going to claim to be a Christian nation, proud of its Christian faith. Last year was a very momentous one in the history of the Melanesian Mission.

A great many problems were going to face Dr. Wood. It was a great temptation, unless one restricted oneself, to attempt to tackle problems before looking round them, and his Excellency hoped no keen supporters would attempt to hurry the decision of the bishop on the various problems he was going to take up.

On behalf of the Archbishop, the Dean of Sydney welcomed the Bishop of Melanesia, who had an enthusiastic reception on rising to respond.

Dr. Wood thanked them for the welcome accorded him, and said he hoped to come back to Sydney and tell them what he had been doing in Melanesia. It had been decided that his headquarters were to be in the Solomon Islands.

THE GRIP OF SIN.

DR. CHAPMAN'S MESSAGE.

THE PILOT SONG.

The most enjoyable item on the programme at the great mission gathering in the Town Hall last evening was the singing of the Pilot Song by Mr. Naftzger. Mr. Alexander had warmed up the meeting with some hearty choir and Congregational singing; then Mr. Naftzger mounted the rostrum, and in a silence that could be felt sang the words of Ada Habershon's hymn:—

A Pilot who knoweth the dangers at hand,
A Pilot who bringeth all vessels to land;
Yes, this is the Pilot, the Pilot we need,
And He is a pilot indeed.
Is He yours? Is He yours?
Is this Saviour, who loves you, yours?

The choir joined in the refrain. "Is He yours?" "Now everybody," cried Mr. Alexander, and 5000 people joined in the chorus.

Dr. Chapman's topic was "Sin," and his text, "He shall be holden with the cords of his sin." The preacher showed the significance of the text by saying that they could wind a thread round him that he could break. If they wound it round a dozen or a hundred times he might still break away. But there came a time when the accumulated threads were too strong, and bound him fast. Sin was like that. It always had small beginnings, so it should be all the more feared.

THREE MEETINGS.

Three other meetings were held during the day by the evangelists. The first was held in the Y.M.C.A. Hall at 10 o'clock, and was for the especial benefit of the railway and tramway men. Mr. Alexander led some hearty singing, after which Dr. Chapman delivered a stirring address on the text, "Be Strong in the Lord."

The midday meeting in the Town Hall was packed to the doors, chiefly with business men and women. Dr. Chapman delivered the second of his special addresses on the great facts of the universe, dealing with "The Fact of Sin, and its Influence in the World."

In the quiet-hour talk to the 1500 people who assembled in the Town Hall at 3 o'clock Dr. Chapman spoke on the topic of the Holy Spirit.

GIRL'S INFATUATION.

PECULIAR CASE OF THEFT.

WELLINGTON (N.Z.), Monday.

A curious case of infatuation is reported from Christchurch. Constance M'Cracken, a barmaid, 18 years of age, was charged with stealing £20 from a customer, who had tendered a note for that amount in payment for drinks. She kept the note, and the next day left with a young man of the same age as herself for Sydney, but she was arrested at Wellington.

The mother of the young man offered to take charge of the girl, who consented to that course, but she escaped, and rejoined the lad. She was rearrested, and sentenced to two years' reformation treatment.

LATE SPORTING.

THE TURF.

Pony and galloway racing will be the attraction at Kensington this afternoon, and an interesting programme foreshadows good racing. The transit arrangements include special trams to the racecourse gates, while the ordinary service to Kensington will also be available. Large entries have been received, and in some instances it will be necessary to run in divisions. The first race is timed for 1.30 p.m., and the results of the racing may be anticipated as under:—Fourteen-one Handicap: Realm, Remembrance, Wairoa. Flying Handicap: First division, Rylstone Lassie or Simola: second division, Molla or Gainful. Novice Handicap: First division, Hammond or Flatina; second division, Pam or Sir Allan. Fourteen-two Handicap: Edna, Miss Soult, Merton Queen. Approved Stakes: Flavite, Battleship, Regal. Fourteen Hands Handicap: First division, Neat or Outcast; second division, Habit or Demand. Kensington Handicap: Bombardment, Alberto, Carson.

The programme is announced for the August meeting of the Wollongong Jockey Club on the 13th prox. The prize-money totals £100, of which £25 each goes to the Illawara Stakes and the Wollongong Mile, and entries will be received by the secretary, Mr. J. Denmeade, up to 4 p.m. on Tuesday next, the 6th prox.

The A.J.C. has issued its lists of licensed trainers and jockeys for the coming season, as well as that of apprentices to whom permission is given to ride in races. There are no changes of importance in the trainers and jockeys' personnel, but the name of a prominent apprentice does not figure on the list.

The scratchings recorded yesterday at the office of the A.J.C. were Marlborough out of the Epsom Handicap and the Metropolitan, El Chico, Norahform, and Malt Extract out of the Derby, 1912, and the St. Leger, 1913, and Gilliallambi out of the Breeders' Plate, and Gimcrack Stakes, 1912.

Simar was yesterday struck out of all engagements in connection with the Moorefield July meeting.

Our local correspondent telegraphs that owing to the course being partly under water, the Muswellbrook Jockey Club's race meeting has been postponed until Saturday, August 10.

Our Wagga correspondent writes that a renewal of the license of several Riverina trainers and bookmakers is said to have been refused by the Southern District Racing Association. Among them are one or two who are well known on country courses.

The New South Wales Trotting Association recently made inquiry as to an allegation that at a meeting of the Wagga Trotting Club two disqualified owners were admitted to the paddock. An explanation was demanded. It was to the effect that the men in question were present without the knowledge of the committee or other officials. The explanation was accepted.

The result of the ballot for the election of six members of committee of the Queensland Turf Club (wires our Brisbane correspondent) was announced yesterday as under:—Messrs. A. H. Whittingham, 323; Isaac J. Moore, 314; W. J. Hooper, 299; Harry Brookes, 288; J. L. Ramsay, 255; J. Cadell Garrick, 194. The latter two were re-elected.

The inclement weather yesterday prevented the Australian Trotting Club from carrying out its postponed fixture, and, consequently, the meeting has been abandoned.

Trainers had the use of the cinder track at Randwick yesterday morning, and all the regular attendants were out. Malt Flag was responsible for six furlongs at a sound pace, and Beverage ran a strong round. Piastre and Psyttyx went freely over a mile, and Perdita did steady work. Lady Medallist put in twice round at a sound pace, and Malthus ran six furlongs in good style, as did Dextrine and Debutante, separately. Malt King was not out of half pace, but Havocorn ran a strong round. Cowl put six furlongs past at a sound pace, and Flaxen moved freely over a furlong further. Matouree went steadily, and Golden Hop did half-pace work. Irishman was not fully extended over six furlongs. A steady mile was run by Cider and Barios. Popinjay went usefully alone, and Haze ran a strong round. Rosedrop spurted half a mile in good style, and Miocene ran a solid round. A steady mile was covered by Mashtun. Ladies' Man and Harpist accounted for a useful round, and St. Medoc went at half pace. Jacamar was restricted to half pace work, and Blairgour went steadily. Vice-Admiral, Allegory, Peirene and Canute all spurted after steady work. Lochano ran a strong mile, and Cisco went steadily. Bronze and Ermengarde each did useful tasks. Prince Lack ran a solid round, and Duke Foote put in a steady mile. Useful tasks were registered by Sunlike, Electramile, Torula, Wyealla, Alured, Elystan, Malthusian, Pine Ridge, Prince Maltster, and several others.

The declaration of final forfeit for the Victorian Amateur Turf Club's Australian Steeplechase, to be decided next Saturday, leaves 20 acceptors, and, should all face the music, the field will be seven more than took the track for the big race over the battens a year ago. Only three of last year's field are included in the acceptors—Arquebuse, who won under 11st 5lb, or 8lb less than he will have to put up on Saturday, Flash Jack, who carried 9st into second place, and on this occasion will have to carry 9lb more and Black Native, who, with 9st in the saddle, finished among the others, will this time carry a similar burden. New Zealand is represented among the acceptors by Wimmera, South Australia by Arquebuse, Tasmania by Flavel, and New South Wales by Warwidgerie.

Owing to the continuous unfavourable weather, the New South Wales Trotting Club's meeting, which was postponed until Thursday, the 1st prox., has been further deferred until the following Thursday.

Messrs. H. Chisholm and Co. report having sold on account of Mr. Mat Ellis, Victoria, the brood mare Kinglot (sister to Armlet), 7yrs, by Menschikoff from Armilla, with a filly foal (by Bobadil) at foot, and served by him again. The mare and foal are expected to reach Sydney this week from Bonny Vale, Victoria, and go on to one of the Hunter River stud farms. Armilla, the dam of Ringlet, has produced some successful racehorses in New Zealand, and is also the dam of Armigera, who produced Ingoda, a mare that was sold at the dispersal sale of the Elderslie Stud for 800 gns.

The Cowra Jockey Club has allotted £500 prize-money for the Show meeting. There are six races on the card for each day.

At the last meeting of the directors of the Katoomba Jockey Club tenders were received for the clearing of the extra five acres on the ground recently purchased from the Government for the formation of the club's racecourse, and it was decided to accept a local tender, and have the work commenced forthwith. It was unanimously decided to have the course proper prepared by day labour, under the supervision of the directors. Mr. R. Hennessey was appointed overseer, and it is hoped by the move to effect a saving of nearly £500. Another call of £5, bringing the subscribed capital up to £20, was ordered, and the secretary was instructed to issue interim scrip paid up to £15.

The following are the acceptances for the South Broken Hill Cup to be run on Saturday: Green Seal, Master Maelgwyn, Sergius, Monte Matto, Banffshire, Hamburg, Chi Chi, Wyndarra, Hotspur, Loyal Scot, Anchentoul.

In view of the coming spring racing campaign, the publication of "Miller's Sporting Pamphlet" comes opportunely, and the 37th issue of that useful work shows several improvements on its predecessors. The number under notice comprises 240 pages, or 22 pages more than that of last year, and it contains the full performances of every horse weighted for the A.J.C. Metropolitan, the Caulfield Cup, and the Melbourne Cup, together with description, age, weights, pedigrees, riders' colours, and owners and trainers' names. The lists of horses engaged in the classic races of the spring are also included, as is a list of the blood stock sales of the last season, as well as tabulated records of the principal Australian races. The pamphlet bears evidence of careful and accurate compilation, the information in all branches of sport is up to date, and the volume is a valuable addition to the sportsman's library.

A TROTTING BOYCOTT.

HOBART, Tuesday.

A special meeting of the Tasmanian Trotting Owners' Association was held last night to consider what action should be taken regarding the small stakes offered by the Hobart Trotting Club. Figures were quoted to show that the approximate profit of the Hobart Trotting Club on its last meeting, was £143, and contended that it was not unreasonable to ask for increased stakes, the average profit on every meeting being from £100 to £130. The chairman, Mr. J. Levy, said that the whole crux of the question they had to decide was whether owners were going to allow the profits to accumulate, or were they going to have a share of them. After a general discussion, the following motion was carried.—"That as the Hobart Trotting Club has not raised the stakes, so as to bring them into line with the Tasmanian Trotting Club's stakes, less allowance for rent of course, the members of the Tasmanian Trotting Owners' Association do not nominate for the next meeting of the Hobart Trotting Club."

VICTORIAN SPORTING NOTES.

MELBOURNE, Tuesday.

Whatever prospects Vanguard had of starting in the Australian Steeplechase disappeared yesterday, when he sustained further injuries. These were caused while in the act of rolling at Caulfield.

Nangar showed signs of lameness after working at Flemington this morning.

One hundred and 60 days' racing was held in the metropolitan area during the season which ends on Wednesday. Stakes given at these meetings amounted to £160,601, as against £147,945 during the previous season. The four leading clubs in Melbourne (V.R.C., V.A.T.C., Williamstown, and Moonee Valley) alone distributed £118,001, as against £109,600 during last season. Other clubs racing under the V.R.C. rules contributed £17,600, and Mr. Wren's Club (approximately) £25,000.

The Australian Hurdle Race candidate, Uxbridge, jumped hurdles at Flemington this morning, and shaped well. Lion was also given some practice over hurdles.

Arquebuse jumped hurdles at Caulfield, where Wimmera went nicely over a mile and a quarter on the grass.

H. J. Morgan will probably ride Ballista in the Australian Hurdle Race. Ballista was taken from Caulfield to Mentone to-day, and, in company with Wingarara, went two miles over hurdles. Both shaped well.

No rider has yet been engaged for Wimmera.

COURSING.

NATIONAL COURSING ASSOCIATION.

The draw for the New South Wales National Coursing Association ladies' bracelet meeting, which was postponed last week as the result of continued rain, will take place to-day at Usher's Metropolitan Hotel, at 11.30 a.m. There was some doubt as to whether it would be advisable to hold the meeting or not, owing to the fact that during part of Monday portion of the enclosure was under water, but Mr. Lamb was in town yesterday and expressed the opinion that the ground would be in a fit state for coursing on Thursday. The various events have all filled well, and everything points to the meeting being a most successful one. The association has arranged for a special train, which will leave the Central Station each morning at 10.5 a.m., and return to the city at 6.13 p.m.

MUDGEE CLUB.

MUDGEE, Monday.

The Mudgee District Coursing Club held a meeting on Saturday. The course was heavy, as the result of the recent rains. There was a fair attendance. Results:—

Maiden Stakes.—Mr. A. Commin's Osmic, 1; Messrs. Lee and Phelp's Unlucky, 2.

Novice Stakes.—Mr. L. Greentree's Lively Coon, 1; Mr. H. Bratly's Lady Clestre, 2.

FOOTBALL.

BRITISH ASSOCIATION.

GARDINER CUP SEMI-FINALS.

The draw for the semi-finals of the Gardiner Cup competition resulted as follows:—Sydney v winner of Corrimal-Garden Island; Cessnock v Balmain A or Balmain C-Burns' Anniversary.

AN "INTERNATIONAL" MATCH.

A match has been arranged to take place at Mosman Oval on Friday next, August 2, at 10 a.m., between teams representing English and French woolbuyers. Mr. Anders (English) and Mr. Juldon (French) have charge of the arrangements in connection with the personnel of the teams for the match, which will thus take the form of an international contest.

SELECTION OF N.S.W. TEAM.

The names of several prominent players were received too late to be considered in the selection of the New South Wales team for Queensland, while on the other hand a number of first-class players did not submit their names for selection.

AUSTRALIAN.

ADELAIDE, Tuesday.

At a meeting of the Football League held last night a letter, received from the New South Wales League, asking that a team should visit Sydney to play a match, was read, and regret expressed that, owing to the lateness of the season, the request could not be entertained.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—I saw the team to represent New South Wales against East Fremantle next Saturday in your paper the other day, and I would like to know what they are going to do for their ruck, as I fail to see where they have picked any ruck men, and as that is one of the most important places on the field I think the selectors would do justice in playing North Sydney's champion follower, W. Hughes, as I reckon he is one of the best followers in the State at the present time.

I am, etc.,
OLD-TIME VICTORIAN FOOTBALLER.

ARMIDALE, Monday.

The North-western Union team (Inverell) visited Armidale to-day, and met the New England Union team (Armidale) at the Sports Ground, when, notwithstanding the wet weather, a good game resulted. New England won by 6 points to 3. The visitors were welcomed and entertained at dinner at the Imperial Hotel.

COROWA, Monday.

Results of the Rutherglen and district football premiership matches played on Saturday:—Rutherglen, 47 points, beat Corowa, 17 points; Lake Rovers, 38 points, beat Albury, 20 points; Howlong, 62 points, beat Balldale, 1 point.

CYCLING AND MOTORING.

NOTES AND NEWS.

The prize list for the 15 miles open road race of the Parramatta Bicycle Club, to be decided on August 24, is:—Carbine cycle, with Flite tyres, presented by Mr. T. W. Henderson, 1; £2 2s, presented by Mr. A. G. Hadley, 2; the third and fourth prizes are provided for by the League of N.S.W. Wheelmen. The fastest time prize is a set of Flite tyres, presented by the Parnet, Glass, Rubber Co., Ltd., while cash prizes are offered for the second fastest, the first Parramatta member not taking any other prize, and the first member of the club supplying the largest number of entrants, and not taking any other prize. Nominations fall due on August 10, and the course will be from the park gates, Parramatta, to a point 7½ miles out on the Windsor-road, and back to the starting point. For the leagues' teams' championship, Messrs. F. D. Walcott and J. O. Tickner will captain Nos. 1 and 2 teams respectively.

SYDNEY MOTOR CYCLE CLUB.

The above club's reliability run set down for Saturday has been postponed owing to the bad state of the roads.

BOWLS.

ASSOCIATION MATTERS.

The general committee of the New South Wales Bowling Association met last evening at the Royal Hotel. The president, Mr. Spence, occupied the chair.

A letter was read from the secretary of the Australian Bowling Council in reply to the request from the association for permission to play the match, New South Wales v Queensland, at Brisbane, in September. The reply was that the council had fixed the interstate matches for the year, and could not alter its decision.

The secretary said he had fixed August 15 as the latest date to receive nominations, and the team would go to Brisbane in September.

The letter from the council was received, and the action of the secretary of the association approved of.

AUSTRALIANS AT GLASGOW.

The team of New South Wales bowlers now in Great Britain was referred to in "Punch" recently. That paper heads a paragraph "The Glasgow Touch." It is a reprint of a paragraph from a Glasgow paper, as follows:—"Mr. Cosh took exception to the proposal of the magistrates to give the Australian bowlers an afternoon reception on the occasion of their visit to Glasgow. He moved that the minute be sent back for further consideration. Mr. Alexander M'Clure seconded, in order, he explained, that more adequate arrangements might be made for the reception of the Australians. Baillie M'Millan having explained that the reception proposed meant only a cup of tea, the minutes were almost unanimously adopted." As "Punch" says: "Any comment on this would spoil its simple beauty."

BATHURST, Tuesday.

The bowling tournament which has been running on the local green was advanced another stage, when M. Thompson won from W. A. Field, 21-12.

GOULBURN, Monday.

Mr. Hector Ross has been re-elected delegate to represent the bowling club at the New South Wales Bowling Association.

CRICKET.

GLEBE DISTRICT CLUB.

The annual meeting of the Glebe District Club was held last Thursday at the University Hotel, Mr. J. A. Hogue (president) occupied the chair. There was a large gathering.

The annual report and balance-sheet was adopted.

The following were elected as office-bearers for the ensuing year:—Patron, the Mayor of the Glebe; president, Mr. J. A. Hogue; vice-presidents, Messrs. L. G. Adams, N. J. Blue, W. Bardsley, W. G. Bulfin, A. Buckle, F. Buckle, senr., M. R. Cranney, S. L. Cole, J. C. Davis, T. Keegan, F. Kurtz, T. Law, C. H. West, R. Walker, and Dr. Sydney Jones; general committee, Messrs. Warren Bardsley, F. Bardsley; hon. secretary, Mr. C. McCarthy; hon. secretary of B team, Mr. Q. McGill; hon. secretary of C team, Mr. O. W. Plunkett; hon. auditors, Messrs. S. Newell and R. Twohill.

Twelve new members were elected.

It was announced that the club would next season place four, if not five, teams in the field.

It was decided to ask the New South Wales Cricket Association to take steps in the direction of appealing to the military authorities to allow the youths attending compulsory drill to have fewer Saturday parades, as it interfered with cricket and other sports very considerably.

REDFERN DISTRICT CLUB.

The annual meeting of the Redfern District Club was held in the Redfern Town Hall on Thursday night. There was a large gathering of members, and Mr. Clayton (vice-president of the New South Wales Cricket Association) was also present. The president of the club (Alderman George W. Howe) presided.

The report and balance-sheet was adopted.

The following were elected as officers for the ensuing year:—Patron, the Premier (Mr. J. S. T. McGowen); president, Alderman G. W. Howie; a large number of vice-presidents were also elected; hon. secretary, Mr. C. G. McMillan; hon. treasurer, Mr. A. H. Vincent; assistant secretaries, first team Mr. T. Foster, second team Mr. R. Walker, third team, Mr. R. Sayle; delegates to the New South Wales Cricket Association, Messrs. McMillan and Goddard; general committee, Messrs. Mailey, Everett, Sayle, Grummett, Emery, Goddard, and Walker; selection committee, first team Messrs. Goddard, White, and McMillan, second team Messrs. Walker, Sayle, and Grummett, third team Messrs. Brenchley, Lanan, and Austin.

Trophies won during last season were presented to the successful players.

NORTH SYDNEY CRICKET ASSOCIATION.

The first annual report of the North Sydney Cricket Association has been issued to members, and shows a satisfactory condition of affairs. It was formed in August of last year, and embraces what were known as the Greater North Sydney Association and the Northern Suburbs Cricket Association. Seventeen clubs were granted affiliation, and 365 members were registered. Two grades were conducted, six teams taking part in the A grade, and twelve in the B grade. The Methodist Club were the winners in the first grade competition, scoring 22 points out of a possible 30. They won nine and lost one match. The runners-up were the Kirribilli C.C., with 19 points. They won eight matches and lost two.

The second grade competition was secured by the Chatswood Club, who scored 30 out of a possible 35 points, winning ten matches, losing one, and drawing one. North Sydney Institute were the runners-up, with 28 points (11 matches won). By their success Chatswood became the owners of the Brainwood Cup and a set of medals presented by the association.

In the first grade S. Brainwood secured the batting average with 45.80, followed by S. Haron 43, and L. Quinn 35.54. In the bowling department the pride of position was divided between H. Gray and W. Tamsett, with averages of 9.80, Gray getting 40 and Tamsett 16 wickets respectively. W. Langley was next, with an average of 10.22.

In the second grade P. J. Carew secured the pride of position with a batting average of 57.08, with P. Forsyth second, with 44.66. H. Challis secured the bowling average of 5.63, and W. Johnson one of 6.76.

The financial statement shows a credit balance of £33 19s 11d.

NORTH SYDNEY CLUB.

The annual meeting of the North Sydney District Club was held at the local Town Hall on Friday evening, when Alderman A. G. Milson (president) presided over a large gathering.

The annual report, which has already been published, was read and adopted. The balance-sheet was of a satisfactory character, and showed a credit balance. It was adopted.

Reference was made to the death of Mr. Hume, general regret was expressed, and a motion was carried, instructing the secretary to forward a letter of sympathy to his relatives in their sad bereavement. Feeling reference was also made to the death of Mr. R. A. Duff, a former member of the club, who won renown on the cricket fields of England and Australia. It is intended to in some way perpetuate his memory, and a subscription list will be opened for that purpose.

The following officers were elected for the ensuing year:—Patron, Mr. Dugald Thomson; president, Mr. A. G. Milson; general committee, Messrs. D. Meadowcroft, R. V. Minnett, H. M. Barker, A. E. Johnston, L. Clarke, C. Charlton, W. Von der Heyde, W. Coltman, and Rev. E. North-Ash; selection committees—First team, Messrs. A. J. Hopkins, L. A. Minnett, and A. E. Johnston; second team, Messrs. W. R. Jones, W. Coltman, and L. Clarke; third team, Messrs. G. G. Tremlett, E. Selby, and C. P. Allen; fourth team, Messrs. A. T. Tedder, D. Lous, and C. Charlton; delegates to the N.S.W. Cricket Association, Mr. W. R. Jones and Dr. Poidevin; delegates to City and Suburban C.A., Messrs. Tedder and C. R. Swan; hon. treasurer, Mr. L. A. Minnett; hon. secretary, Mr. G. G. Tremlett; assistant hon. secretary, Mr. E. Selby; hon. secretary fourth team, Mr. A. T. Tedder.

PADDINGTON CLUB ANNUAL.

Mr. C. W. Oakes presided at the Paddington Club's nineteenth annual meeting, when there was a very large attendance.

The members presented Mr. M. A. Noble with a framed photographic enlargement of the Hordern Shield, which was won right out by the club. Mr. Noble's services were freely recognised by the speakers.

It was decided to alter the rules so as to enable the captain to be elected by the players, instead of the members of the club making the selection.

The club is financially in a good position, the balance-sheet showing a credit balance of £46.

The officers selected are: Patron, Mr. C. W. Oakes; president, Mr. A. M. Sweetnam; hon. secretary, Mr. H. B. Falconer; hon. treasurer, Mr. A. C. Y. Miller; delegates to N.S.W. Cricket Association, Messrs. J. T. Pope and H. B. Falconer; match secretaries—First eleven Mr. G. L. Sayle, second eleven Mr. R. Mahony, third eleven Mr. L. E. Johnson, veterans Mr. G. L. Sayle; selection committee—First eleven, Messrs. M. A. Noble, G. L. Sayle, L. A. Cody; second eleven, Messrs. H. B. Falconer, A. C. Y. Miller, T. H. Boxward, third eleven, Messrs. L. E. Johnson, R. Vicars; president, Alderman J. Thornley; hon. secretary, Mr. G. S. Travis; assistant secretary, Mr. R. E. Moore; treasurer, Mr. G. W. Glass; committee, Messrs. H. Collins, F. W. Grant, W. A. Pettit, J. Steel, T. O'Keefe, J. G. Carroll, W. White, G. H. Adam, and J. Y. Iddles; selection committee—First team, Messrs. G. F. Humphries, T. Shortis, and T. O'Keefe; second team, Messrs. W. White, W. A. Pettit, and R. Asprey; third team, Messrs. R. S. Moore, J. Glover, and H. Watson.

MOORE PARK ASSOCIATION.

The annual meeting of the Moore Park Cricket Association was held last week.

The secretary's report showed that the season had been most successful, 19 clubs competing in the competitions, of which the A grade and Park Memorial Cup were secured by the Ultimo C.C., and the B grade by the Sydney Junior B. C. Coffey, who scored 1004 runs, making five centuries, averaging 125.5 per innings.

The treasurer's statement showed a credit balance of £2 8s 5d. Officers were elected:—President, Mr. J. H. Taylor; secretary, Mr. C. Murray; treasurer, Mr. H. Knight; auditors, Messrs. P. Smith and A. E. Nutt.

WAVERLEY CLUB ANNUAL MEETING.

G. Hewlett.

Mr. C. E. Sheppard was presented with a silver-mounted cricket ball to recognise his achievement of the hat-trick in a match against a Paddington team.

WESTERN SUBURBS CHURCHES UNION MEETING.

The annual meeting of the above union was held last week. The Rev. C. H. Statham took the chair. The report showed that the union had passed the first decade of its existence, having been formed on July 24, 1902, with eight teams. Last season there were 34 teams playing the competitions, representing 27 churches, and a total membership of 856 players. The A grade competition was won by Petersham Congregational, with Croydon Congregational runners-up; the B grade by Enmore Tabernacle, with St. David's, Dobroyde, runners-up; and the C grade by Camdenville C.E., with Croydon Congregational B runners-up for the second year in succession. The A Grade Cup was presented to the Petersham Congregational Club, and medals to the three winning teams. The report also mentioned that the union had its own grounds at Wardell-road, Cook's River, of which seven acres absolutely belonged to the union, and 13 acres were now under lease, with an option of purchase. After electing the Rev. C. J. Tinsley as the president for the ensuing season, the meeting adjourned till Wednesday, August 7.

KOSCIUSKO CARNIVAL.

WOMEN'S HOCKEY.

A match was played yesterday between teams representing Wandah and Kookooburra. The latter won by 6 goals to 4.

ROWING.

INVITATION TO KINNEAR.

HOBART, Tuesday.

The secretary of the Tasmanian Rowing Association sent a cablegram to-day to the Agent-General (Sir John M'Call) stating that the association wished him to ask W. D. Kinnear, the amateur champion sculler of the world, through his club, to visit Tasmania during December and January next, to row in the regattas and for the championship. It is understood that an offer of expenses will be made. The regattas held during the months mentioned are those at New Norfolk, Shipwright's Point, and Hobart. Kinnear, if he comes, will also compete in the other States.

SWIMMING.

OLYMPIC GAMES.

The following will show the names of competitors and countries against whom the Australasian representatives were drawn in the preliminary heats of some of the swimming events which were decided at the recent Olympic games at Stockholm.

Longworth, who did not compete owing to illness, was drawn in the 100 metres against Hebner and Duke Kahanamoku, of the United States, Gerard Meister, of France, Von Rimanoczy, of Hungary, and Bellezza, of Italy; in the 400 metres against Nerich (U.S.A.), Kenyery (Austria), Matucha (Bohemia), Bangerter (France), and Cigheri (Italy); and in the 1500 metres he was drawn to meet Pernot (France), Goodwin (U.S.A.), Hedegaard (Denmark), Hodgson (Canada) and Broft (Bohemia).

Miss Durack won the final, with Miss Wylie second.

In the teams race the first heat consisted of Hungary, England, Austria, France, and United States, and the second of Australasia, Sweden, Germany, and Italy. Australasia won the final.

BOXING.

COX OUTPOINTS WALKER.

Dave Walker, the Victorian middleweight, opposed Sid Cox, of Mortdale, at the Gaiety Athletic Club last night, with the result that Cox gained an easy win on points, at the end of 20 dreary rounds.

BENEFIT AT THE GAIETY.

To-morrow night, at the Gaiety Athletic Club, a benefit will be tendered to the widow and children of the late Alfred Robinson.

CASUALTIES.

A GANGER KILLED.

AT EVELEIGH TUNNEL.

At about 8.30 on Monday John Byrnes, 50, a ganger, of Oxford-street, Newtown, was killed at the Eveleigh railway tunnel. The accident was, as far as is known, unobserved. Byrnes, however, must have been crossing the lines long which a fast-moving train was approaching, when he either missed his footing or failed to cross in time. The Civil Ambulance took the mutilated body to Sydney Hospital, where Dr. Northcote pronounced life extinct.

BABY ACCIDENTALLY SMOTHERED.

At an inquest conducted by the City Coroner yesterday it was found that a one-month-old baby named Francis Albert Stenlund, the son of Agnes Ada Stenlund, of 62 Union-street, Pyrmont, died on July 23 or 24 from "asphyxia, through being accidentally overlain."

WOMAN'S DEATH AT MANLY.

Yesterday Mrs. Jeannie Cohen, 1, the wife of Henry Cohen, was found dead in a bedroom of her husband's boarding-house, in West Esplanade, Manly. A deep wound was noticed in her throat, and one hand held her husband's razor, blood-stained. Dr. Bennetts, of Manly, states that the deceased had been in a "very perturbed state of mind for some time."

FATAL FALL DOWN A HOLD.

NEWCASTLE, Tuesday.

Cornelius M'Carthy, 'bosun on the ship Cromdale, lying at Hexham, fell down the hold of the vessel on Monday, and was killed. The accident was not witnessed by anyone, but some members of the crew heard a thud, and on looking down the hold saw M'Carthy's body lying at the bottom. Deceased's skull was badly fractured, and death was apparently instantaneous.

RAILWAY INSPECTOR KILLED.

BRISBANE, Tuesday.

Information was received from Rockhampton to the effect that a goods train, which left that city at 11.50 a.m. yesterday, struck a maintenance inspector named Kyle, who was on a tricycle, near the Maitland Crossing. The train returned to Rockhampton immediately, but on arrival the inspector was dead.

BLACKSMITH'S DEATH.

KEMPSEY, Tuesday.

A young man named Boulton, a blacksmith, of Greenhill, met with an accident on Friday last, when a piece of red ho. iron pierced his stomach. He was operated on on Sunday last, but died last night.

CEMENT DUTIES.

MELBOURNE, Tuesday.

The Minister for Customs was to-day approached by a deputation representing the men who had struck for increased wages at the Richmond cement works. The men said that their employers had informed them that unless the duty on imported cement was increased, their wages could not be raised.

Mr. Tudor, in reply, said the matter would be considered.

HUSBAND'S THREAT.

TO CUT WIFE'S HEART OUT.

BROKEN HILL, Tuesday.

William Thomas Roberts, charged with using threatening words towards his wife, was bound over to keep the peace for 12 months. Mrs. Roberts, who is employed as a domestic by a local doctor, said that defendant asked her to make it up with him, and when she refused he threatened to "cut her heart out and hang it round her neck," and then cut his own throat. He also threatened "to cut her eyes out and her nose and ears off." When sentenced, Roberts said: "I will do my time like a Trojan, because I am innocent."

QUADRUPLICATION.

It is anticipated that the quadruplex section of the railway lines from Redfern tunnel to Sydenham will be opened for traffic in October next. The extension of the quadruplication as far as Rockdale, and eventually to Hurstville, is contemplated, but it cannot be stated at present when the work will be put in hand.

THE WEATHER.

MORE HEAVY RAINS.

MANY FROSTS INLAND.

The big high pressure still lies over the continent, covering it for the most part, excepting in the south-west corner, where the very energetic Antarctic disturbance was situated. The centre of the high pressure is still over Tasmania, but shows signs of losing its energy. The distribution of pressure yesterday indicated a clearing of the coastal wet weather, but of a gradual character. Some more showers.

Yesterday's rainfalls were light to moderate in character, and confined to the north-east quarter and the southern coast and tablelands. Some heavy falls, associated with thunder, occurred on the central and northern seaboard, chief of which were:—Ballina 348 points, Manning Heads 245, Cape Byron 240, Clarence Heads, 228, Nambucca 190, Dungog 154, Raymond Terrace 150, Lismore 141, Camden Haven 148, Port Macquarie 133, Casino 134, Paterson 127, Bulahdelah 126, Mullumbimby 115, Grafton 114, Gosford 106, and Wyong 103. An additional 47 points were registered in the city. The rain fell mostly in the early morning, some of the showers being heavy.

The weather was cloudy to showery along the coast and tablelands, but otherwise it was fine and clear.

Temperatures declined in parts of the central districts, and here and there in the south-west. As a consequence, frosts occurred at scattered places on the central and south-western slopes and plains, and also in Riverina. The lowest temperature reported was 28 degrees at Narrandera (in Riverina). There were also several other scattered places with the morning readings just below 32 degrees.

Details of the rainfall for the 24 hours ended 9 a.m. yesterday were as follow:—

Angledool 9 points, Araluen [illegible], Armidale 44, Ballina 348, Barraba 15, Bateman's Bay [illegible], Becroft 54, Bega 8, Bingara 7, Blackheath [illegible], Bodalla 6, Boggabilla 8, Boggabri 9, Boorni 2, Bowral 14, Braidwood 6, Bulahdella 126, Bundarra 18, Byron Bay 240, Camden Haven 140, Candelo 3, Cape Hawke 88, Casino 134, Cassilis 3, Clarence Heads 228, Coonabarabran 2, Coonamble 12, Crookhaven 20, Crookwell 2, Dungog 154, Eden 4, Emmaville 1[illegible], Glebe Point 54, Glen Innes 6, Gloucester 84, Goulburn [illegible], Grafton 114, Green Cape 30, Gresford 106, Hunter's Hill 53, Inverell 25, Jerry's Plains 12, Jervis Bay 10, Katoomba 70, Kempsey 80, Kiama [illegible], Killara 78, Kurrajong 33, Lawson 26, Lismore 141, Maitland 67, Manning Heads 245, Merriwa [illegible], Moruya 3, Milla 11, Moree 5, Moss Vale 30, Mount Victoria 25, Mullumbimby 115, Murrurundi 10, Muswellbrook 33, Nambucca 190, Narrabri 13, Newcastle 12, [illegible] 4, Nowra 16, Nundle 4, Parramatta 33, Paterson 127, Penrith 13, Picton 4, Port Macquarie 133, Port Stephens 66, Quambone 2, Raymond Terrace 150, Riverview 61, Scone 23, Seal Rocks 72, Singleton 53, Springwood 16, Sydney 47, Sutton Forest 45, Tabulam [illegible], Taralga 18, Taree 25, Tenterfield 26, Tweed Heads 64, Ulladulla 48, Walcha 1, Warialda 28, Wee Waa 49, Windsor 13, Wollongong 63, Wyong 103, Yetman 4.

Additional reports to 6 p.m.: Port Macquarie [illegible] points, Sydney 28, Newcastle 7.

BOWRAVILLE.—The weather is again very boisterous, torrential rain falling throughout Monday. Over 3 inches has been recorded. Ploughing has been retarded, but farmers are anticipating a good season.

CASINO.—For the month of June 335 points of rain was recorded at Casino. It was raining heavily on Tuesday, 135 points being registered to 9 a.m.

CESSNOCK.—Five inches of rain fell last week. The creeks in the district are all running high, and the low-lying country is under water. The farmers have had more than enough rain for all purposes, and much damage has been done to roads and culverts.

JAMBEROO.—A further rainfall on Monday night gave 60 points. The total for the recent rainstorm was 11 inches 66 points. It is still cloudy, with the nights very cold.

KEMPSEY.—Eighty-two points were registered on Monday. There are signs of clearing. Nine inches have fallen in the past eight days.

QUEANBEYAN.—The flood in the river washed the aproaches of the bridge to Acton away.

ULMARRA.—Further heavy rains have fallen throughout the whole Clarence district during the last few days. The total fall at Ulmarra so far has been fully 5½ inches. The frequent rains have had the effect of warding off frosts, and the winter has been one of the mildest on record. A splendid spring is already noticeable in the pastures, and the prospects are very bright for the coming season.

WEST MAITLAND.—The weather continues unsettled. The sun was shining for a few hours this morning, but rain set in again. The river attained a height of 19ft this morning, but it has been falling slowly all day.

WOLLONGONG.—Rain continues to fall here, although there was every indication of it clearing this morning. It is having a bad effect on the cattle, and, as a result, the milk supply is diminishing.

QUEENSLAND RAIN.

BRISBANE, Tuesday.

The following rainfalls were registered in Queensland during the 24 hours ended 9 a.m. to-day:—

Southern.—Darling Downs, Allora 25 points, Cambooya 33, Clifton 26, Dalby 16, Dalveen 8, Greenmount 52, Goondiwindi 3, Inglewood 17, Jondaryan 17, Killarney 33, Leyburn 60, Marmadilla [illegible], Millmerran 18, Pratten 33, Stanthorpe 9, Texas 6, Toowoomba 6, Wallangarra 20, Warwick 11.

Metropolitan.—Boggo Junction 35 points, Bowen Hills 10, Goodna 18, Indooroopilly 1[illegible], Manly 11, Mayne 10, Nudgee 15, Nundah [illegible], Pinkenba 35, Rocklea 22, Toowong 16, and Yeerongpilly [illegible].

COUNTRY FIRE.

WAGGA WAGGA, Tuesday.

At about 4.30 o'clock this morning a fire broke out in the principal portion of a commercial block of the town. It occurred in the furniture department of David Copland and Co., the largest merchandise business in the district. Fortunately, a number of people were about, and the fire was noticed before it had secured a thorough hold. Had the discovery not been timely, enormous destruction would probably have resulted, as the premises are situated in the centre of the principal places of business. As it was, considerable damage was done before the flames were extinguished. The damage is estimated at from £[illegible] to £[illegible]. A large stock of bedding and furniture was burnt, and the building at the rear of the premises was totally destroyed. The property was insured.

STATE PARLIAMENTS.

QUEENSLAND.

BRISBANE, Tuesday.

In the Assembly to-day, in reply to Mr. Mahon, the Minister for Railways said that the Renard-road train imported some time ago cost £4106, the road made for the train cost £2762, the working expenses were £[illegible], and the earnings of the train £[illegible]. As a result of the working of the train two others had been imported by private companies, and were working successfully. The debate on the Address in Reply was resumed by Mr. Hunter, who charged the Government with failing to face problems like the [illegible] and rabbit pests. Mr. Blair advocated the abolition of the District Court and substitution of an amalgamated court. There was no reason why Judges should not be of the same status. An amalgamated court would expedite work and save expense. He dealt at some length with strike matters, and said that Mr. Fisher had made a mistake. The necessity for drastic action had been a very real one. The men who went out were ill-advised, and such advice would never again emanate from the Trades Hall. In the Legislative Council to-day the debate on the Address in Reply was resumed and further adjourned.

PHYLLOXERA RESISTANT ROOTLINGS.

MELBOURNE, Tuesday.

A systematic reconstruction of the vineyards, particularly in the north-eastern districts, is being carried out vigorously in Victoria. The Department of Agriculture is distributing at less than half cost large quantities of phylloxera resistant rootlings. The department sent out [illegible] of these grafted rootlings. The applications for this year amounted to [illegible], while the department has already been notified that supplies to the extent of [illegible] will be wanted for next year. In addition to these grafted rootlings, the department has for some time been distributing 50,000 or 60,000 ingrafted rootlings annually.

EARLY PORT PHILLIP.

At the Royal Society's Home last evening Captain J. H. Watson read to the members of the Australian Historical Society a paper entitled "Early Port Phillip and Victoria in the 'Sixties.'" Lantern slides showing early maps and views enhanced the interest of his reading.

Captain Watson, after dealing with the history of the settlement of Victoria, stated that [illegible] the first white man to settle within Port Phillip. Reference was then made by the lecturer to the convict William Buckley, the "Crusoe of Australia, who [illegible] the aboriginals after 32 years [illegible]. It was thought that this man would be of valuable assistance in promoting an understanding between [illegible] and whites, but such expectations were doomed to disappointment.

AMUSEMENTS.

THE THEATRES.

"Kismet" has entered upon its last week at the [illegible], and Hajj's vicissitudes will at length come to an end, so far as the Sydney public are concerned. One is left, however, with the prospect of Hajj setting out on his pilgrimage to Mecca, which has indeed been made the subject of a separate play.

The best of things come to an end at last, and only three more nights remain for seeing, at the Criterion [illegible], the delightful imbroglio of mirth, music, and mischief which composer Strauss' opera, known in English as [illegible]." The opera has enjoyed a most successful run in Sydney, and indeed deserves its triumphs to the full.

The locally-written spectacular-military drama of Sydney life, "The Girl Who Loved a Soldier," is attracting large audiences at the Adelphi. The author (Wil[illegible] Walsh) makes the most of the comedy role, Toby [illegible], a boy scout; and Hugh Buckler and Violet Paget are meeting with much favour as the hero and heroine.

Allen Doone and Miss Edna Keeley are attracting large audiences to the Palace Theatre, where their talented company are playing "Sweet County Kerry." The play is of a romantic type, the scene laid in the early 18th century, and owes a great deal of its popularity to the excellent acting of Mr. Doone himself.

The management of the Tivoli Theatre are presenting an excellent programme this week, and well-filled houses are the natural result. The Four Amaranths, Alec Hurley, the Brothers Webb, Niagara and Falls, Miss [illegible], Frank J. Sydney and Co., and Fred. [illegible] Powers, are among the artists contributing.

The remarkable juggling and acrobatic feats performed by the members of the Pechilli Troupe are an outstanding feature of the current programme at the National Amphitheatre. Bessie Slaughter, Shipp and [illegible], Prof. Karl and his pony, Les Francois, Francis [illegible], and a number of others also make up an [illegible] entertainment.

Crowded houses are attending the Empire Theatre in Oxford-street, where a sparkling vaudeville entertainment is given nightly. The current programme includes, among other items, Levresto, whose juggling feats arouse intense interest, Farrell and Verroll, introducing a one-legged dance, the Musical Blanchards, the Rollicking Rockleys, an amusing pair of dancers, Johnny Gilmore, Charles Prior, and the Martin Sisters.

The box plan for the J. C. Williamson comedy season at the Criterion Theatre will open at Paling's this morning, the first production being "Get-Rich-Quick Wallingford." The central character will be assumed by Mr. Fred Niblo, who will have as his accomplice "Blackie" Mr. Harry Corson Clarke, Miss Josephine Cohan, Miss Margaret [illegible], Mr. James H. Manning, and Miss Marian [illegible], and a carefully-chosen supporting company will appear.

OTHER ENTERTAINMENTS.

What will probably prove to be one of the most important, as well as enjoyable, concerts ever held in Sydney will be given on Thursday, August 15, in the afternoon, at the Town Hall, by the Quinlan Symphony Orchestra, which has been specially augmented to 65 performers. Messrs. Tullio Voghera, Ernest Knoch, and Robert Roth will conduct by turns, while Mme. Agnes Nicholls will sing an aria from Mozart's "Mariage de Figaro." The Pathetic Symphony (No. 5) of Tschaikowsky will be the principal feature of the programme.

In continuation of the celebration of the Patronal Festival of St. James' Church, Mr. Arthur Mason, formerly city organist, and also organist of St. James' Church, will give an organ recital to-night after evensong (7.30). The choir will sing the cantata "God, Thou Art Great" (Spohr), under the direction of Mr. G. Faunce Allman.

Mr. Joseph Vial's farewell concert will be given in the Y.M.C.A. Hall this evening, when the young Newcastle violinist will play compositions of Mendelssohn, Schubert, Monk, and Drdla, and the Mendelssohn trio for violin, 'cello, and piano, with Miss C. Bailey and Mr. C. Gotsch. The other assisting artists will be Misses Kitty O'Hara, E. Linnane, and I. Roberts, the students of the Garcia School of Music, and Mr. Nelson Illingworth.

The complimentary concert to initiate the study fund for Miss Lottie Dearn will be given in the Concordia Hall to-morrow evening, when the young pianist will play Beethoven's Concerto in C Major, Mendelssohn's "Capriccio Brilliante," and Rubinstein's Concerto in D, with orchestra (conducted by Mr. W. [illegible]), Mr. H. Staell as leader, and Miss Alicia Rain as accompanist. Songs will be given by Misses Dorothy Grace and Leah Myers, and Messrs. Sid. McDonald and A. Camphausen. The plan is at Paling's.

A number of new pieces will be introduced by the [illegible] Fisher students at the Y.M.C.A. Hall on Tuesday, August 6. The assisting artists will be Miss Daisy Sweet, Mr. Charles Philip, and Mr. Frederick Whitlow, who leaves shortly for Europe. Plan is now open at Paling's.

La Mascotte, Audran's sparkling 3-act comic opera, will be staged by the amateurs of Beecroft Musical and Dramatic Society at the local School of Arts for three nights, commencing on Saturday next. The stage will be under the direction of Mr. Fred. England, and Mr. McKern will conduct the orchestra. The caste is as follows: Prince Lament, Mr. Meadmore; Rocco, Mr. Meadmore, junior; Pippo, Mr. Riemenschneider; Frittelini, Mr. A. Flemming; Bettina, Miss Edie Hunt; Fiametta, Miss Ivy Fishlie; Parafante, Miss Gladys Lee.

"Another's Guilt," the chief picture at the Princess and Olympia theatres, has attracted large attendances during the week. The story concerns the life of a farmer who has been falsely charged with the crime of murder. "Pathe's London Gazette" provides interesting entertainment for the large audience. To-morrow night there will be a new programme of the latest novelties by mail. De Groen's band discourses pleasing music at each performance. There will be a matinee on Saturday.

A stirring 2000ft battle drama, "A Soldier's Honour," is the principal subject in Spencer's moving picture programme at the Lyceum Theatre. The film portrays the change wrought in a young lieutenant's soldiering career by the loss of a wife's affection. Another series illustrates the scenic grandeur of the Jenolan Caves. Last night a further collection of screen successes to hand by yesterday's English mail was presented.

The programme at the Crystal Palace on Thursday will include—Love That Never Fails, Potters of the Nile, The Chauffeur, the Girl and the Cop, Last of the Black Hand Gang, Charlie's Reform, Williams' Family, The Farmer's Daughter, and Tontolini's Quid. In addition to the pictures, a variety of other attractions are open to the public.

Tin Can Rattle, What An Ass, Passing of the Old Four-wheeler, The Best Paid, and Gontran Elopes will be shown on Thursday at the Lyric. The Gentleman Ranker, Bobby the Magic Gardener, Is He Eligible? Siza and Vicesara, Dead Man's Claim, and Arabella Seeks a Sweetheart will appear at Colonial No. 1, while at Colonial No. 2 will be The Unknown Violinist, Tweedledum's Sweet Wife, Bibbie's Revenge, The River Thames, The Devil, the Servant and the Man, and A Football Absurdity.

The next special attraction at the Imperial Roller Rink will be the "Night in Japan" on Monday, August 5. The big building will be illuminated and decorated on a Japanese plan, and as one of the displays of the evening Messrs. J. C. Bendrodt (manager) and G. C. Irving (first assistant) will give an exhibition of fancy and scientific skating.

A gorgeous spectacle is promised to those who are in the habit of frequenting the Glaciarium, as the management have announced their intention of holding their annual fancy costume ice carnival on Tuesday evening, August 20. On this occasion a representation of the Pleasure Gardens of Allahabad will be given. In the meantime the popularity of the ice seems in no degree diminished.

A dramatic recital will be given in St. James' Hall on Saturday, August 10, by Miss Ella Crone, who has just returned from London, where she won the scholarship of the Academy of Dramatic Art. The recital comprises character sketches, musical monologues, a Shakespearean scene, and a comedy acted in conjunction with Mr. Kingston Hewitt. The plan will be at Paling's next Friday.

An interesting programme will be presented by Mr. David Burt, violinist, and Mr. John Carlton Fay, pianist, at their concert at the Concordia Hall, Elizabeth-street, on Friday evening next, August 2. In addition to playing the Schumann pianoforte concerto with string orchestra, Mr. Fay will play pieces by Chopin, Pershaw, Liszt-Paganini, Scriabine, Mendelssohn, and MacDowell. Mr. David Burt will play Handel's Sonata for violin and piano, and Wieniawski's second concerto with string orchestra. Miss Florence Osborne, Miss Daisy Sweet, Mr. Nelson Illingworth, and Mr. Carl Gotsch will assist. The plan is now open at Nicholson's.

The 75 Canadian cadets who are to tour Australasia will arrive in Sydney on Saturday next. The programme arranged for them during their stay will include a military display at the Sports Ground on Wednesday next, and a concert at the Concordia Hall, Elizabeth-street, on the following evening, Thursday. In addition to performances at the Sports Ground by the Canadian Cadets' Band, bugle band, fife and drum band, and an exhibition of fancy manoeuvres, there will be a grand march in which the Australian cadets will join, headed by the Royal Artillery Band. The plan for the concert is now open at Nicholson's.

HARRY DIVER BENEFIT AT THE ADELPHI.

On Thursday afternoon next, at 2 o'clock, a grand complimentary benefit, in which all the leading musical, dramatic, and vaudeville artists at present in Sydney will appear, will be tendered to Mr. Harry Diver, who, owing to very severe illness, will not be able to appear again on any stage. Notable amongst those appearing will be the members of the Oscar Asche-Lily Brayton Company, the members of the J. C. Williamson New Comic Opera Company, members of Harry Rickards' Tivoli Theatre Company, of Brennan's National Amphitheatre Company, and Allen Doone and Miss Edna Keeley and Company from the Palace Theatre. The members of the Quinlan Opera Company, of George Marlow Ltd.'s Adelphi Theatre Company, of the J. C. Bain Vaudeville Company, and many other well-known artists have volunteered their services, and will appear. Mr. Hugh J. Ward is president, and Mr. George Willoughby treasurer of the benefit movement.

It is announced to-day that Mr. Oscar Asche and Miss Lily Brayton, with their London company, will appear in "Othello" on Saturday week. Mr. Asche will, of course, play Othello, and Miss Brayton Desdemona. Mr. Herbert Grimwood will be Iago. The booking arrangements are notified.

SYDNEY'S WATER SUPPLY.

What progress had been made with regard to the amplification scheme for an improved water supply for Sydney and suburbs was asked of the Minister for Works by Mr. Taylor in the Assembly yesterday afternoon.

In reply, it was explained that of the amplification works authorised by Parliament, 1407 lineal yards of the total length of 2970 of 42-inch cast-iron main had been laid, and the pipes were being put under ground as fast as received from the foundry. Drawings and specifications for the third 6ft steel pipe from Pipe Head to Potts' Hill were approaching completion. The water supply to Sydney would soon be augmented by 10,000,000 gallons per day. An extra 1,500,000 gallons per day would also be secured to the district north of Port Jackson, exclusive of Manly, by pumping from Pipe Head.

SURRENDERING POWERS.

MELBOURNE, Tuesday.

The Tasmanian Premier (Mr. Solomon) and the Attorney-General of Queensland (Mr. O'Sullivan) to-day conferred with the Victorian Premier regarding the bill which their respective States propose to introduce to provide for the surrender of certain powers to the Commonwealth. Mr. O'Sullivan handed Mr. Watt the draft of a bill which he had prepared. It was agreed that Mr. Watt should have it reported upon by Professor Harrison Moore, and that efforts should be made to have a uniform bill introduced by the three States, and any others which would agree to take joint action with them.

NEW ZEALAND.

BUSH FIRES RAGING.

WELLINGTON (N.Z.), Tuesday.

While most parts of the country have been reporting cold and stormy weather, with interruptions to shipping and telegraphic communication, Greymouth advices state that easterly winds and fine weather for the last 20 days have parched the country. Bush fires are raging in all directions.

DOMINION POLITICS.

AUCKLAND, Tuesday.

In the course of an interview, Sir Joseph Ward expressed the opinion that sooner or later an appeal must be made to the country unless the present political situation, which he regarded as unique—a party representing a minority of votes in New Zealand being in power—was desired by the people themselves. Referring to Canada and the Imperial Navy, he said the scheme which the Canadian Government was arranging with the Admiralty was the very best that could be decided upon. He had always been against isolated local navies, and had stood for a great united fleet, with portions placed in the waters of the overseas dominions.

SEAGULL II. IN TOW.

ARE YOU USING "IZAL" PREPARATIONS?

"IZAL" is a Disinfectant, a Germicide, and an Antiseptic, and is procurable as a liquid, a powder—or a paste.

"IZAL," THE PERFECT DISINFECTANT.

Medical "Izal" is used medically and surgically, wherever a powerful, safe, and certain antiseptic is applicable—also in the form of Lozenges, Toilet Creams, Tooth Powder, Ointment, and Perles (capsules).

"IZAL" THE GREAT ANTISEPTIC.

Ordinary "Izal" is a powerful disinfecting fluid, twenty times as powerful as pure carbolic acid. It never loses its power by exposure or long keeping, and mixes equally as well with fresh, salt, or brackish water.

"IZAL" THE GERM KILLER.

Ordinary "Izal" is so strong that one gallon is sufficient to make 400 gallons of disinfecting fluid that effectually destroys all germ life and removes all offensive odours. "Izal is non-corrosive, and relatively non-poisonous.

"Izal" Disinfectant—a teaspoon full to 10 pints of water makes a strong household disinfectant.

"IZAL" FOR DOCTOR, HOUSEWIFE, FARMER, DAIRYMAN, ORCHARDIST, GARDENER.

ORDINARY "IZAL."
In 5-gallon Drums, price 30/ ea.
2-gallon drums, price 14/6 ea.
1-gallon Drums, price 7/6 ea.
1 pint Tins, price 2/6 ea.
8-oz Tins, price 1/ ea.
8-oz Bottles, price 1/6 ea.

"IZAL" DISINFECTANT POWDER.
Equally effective as the liquid.
In 1lb Tins, price 9d ea.

"IZAL" LOZENGES, for Colds and all Throat affections.
46 in Box, price 1/6 box.

"IZAL" TOILET CREAMS, an excellent preparation, price 1/9 Tube.

"IZAL" TOOTH POWDER, an elegant germicide for the mouth, price 9d.

IMPROVED "IZAL" PERLES (Capsules) for internal use in tropical and other diseases.
25 in Box, price 1/3 box.
75 in Box, price 3/ box.

"IZAL" EMBROCATION, an effective stimulant for sprains, strains, etc, in man or beast.
Price 1/6.

"IZAL" is delightful in the bath—is valuable as a mouth wash and gargle. Everybody who keeps Poultry, Bees, or stock of any kind will find "Izal" indispensable—the gardener, too, will find in it an excellent exterminator of the pests that infect trees, shrubs and plants.

WHY ACTRESSES NEVER GROW OLD.

You will find that women in general admire and envy actresses their wonderful youth. We know that —— is all out fifty, but she only looks twenty-one! Her skin is so fresh and clear, without a wrinkle, and here lies the secret of her youth and beauty and her success in life. The constant attention that an actress must give her skin is in a great measure responsible for its perfection. The preparation greatly used by the profession is a Liquid Face Powder, KEE-VEE-V. This is an excellent Skin Tonic, prescribed by leading skin specialists in cases of eczema or eruptions, pimples and blackheads. The tonic keeps the skin taut and firm, and prevents wrinkles, and has, in addition, a specially prepared Face Powder, which gives that soft, clear complexion so much admired. The massage required in applying is sufficient to keep the skin in perfect condition. To avoid disappointment be sure of getting the Genuine and Refuse all Substitutes. KEE-VEE-V is obtainable in flesh and cream tints, at 2/6 per bottle, from all chemists; or posted for 3/ from the agents.

SUPERFLUOUS HAIR.

A GENUINE REMEDY

BY DANNEBROG.

Hundreds of so-called remedies for Superfluous Hairs have been offered to afflicted women, but only DANNEBROG, a Danish Remedy, has stood the test of time, and it is remarkable also how many cases previously treated by electrical methods come to the Dannebrog Institute, and are there successfully attended to by Madame Frokjar, of the Royal Massage College, Copenhagen, and her staff of skilled operators. Success is shown in each case before payment on easy terms is arranged. Madame Frokjar places all her experience at the service of her clients, and holds herself fortunate that in nine years of testing her remedy she has relieved hundreds of women of annoying and disfiguring hairs. Dannebrog is now operating in the principal cities of the Commonwealth, and talented women who have tested it state that there is no better remedy, or one more pleasant, and at the same time destructive in its effects. Country clients treated by post. Only one fee.

WOMEN PRAISE DANNEBROG.

FAT FOLKS HATE WINTER.

No season of the year is so thoroughly distasteful to the abnormally fat women as winter, necessitating as it does the donning of much thick, warm, woollen clothing, which must add immensely to her already too generous proportions, and correspondingly add to the humiliation and annoyance which her abnormally fat figure already causes her.

point a pleasant and certain way out of the difficulty. Just one of these pleasant little tablets taken before each meal will quickly restore the stoutest woman to normal size, and enable her, without looking or feeling more ridiculous than she already does, to dress fashionably and seasonably, and with warmth and comfort. She can eat all she wants, need not take any more exercise than she usually has done, and still, under their beneficial action, fat will quickly disappear, and in its place will come that long-lost grace and youthful slenderness.

"FORMETTES" ENSURE HEALTH.

Not only do "Formettes" permanently restore the figure to its one-time girlish slenderness, but as well they are an unfailing remedy for those many distressing corpulency complaints, such as infeebled circulation and other heart troubles, difficulty of breathing, indigestion, dyspepsia, sick headache, heartburn, which excessively fat folks have come to regard as an inevitable result of their abnormal size. All these, and many other obesity ills are banished for ever by "Formettes," and in an incredibly short time the patient looks and feels years younger.

THE NEEDS OF THE COMPLEXION.

Many women give their skin not what it needs, but what they think they like, and the consequence invariably is that the machinery of the complexion breaks down, and needs cure rather than care.

There is a series of facial preparations, known by the general name of "VALAZE," each serving a particular purpose, none of them a cure-all, put out under the hall-mark of Madame Helena Rubinstein, whose high reputation speaks for itself, who vouches for their purity and value.

Every woman's complexion needs Valaze Skin Food, to feed, nourish, cleanse, and purify the skin, to remove and prevent such blemishes as pimples, blotches, wrinkles, freckles, tan, sallowness, and muddiness. Valaze perfects the good skin, purifies the bad skin, and beautifies all skins, 3/6, 6/6, and 6d postage.

Madam Rubinstein has Valaze Freckle Paste, which is of extra strength, for dark and obstinate freckles. It is a sure remedy. 5/3.

Every woman's complexion needs protection when out of doors. For this purpose the Novena Sun-proof Creme is invaluable. It shields the skin from the sun and wind, prevents the appearance of freckles, sunburn, tan, and sallowness, and imparts to the skin a cool, fresh, clear appearance. In jars, 2/ and 3/6.

Powder, of course, very few women can do without. Madame Rubinstein has a powder for a greasy skin, and one for a dry. Valaze Powder is delightfully soothing and cooling, and is especially adapted for a greasy skin, while the Novena Poudre is for a dry skin. Each in three tints, and 2/ and 3/ a box.

Valaze Complexion Soap is perfect for toilet use. It soothes, cleanses, and softens the skin, and lasts several months. 2/2, posted.

Of course, Madame Rubinstein has other preparations, remedies for every ill of the complexion, and at the Valaze Institute the world-renowned methods of Face Treatment are carried out, methods that have spread her fame through every quarter of the globe.

"Beauty in the Making" is sent to any address, if 3d is sent for postage. It tells you all about complexion treatment.

All Valaze preparations are obtainable from Helena Rubinstein Propy., Ltd., Valaze Institute, Dept. D, 158 Pitt-street, Sydney, opp. The Strand, and 274 Collins-street, Melbourne.

'Tis very pleasant to know that one's footwear is smart and stylish; 'tis very agreeable to be sure that one's feet are assured against the vagaries of our most mixed weather, but how to know and to FEEL, that one's BOOTS FIT.

THE BOOT OR SHOE that is squeezing or drawing, however smart it may be, is persistently Spoiling the Looks and Irritating the Temper of the unfortunate wearer.

PITT-STREET HORDERNS'
